Executive Summary

Hong Kong's security landscape from October 30 to November 6, 2026, was primarily shaped by the continued stringent enforcement of national security legislation and significant developments in cybersecurity. The most prominent event was the sentencing of pro-democracy activist Joshua Wong to an additional 10 years in prison for "collusion with foreign forces," drawing strong international condemnation. Concurrently, Hong Kong authorities introduced a new national security law bill with broader scope and harsher penalties, raising further concerns about eroding freedoms. In the digital realm, the city successfully concluded a major cybersecurity drill, yet faced the local impact of a global "Black October" cyberattack wave, highlighting persistent digital threats. These events underscore a tightening security environment, characterized by diminished political dissent and an increased focus on both internal and cyber defense.

Key Security Developments

- Prominent Activist Joshua Wong Sentenced to 10 Years

On November 5, 2026, Hong Kong's High Court sentenced prominent pro-democracy activist Joshua Wong to an additional 10 years in prison for "conspiracy to collude with foreign forces to endanger national security." This marks his second conviction under the Beijing-imposed National Security Law (NSL), with the judge stating the offense was of a "grave nature" and warranted a severe penalty to deter similar acts. The sentencing was widely condemned by the United States, the United Kingdom, the European Union, and human rights organizations, who called for his immediate release.

- New National Security Law Bill Introduced

Hong Kong published a draft of a new national security law bill, which some legal experts believe broadens the scope of sedition and state secrets while imposing tougher penalties for related crimes. The European Union expressed "grave concerns" regarding the bill's far-reaching provisions on "external interference" and its extra-territorial reach. This development signifies a further tightening of the legal framework to safeguard national security in the Special Administrative Region.

- Arrest for Seditious Publication

On November 4, 2026, the National Security Department of the Hong Kong Police Force arrested a 34-year-old local man in Mong Kok on suspicion of contravening

Section 24 of the Safeguarding National Security Ordinance, specifically for importing a publication with a seditious intention. This incident demonstrates the ongoing enforcement of national security legislation against perceived acts of sedition.

- Hong Kong Cybersecurity Attack and Defence Drill 2026 Concludes

The Hong Kong Cybersecurity Attack and Defence Drill 2026, spearheaded by the Digital Policy Office (DPO), successfully concluded on October 31, 2026, after three days of simulated cyber threat scenarios. The drill involved 51 defending teams from 28 government departments, 23 public organizations, and for the first time, private enterprises, alongside 23 attacking teams from Hong Kong and Mainland cybersecurity professional organizations. This initiative aimed to enhance Hong Kong's overall cybersecurity protection and resilience.

- Impact of "Black October" Global Cyberattacks

Hong Kong was affected by a wave of severe cyberattacks dubbed "Black October," which struck global institutions in late October 2026, causing catastrophic financial losses in the cryptocurrency sector and exposing personal information worldwide. Hong Kong's flag carrier, Cathay Pacific, revealed a cybersecurity breach at an external supplier that compromised approximately 53,000 flight booking records. This highlights the vulnerability of local entities to large-scale international cyber campaigns.

- Increased Cybersecurity Incidents in Q3 2026

According to HKCERT, Hong Kong recorded 4,404 security incidents in Q3 2026, marking an approximately 15% increase compared to the same period in 2025. Phishing remained the predominant threat, accounting for about 61% of all incidents, with social media and instant messaging applications being the most frequent targets. This trend indicates a persistent and escalating cybersecurity threat landscape in the city.

- Introduction of AI Facial Recognition by Police

The Hong Kong Police Force announced that it will introduce AI facial recognition to its Smart View CCTV system in November 2026. This technology aims to enhance crime detection and expedite the search for missing persons, particularly high-risk elderly individuals with dementia. The Smart View CCTV scheme has already assisted in solving 2,192 criminal cases and arresting 2,831 people as of October 31.

- PLA Firing Practice Announced for November

The Hong Kong government announced that firing practice would take place at two military sites, the San Wai/Tai Ling Firing Range and the Tsing Shan Firing Range, during November 2026. Red flags or lamps will be hoisted in the firing areas, and the public is advised not to enter for safety. This indicates routine military activity by the People's Liberation Army (PLA) garrison in Hong Kong.

• Hong Kong Officials Apologize for Deadly Tai Po Fire

On October 29, 2026, Hong Kong's Chief Executive John Lee and other officials, including Secretary for Security Chris Tang Ping-keung, issued a formal apology for "decades of failure" by government bodies that contributed to a deadly fire at Wang Fuk Court in Tai Po in November 2025, which killed 168 people. However, survivors rejected the apology as insincere, questioning why only one minister resigned.

• China's Revised National Defence Mobilisation Law Takes Effect

Effective October 1, 2026, China introduced a new version of its National Defence Mobilisation Law, the first major revision since 2010. This law establishes more modern mechanisms for mobilizing the economy, infrastructure, technology, and human resources for defense in the event of a crisis or war, expanding the state's ability to convert civilian capacity into military capability. While not directly impacting Hong Kong's internal defense, it underscores Beijing's broader strategic posture.

Geopolitical Impact and Regional Dynamics

Hong Kong's recent security developments continue to solidify its integration into mainland China's governance and security framework, significantly impacting regional stability and relations with major global powers. The harsh sentencing of Joshua Wong and the introduction of a new national security bill reinforce the perception that political freedoms in Hong Kong are diminishing, aligning the city more closely with Beijing's authoritarian model. This trajectory has led to continued diplomatic friction, with the United States and the United Kingdom criticizing the erosion of autonomy and human rights, while China firmly rejects such statements as interference in its internal affairs. The US has previously revoked elements of Hong Kong's special status and imposed sanctions, indicating a sustained policy of pressure.

The European Union has also voiced "grave concerns" over Hong Kong's new security legislation, reflecting a broader European unease with China's actions in the city. Despite these concerns, EU-China trade consultations in Beijing during this period highlight the complex economic interdependence, with discussions focusing on market access, export controls, and tariffs. This suggests a dual approach from the EU, balancing human rights advocacy with the imperative of maintaining economic ties. The ongoing cybersecurity threats, exemplified by the "Black October" attacks affecting Hong Kong entities, underscore a shared global vulnerability that could potentially foster limited cooperation on digital security, even amidst geopolitical tensions.

China's broader strategic landscape is also shaped by its revised National Defence Mobilisation Law, which came into effect on October 1, 2026. This law, expanding Beijing's ability to harness civilian resources for military purposes, signals China's preparedness for potential prolonged conflicts and its "Military-Civil Fusion" strategy. While not directly about Hong Kong, it frames the city within a larger national security narrative, where its stability and control are paramount to Beijing's overall strategic interests. The increasing assertiveness of China, coupled with the diminishing autonomy of Hong Kong, contributes to a more polarized strategic environment in the Indo-Pacific, influencing alliances and defense postures across the region.

Military and Defense Analysis

Hong Kong's military and defense posture remains primarily under the direct control of the People's Liberation Army (PLA) garrison, reflecting its status as a Special Administrative Region of China. During this reporting period, routine military activities included the announcement of firing practice at the San Wai/Tai Ling Firing Range and the Tsing Shan Firing Range in November 2026. These exercises are standard for maintaining operational readiness. The presence of a Z-20K medium-lift utility helicopter at Shek Kong Barracks in 2026 further indicates the modernization and capability development of the PLA garrison, aligning with China's broader military modernization programs.

Defense spending trends and capability developments in Hong Kong are not independently reported but are integrated into China's national defense budget and strategic planning. The overarching context is China's revised National Defence Mobilisation Law, which became effective on October 1, 2026. This law significantly expands the state's power to mobilize civilian economic, technological, and human resources for defense in times of crisis. While Hong Kong maintains its own police force and internal security apparatus, the ultimate defense and national security responsibilities rest with Beijing, and the new mobilization law provides a legal framework for potentially integrating Hong Kong's resources into a national defense effort if deemed necessary by the central government. This underscores a force posture where the PLA garrison serves as a visible symbol of sovereignty and a direct extension of China's military might, with internal security increasingly managed through robust national security legislation and law enforcement.

Outlook and Forecast

Short-term trends (1-3 months): In the immediate future, Hong Kong is likely to experience a continued tightening of its security environment. The recent sentencing of Joshua Wong and the introduction of a new national security bill signal Beijing's unwavering commitment to suppressing dissent and consolidating control. We can anticipate further arrests and prosecutions under the National Security Law and the new Safeguarding National Security Ordinance, particularly targeting individuals or groups perceived as colluding with foreign forces or engaging in seditious activities. Small-scale acts of dissent will likely continue, met with swift and decisive police action. Cybersecurity will remain a high priority, with ongoing efforts to enhance defense mechanisms through drills and the implementation of advanced technologies like AI facial recognition, while also grappling with the fallout from global cyber threats.

Critical flashpoints and risk areas: The primary flashpoint remains the erosion of civil liberties and political autonomy under the national security framework. Any significant public expression of dissent, however minor, could escalate into further arrests and international condemnation, exacerbating diplomatic tensions with Western powers. The new national security law bill itself, once fully enacted, could introduce new areas of legal risk for individuals and businesses, particularly concerning definitions of state secrets and external interference. Cybersecurity incidents, especially those with links to state-sponsored actors or critical infrastructure, pose a significant risk, potentially disrupting financial services or public utilities. The ongoing US-China and EU-China geopolitical rivalry will continue to cast a shadow over Hong Kong, with the city often becoming a focal point for criticism and sanctions, which could impact its economic stability and international standing.

Indicators to monitor: Key indicators to monitor include the pace and scope of prosecutions under national security laws, particularly any cases involving foreign nationals or businesses. Observe the finalization and implementation details of the new national security law bill and its practical impact on daily life and business operations. Track cybersecurity incident reports and the effectiveness of Hong Kong's digital defenses against evolving threats. Monitor diplomatic statements and actions from the US, UK, and EU regarding Hong Kong, including any new sanctions or policy changes. Finally, observe China's broader geopolitical posture and any shifts in its rhetoric or actions concerning Hong Kong's role within the "One Country, Two Systems" framework, especially in the context of the recently revised National Defence Mobilisation Law.

Strategic recommendations: For international businesses and organizations operating in Hong Kong, it is crucial to conduct thorough legal and compliance reviews to understand the implications of the existing and new national security laws, particularly concerning data handling, state secrets, and interactions with foreign entities. Strengthen cybersecurity defenses and implement robust incident response plans, given the elevated threat landscape. Diplomatic entities should continue to advocate for human rights and the rule of law in Hong Kong through multilateral channels, while also seeking avenues for dialogue with Beijing on areas of mutual interest, such as global cybersecurity. For Hong Kong authorities, fostering greater transparency in legal processes and addressing public concerns regarding the application of national security laws could help mitigate international criticism and maintain some semblance of its international financial hub status.

- Privacy chief backs tighter land-search rules (2026-11-06 04:01)

Privacy commissioner Ada Chung expressed support on Friday for government moves to tighten land record search arrangements, while raising concerns that misuse of land registry data may be getting worse. Her comments come as the government tabled eight pieces of subsidiary legislation in the Legislative Council for the changes. Under the new arrangements, land searches must meet one of nine specified purposes. Speaking on RTHK, Chung said the purposes – which could be part of property deals and valuations – had to be concrete and clear so searchers would stick to declarations of their intended use of the data and not stray into potentially misusing it. She said her office had received 20 complaints in five years about alleged misuse of land registry data, which included instances where owners were doxxed on social media, and the sending of promotional mail. Six complaints came this year alone, Chung pointed out. "We've seen cases where land registry data was used for ... other purposes such as cyberbullying and doxxing. Not a single case of that kind should happen, and we've already had six this year, so the trend is worsening," she said. Chung said the new rules on land searches make the system clearer, better protect owners' privacy, and help people to avoid breaking the law. She noted that the Personal Data (Privacy) Ordinance's exemption for journalistic activities also requires a public-interest basis, matching the purpose of the new arrangements. Edited by Aaron Tam

The broadcaster said any representation suggesting otherwise is unauthorised and does not reflect the position of RTHK. It said members of the public who suspect fraud or become aware of any potentially unlawful activities are advised to report the matter to police immediately and seek appropriate assistance. - HK can help 'bend the curve' on rising drug costs: FS (2026-11-06 03:41)

Financial Secretary Paul Chan on Friday said Hong Kong can play a key role in reversing the rising cost of bringing new medicines to patients, as he opened the third International Bio-Computing Innovation Summit in the SAR. In his opening speech, Chan drew on two contrasting "laws" to frame the challenge facing the life sciences industry. Moore's Law describes how the cost of computing power has gone down – while medicine is going down the opposite path. For some seven decades, he said, the cost of bringing a new drug to patients roughly doubled every nine years, a phenomenon known as Eroom's Law. "Behind that risingcurve are promising treatments that were never able to secure funding, and patients waiting forbetter medical options," Chan said. "Eroom's Law describes the past. It needs not dictate thefuture." Chan identified three forces that could help "bend the curve", and said Hong Kongcould contribute to each. The first is the power of computing to transform biological research,he said, as gene sequencing becomes cheaper and AI allows scientists not only to read the codeof life, but to model and "write" it – designing molecules, antibodies and enzymes rather thanrelying on laboratory trial and error. He noted that a drug discovered by generative AI enteredphase three clinical trials this year, and that the company behind it is listed in Hong Kong.Regulators, he added, are beginning to accept evidence from computer models and alternativesto animal testing. The second force, Chan said, is the changing geography of drug innovation. "China now is no longer just a market for global pharmaceutical companies. It has become anindispensable part of their global research and development network," he said, noting thatoverseas licensing deals for innovative drugs from China reached nearly US$140 billion in totalvalue last year, almost 10 times the level in 2021. The third force is capital – "not just how muchwe invest, but how well we put it to work," he said. He highlighted the power of the city's capitalmarkets, noting Hong Kong has become the world's second-largest fundraising centre forbiotechnology since listing reforms for pre-revenue biotech firms in 2018. Chan said HongKong's role is increasingly clear: to bring models, patients, markets and capital together, andreduce the time and cost of bringing new treatments to market. He pointed to theestablishment of the Hong Kong Centre for Medical Products Regulation, efforts in Hetao tomake it easier for data and biosamples to move across the boundary, the new Life and HealthTechnology Research Institute, and a third medical school being built with HKUST. "If this is thedecade in which we finally bend that curve, let Hong Kong play a part in making it happen," hesaid. Edited by Aaron Tam

- GBA offers limitless opportunities for laywers: Lam (2026-11-06 03:11)

Secretary for Justice Paul Lam has called on legal practitioners from the two SARs to obtain Greater Bay Area (GBA) practice qualifications to tap into the area's limitless opportunities. The GBA lawyers’ scheme – which allows those qualified to practice in nine mainland cities – was regularised in September after a six-year pilot run. Speaking at the Second Guangdong-Hong Kong-Macao Greater Bay Area Lawyers Forum that was held during the Legal Week on Friday, Lam said more than 700 legal practitioners from Hong Kong and Macao have so far obtained the qualification. “The Greater Bay Area has the characteristic of ‘one country, two systems and three jurisdictions’," he said. "Greater Bay Area lawyers with dual practice qualifications will serve as pioneers." Lam noted that the GBA is among the areas with the highest degree of openness and strongest economic vitality in the country. Hong Kong, he said, will step up the closer interface of rules and laws on the safeguards of the rule of law in the GBA, as laid out in its inaugural five-year plan. With more than 900 participants attending the event at the Convention and Exhibition Centre in Wan Chai in-person or online, the minister urged them to take the chance to understand the latest GBA developments, grasp new opportunities and expand into new fields. Edited by Aaron Tam

• Police to deploy facial recognition on CCTV networks (2026-11-06 00:51)

Police said facial recognition technology will be rolled out across its CCTV network this month to assist in criminal searches and locate high-risk missing persons, with some of the captured data stored for up to 180 days. Officers said they have so far installed around 10,000 cameras under the SmartView initiative, alongside connections to a further 10,000 from other government departments and public organisations. Covered locations include, among others, Kai Tak Sports Park, Hong Kong International Airport, cross-harbour tunnels, MTR stations and public housing estates. Superintendent Raymond Cheng said the facial recognition feature can be activated anytime on all police cameras, as well as third-party feeds integrated into the SmartView system. However, he explained that the feature will only be triggered during active criminal searches or to locate high-risk missing persons, to save resources. "For the 24 hours analysis, not all of them can be used at the same time because of the resources," Cheng said. "But if we need to use, we can spend the resources on particular CCTV, and of course it can be used around the clock." In separate pilot tests, police said the facial recognition technology has already helped them arrest a robbery suspect and locate an elderly man with dementia within 1.5 hours of being reported missing. Officers said CCTV footage will only be kept for a maximum of 31 days. However, photos of individuals captured by the facial recognition technology, along with metadata such as location, date, time, and facial characteristics, will be retained for 180 days. Meanwhile, police revealed that at least four shopping malls have agreed to connect their CCTV feeds to the police network. RTHK understands these include Tuen Mun Town Plaza, Olympian City, Kwai Chung Shopping Centre, and Sierra Life in Fanling. Cheng said malls that have installed CCTV cameras are required by law to display signs warning people that recording is in progress. However, the superindendent noted the Department of Justice (DOJ) advised that it should be voluntary for malls to disclose whether their CCTV feeds are connected to the police network. "We will follow the advice from the DOJ to encourage shopping malls or the organisations to post our notice to announce that our system is connected with their CCTV," Cheng added. Police have been installing cameras in public places with high crime rates and heavy pedestrian flow since 2024, aiming to reach a target of 60,000 cameras by 2028 to cover the entire city. An additional 6,500 cameras will be installed in the developing Northern Metropolis after 2028, bringing the total number of public surveillance cameras to around 66,500 in 2031. Since the project began, the force said its CCTV network has helped solve nearly 2,200 criminal cases, including murder, robbery, and arson, leading to more than 2,800 arrests. Edited by Aaron Tam

• Tang condemns external smearing over Wong sentence (2026-11-05 10:13)

Secretary for Security Chris Tang strongly condemned on Thursday attacks by external forces following the sentencing of former activist Joshua Wong, who was imprisoned for 10 years after pleading guilty to conspiring with foreign countries or external elements to endanger national security. Tang said the court, in passing sentence on Wong, found that he, Nathan Law, who has absconded, and others had continued to collude with foreign officials and outlets in calling for sanctions and hostile measures against the nation, Hong Kong and their officials. He reiterated that Wong was sentenced under fair and open judicial proceedings, showing that the SAR abides by the rule of law. "Those launching attacks against us are exactly the same external forces that Wong and Law attempted to collude... They must be strongly condemned, and Hong Kong citizens must recognise and acknowledge that clearly," Tang said. Speaking outside the High Court earlier on Thursday, Steve Li, chief superintendent of the police's national security department, said Wong had taken part in social movements from a young age and committed various offences in adulthood. Li said he hoped Wong would reflect on his wrongdoings. "I sincerely hope that for the rest of his time in prison, apart from reflecting on the wrongdoings he has done to the country and to the Hong Kong SAR, he must seize the opportunity to learn how to respect the law and properly understand his own country," he said. • DOJ launches HK$20,000 lawtech funding scheme (2026-11-05 09:48)

The Department of Justice has launched a funding scheme aimed at helping small and medium-sized law firms and newly qualified barristers adopt legal technology. The Funding Scheme for LawTech Solution Subscription, managed by the Law Society of Hong Kong and the Hong Kong Bar Association, will provide eligible applicants with up to HK$20,000 for a one-year subscription to designated legal technology services. The list covers services from 14 local, mainland and overseas providers, spanning legal research, document drafting, workflow management and hearing support. Eligible applicants are sole practitioners, Hong Kong law firms with five or fewer partners, and barristers with no more than seven years of call. Speaking to reporters at Hong Kong Legal Week on Thursday, Deputy Secretary for Justice Horace Cheung said the pilot scheme would ease the financial burden on applicants seeking to improve their ability to adopt lawtech services. "We hope that we can use such kind of financial incentive to encourage them to use the lawtech tools in their practice and we believe that after this pilot scheme, they will know how good the legal tool can help them in their practice," he said. "I would say that is only the beginning. Certainly we will monitor the progress of the pilot scheme and see what we can do further for the legal sector in the years ahead." Cheung also said the Department of Justice would release guidance notes on the application of technology in legal practice. The notes, he said, are intended to give the legal profession principles to consider and practical advice on adopting legal technology, helping practitioners guard against potential risks while remaining mindful of their ongoing professional responsibilities. Meanwhile, José-Antonio Maurellet, chairman of the Hong Kong Bar Association, said the scheme was timely and far-sighted and would benefit about 500 members. He believes it would encourage younger members to invest more time and resources in training and to stay competitive. Roden Tong,president of the Law Society of Hong Kong, for his part, said the Department of Justice hadintroduced the scheme for a second time, adding that the support helped the legal professionmake better use of technology and improve efficiency. The application deadline is January 29.Edited by Tony Sabine

- HK 'to widen trade reach to help nation go global' (2026-11-05 08:29)

Chief Executive John Lee on Thursday said Hong Kong would continue to expand its international trade network to better contribute to the country's overall development. Speaking at the Hong Kong sub-forum of the Hongqiao International Economic Forum in Shanghai, he noted the event was the first major conference held by the SAR since the unveiling of its first-ever five-year plan in September. The conference, Lee said, allowed experts and industry leaders from both the mainland and Hong Kong to gather and explore how the city could leverage its unique position under "One Country, Two Systems" and integrate into national development. One key focus area is trade, he said. “Hong Kong has become the fifth-largest merchandise trading entity in the world, having signed free-trade agreements with 21 economies and investment agreements with 34 economies," Lee said. "The SAR government will continue to expand its international economic and trade network to play a greater role in the country’s high-standard opening up." The world, Lee pointed out, is experiencing a once-in-a-century transformation, which is happening alongside a global supply chain restructuring and rapid technological advancement. He stressed that Hong Kong must proactively plan for its future and implement a forward-looking strategic plan with a calm and measured approach. Another key focus area, Lee said, is finance. Describing it as Hong Kong’s fundamental and greatest area of strength, he stressed that the SAR must consolidate its role as an international financial centre. He added that Hong Kong would strengthen its position as the world's largest offshore renminbi hub to expand the global use of the currency and actively build a commodity and gold trading ecosystem. Lee also noted that Hong Kong would proactively align with national scientific research and industrial strategies, accelerate its investment in science and technology, and help mainland enterprises expand overseas through its GoGlobal Task Force. Later, Lee toured various booths hosted by Hong Kong enterprises and institutions taking part in the China International Import Expo, which is being held concurrently with the forum. He listened to a briefing by Hong Kong Polytechnic University representatives, and at one booth, tasted traditional sweetheart cakes — also known as wife cakes. A representative told the chief executive that the pastries have been a huge hit at high-speed rail stations on the mainland, adding that they have revamped their packaging to feature Hong Kong elements on the design, such as trams, to appeal to younger generations. Lee also visited a craft beer booth to try a brew infused with the flavour of salty-lemon 7Up — an iconic Hong Kong cha chaan teng drink that mixes 7Up with salted preserved lemon. A representative at the booth told him that Hong Kong enjoys a major advantage in sourcing raw ingredients thanks to being a highly international city. Lee said Hong Kong could host its own beer festival in the future, encouraging the business to keep growing and build itself into a premier local brand for such events. Frederick Ma, chairman of the Hong Kong Trade Development Council, said thecouncil led a delegation of more than 70 Hong Kong enterprises at this year's expo, with recordsset in both the number of participating exhibitors and the amount of exhibition space used._____ Last updated: 2026-11-05 HKT 17:10 Edited by Tony Sabine

• Wong undermined HK's prosperity and stability: CE (2026-11-05 08:09)

Chief Executive John Lee on Thursday said Joshua Wong was one of the “primary culprits responsible for undermining Hong Kong’s prosperity and stability” after he was jailed for 10 years for conspiracy to collude with foreign countries or external elements to endanger national security. In a statement, Lee said Wong has repeatedly broken the law over the years, adding that before the implementation of the National Security Law (NSL) Wong, Nathan Law and others persistently colluded with foreign countries and tried to get them to impose sanctions against China and the SAR. Lee went on to say that after the NSL took effect, Wong, Law and their accomplices “showed no repentance and continued to act as agents of foreign countries and external forces, wantonly persisting in conspiring to collude with foreign countries or external forces to endanger national security, in a vain attempt to exert pressure on the Central Authorities and the HKSAR Government through external forces, betraying Hong Kong while remaining incorrigible". Meanwhile, a government spokesman said Wong's sentence " completely shattered the illusion of individuals endangering national security that they could escape liability under the guise of so-called 'international battlefront' or 'international advocacy', and demonstrated to the international community the HKSAR's firm determination to safeguard national security". • Joshua Wong jailed 10 years for foreign collusion (2026-11-05 04:13)

Former activist Joshua Wong was on Thursday jailed for 10 years after pleading guilty to conspiracy to collude with foreign countries or external elements to endanger national security. High Court Judge William Tam found the offence was of a “grave nature” under the National Security Law. The court said Wong and his affiliates, including Nathan Law, persisted after the NSL took effect in calling for foreign sanctions, blockade or other hostile measures against the People's Republic of China, the Hong Kong SAR and their officials. They deliberately adapted roles so overseas allies made blatant calls for such sanctions, while Wong, remaining in Hong Kong, published and bolstered the calls. Judge Tam took a starting point of 13 years, then cut three years for the guilty plea and mitigation, leaving 10 years – the statutory minimum for a grave offence. Two months and two days of the new term will run concurrently with the sentence Wong is already serving for another subversion case. Speaking to reporters outsidethe High Court, Steve Li, Chief Superintendent of the police's National Security Department, saidthat Wong took part in social movements from a young age and committed various offences asan adult. Li said he hopes Wong will reflect on his wrongdoings. "I sincerely hope that for therest of his time in prison, apart from reflecting on the wrongdoings he has done to the countryand to the Hong Kong SAR, he must seize the opportunity to learn how to respect the law andproperly understand his own country," he said. - HK 'is largest cross-boundary wealth management hub' (2026-11-05 03:59)

Financial Secretary Paul Chan on Thursday said Hong Kong’s wealth management sector is growing strongly and is well positioned to capture a fair share of business emanating from shifting global affluence. In a keynote speech at the Wealth Management Summit, he pointed to a survey in July by the Securities and Futures Commission that showed assets under management jumped 20 percent to more than HK$42 trillion. The city, Chan said, is now the largest cross-boundary wealth management centre in the world. A survey by summit organiser Private Wealth Management Association offered a similarly encouraging picture, as it found 77 percent of member firms reported stronger demand to open accounts or book client assets in Hong Kong and that 94 percent were moderately or highly optimistic about the city's prospects over the next five years. Chan said sentiment at this week’s Global Financial Leaders’ Investment Summit, which drew some 280 international leaders from the sector, including around 120 chairmen or chief executives, was "decidedly positive", with some planning to increase investment and headcount in the city. International capital was showing fresh confidence in Hong Kong, he said, with it being reinforced by policy measures to boost private wealth management. "Our tax concession for family-owned investment vehicles is now well established and Hong Kong is home to over 3,300 single-family offices, up 25 percent in just two years," he said at the summit. "The New Capital Investment Entrant Scheme has received some 4,300 applications, representing an expected investment of HK$150 billion, and we have introduced legislation to further enhance the preferential tax regimes for funds, single-family offices and carry interest, which we aim to pass by the end of this year." Chan said higher rates and uncertainty were redrawing the map for capital flows, with cash earning a return again and investors diversifying across markets and currencies. Hong Kong is a clear beneficiary, he said, noting that deposits rose 7.7 percent to HK$20.9 trillion in the first nine months of this year. Initial public offerings raised, Chan pointed out, a record HK$388 billion and capital is arriving from the United States and Europe, as well as the mainland, Southeast Asia, Central Asia and the Middle East. He also pointed to technology and AI as a growing source of wealth: tech is now the largest source of wealth among the world's richest tycoons, and mainland billionaire fortunes rose over 20 percent to US$1.8 trillion last year. Hong Kong is capturing it at source – 116 A- and H-share listings in the first three quarters accounted for about 70 percent of funds raised, over half of which were in AI, semiconductors and robotics, with some 500 applications in the pipeline. Chief Executive John Lee arrived in Shanghai on Wednesday afternoon after visiting Beijing, where he attended the opening ceremony of the 29th Beijing Hong Kong Economic Cooperation Symposium. In a Facebook post, Lee thanked representatives from the Ministry of Commerce, Beijing's Liaison Office in the SAR, and the Shanghai Municipal People's Government, as well as colleagues from the Hong Kong Economic and Trade Office in Shanghai for meeting him at the airport. Lee will attend the opening ceremony of the ninth China International Import Expo (CIIE) on Thursday. "This year's CIIE has attracted participants from 162 countries, regions, and international organisations, with a total exhibition area exceeding 440,000 square metres," the post read. The CE will also attend the Hongqiao International Economic Forum. "There, I will highlight how Hong Kong is leveraging its unique strengths to integrate into and serve the nation's overall development, showcasing our achievements and opportunities." Lee said Shanghai and Hong Kong share deep historical ties, with the SAR pushing ahead plans to establish a "sister port" relationship with Shanghai within this year. He added that a pilot project for the mutual exchange of trade data was launched last month and is expected to benefit local small and medium-sized enterprises that export goods from the mainland. Lee is also expected to meet with Shanghai officials to deepen cooperation before returning to Hong Kong on Friday. Edited by Aaron Tam

- RTHK signs MoU with Tianjin Haihe Media Group (2026-11-04 13:00)

Radio Television Hong Kong (RTHK) has signed a Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) with Tianjin Haihe Media Group, in a bid to boost bilateral collaboration in areas such as talent exchange and events. The MoU was signed during a four-day trip by Director of Broadcasting Angelina Kwan to the mainland, which ended on Wednesday. During the trip, Kwan, as well as participants of RTHK's national studies programme, called on the Hong Kong and Macao Affairs Office of the State Council, and met Deputy Director Zhang Dongmei. Kwan also visited the National Radio and Television Administration and the Beijing Radio and Television Station to explore opportunities for strengthening exchange and co-operation. On Tuesday, Kwan signed an MoU with Tianjin Haihe Media Group President Ma Bo. The two sides agreed to establish a framework for bilateral collaboration spanning programme resources, talent exchanges, co-operation on platform and copyright licensing, as well as on-ground events. RTHK said the the partnership will facilitate the distribution of its content to the Beijing-Tianjin-Hebei region, while enabling Tianjin Haihe Media Group's productions to reach international audiences through RTHK's platforms. RTHK has signed MoUs with eight mainland and overseas media organisations so far this year. "By building a growing network of broadcaster partnerships and deepening collaboration on an ongoing basis, RTHK is giving concrete expression to its strategic commitment to leveraging Hong Kong's unique role as a connector between the Chinese mainland and the wider world, thereby enhancing Hong Kong's international communication capacity and sharing the stories of the nation and Hong Kong on the global stage," a statement read. - ICAC charges former HKEX vice president (2026-11-04 08:21)

A former vice president of the Hong Kong Exchanges and Clearing (HKEX) was charged by the ICAC on Wednesday for allegedly obtaining dishonest access to the HKEX’s internal information system. The system contained confidential information involving listed companies, according to the anti-graft agency. Geoffrey Tong, 39, and his mother, Leung Yiu-chun, 68, jointly face one count of obtaining access to computer with a view to dishonest gain for himself or another under the Crimes Ordinance. The charge alleges that the two defendants obtained access to the HKEX’s internal information system with a view to dishonest gain between February 2018 and April 2023. The ICAC investigation revealed that Tong allegedly accessed confidential information of listed companies unrelated to his duties on multiple occasions. “Subsequently, the investment account of his mother, Leung, engaged in share transactions of the relevant listed companies, yielding profits exceeding HK$500,000,” the ICAC said in a statement. The case was brought to the Eastern Magistrates’ Courts for mention on Wednesday. The ICAC said it would not rule out further prosecution as the investigation continues. Edited by Edmond Fong

- 'Reservation effective in cutting Po Pin Chau visits' (2026-11-04 05:30)

Secretary for Environment and Ecology Tse Chin-wan on Wednesday said the government was reviewing the trial results of the real-name reservation system for the Po Pin Chau trail in Sai Kung East Country Park. Speaking to lawmakers at the Legislative Council, Tse said authorities were looking at areas for further improvement and whether a fee could be imposed. Tse noted that the reservation system had effectively controlled visitor numbers on peak days compared to the past. He said the Po Pin Chau section received an average of 2,000 visitors per day during the Chinese New Year and Labour Day Golden Week holidays – before the reservation system was introduced, while the number was kept to around 950 during the National Day Golden Week with the reservation requirement. The highest visitor flow recorded at the Po Pin Chau viewing platform was also cut by more than 30 percent compared to the past, he added. “Visitors mainly arrived in the morning. As the reservation system effectively kept the number of visitors within 500 per time slot, visitor flow on the trail was dispersed in an orderly manner, and visitors were able to tour in a more comfortable and safe environment without overcrowding,” he said. “Implementation experience shows that by effectively controlling the visitor numbers and diverting visitor flow, the reservation system not only reduced the wear and tear caused by visitors to the natural environment but also significantly improved the overall visitor experience.” He added that the reservation system operated well, with most visitors satisfied with the arrangement. The minister also said the government could collaborate with the tourism sector to launch eco-tours to further develop ecotourism products. He said part of the 2,000 daily quota of Po Pin Chau trail could be reserved for tour groups. Edited by

- 'World unis to step up collaboration over NM' (2026-11-04 05:18)

Leaders from universities around the world attending a conference in Hong Kong on Wednesday said they believe the Northern Metropolis project will foster closer collaboration among institutions. On the sidelines of the World Class University Presidents Forum, Mark Scott, vice chancellor and president of the University of Sydney, recognised Hong Kong's leading position in education, which has five institutions ranked in the world's top 100 in the QS World University Rankings 2027. "There isn't another city in the world that is achieving so remarkably at such scale, and so we have much to learn from Hong Kong," he said. "One of the things I think we can learn is the commitment of leadership that sees investment in higher education, in research and in learning – as a key to economic growth and prosperity, and a richer and fairer society." Scott also said the University of Sydney is very excited about what the mega project has to offer. "We are very impressed by the level of financial commitment and long-term engagement from government and leadership here, and we are keen to find a way to be productive partners." Ebrahim Al Hajri, president of Khalifa University of Science and Technology in the United Arab Emirates, said the institution looks forward to playing a part in the development of the Northern Metropolis by collaborating with other institutions to "create local and global impact". "This is actually physical research without borders – connecting both sides to technology, development, research, talent cultivation," he said. "Not only that, but the translation of research into commercial opportunities to benefit society and economy at large." The Worldwide Universities Network – a leading global higher education network that comprises of 23 research-intensive universities – said the hub represents a "significant moment" for institutions to rethink global collaboration. "It's not just about the scale and concentration for Hong Kong," its executive director Dawn Freshwater said. "It's actually about a beacon of excellence globally for ways in which we might partner, collaborate and truly focus on how we are going to solve the issues now facing civilisation – and that is substantial." Fudan University president Jin Li, for his part, believes the Northern Metropolis can further help Hong Kong connect to the world. The mega hub is also crucial for the SAR to contribute to the nation's development, he added. Edited by Edmond Fong

- Yau highlights benefits of RCEP accession for HK (2026-11-04 03:21)

Secretary for Commerce and Economic Development Algernon Yau said Hong Kong's entry into the Regional Comprehensive Economic Partnership could inject fresh impetus into advancing the Free Trade Area of the Asia-Pacific (FTAAP) agenda. "We welcome the establishment of the Accession Working Group for Hong Kong in September this year, and hope that our accession could inject fresh impetus into advancing the FTAAP agenda," he said during a virtual meeting at the 37th Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (Apec) Ministerial Meeting held on Tuesday. Yau said that enhancing economic integration has been the core objective of Apec, and that one of the directions is to continue to advance the FTAAP. He called on member economies to continue to strengthen connectivity in various areas, enabling the efficient flow of goods, services, capital and people, while narrowing development gaps and creating opportunities for all sectors across the region. Yau also stressed that the multilateral trading system must remain the foundation of regional integration and international trade, highlighting the importance of enhancing co-operation to deal with the seismic changes in the trade landscape. - HK offers businesses growth and capital: FS (2026-11-04 03:04)

Financial Secretary Paul Chan said Hong Kong is well-placed to provide businesses with both growth opportunities and long-term capital. The finance chief made his remarks on Wednesday during a conversation session with investors on the second day of the Global Financial Leaders' Investment Summit in Central. Chan noted that a company needs different forms of capital at each stage of development to turn its potential into sustained growth. This, he said, is exactly where Hong Kong comes into play. “Under the 'One Country, Two Systems' framework, Hong Kong is closely connected to the Chinese mainland, while a common law legal system, free flow of capital and international networks provide a trusted and familiar environment for global investors to take part in China's enormous growth,” Chan said. “Here, we already bring together venture capital, private equity, family offices and asset managers, with deep equity and bond markets. Our task is to connect them more closely across the corporate life cycle.” He said follow-on fundraising on the Hong Kong Stock Exchange reached HK$570 billion in the first nine months of the year, showing that the city’s market continues to support companies well beyond their initial listings. Chan also said the aim is to expand allocation choices to help investors manage risks and liquidity in support of long-term value creation. Hong Kong will keep raising its market efficiency with faster approvals, streamlined processes and clearer frameworks for new financial products – all without compromising its integrity, he added. • HK's dominance in QS rankings 'not by chance' (2026-11-04 03:00)

Acting chief executive Eric Chan on Wednesday said Hong Kong would continue to stay at the forefront of education amid the latest accolades for the city's univiersities. Speaking at the World Class University Presidents Forum, he noted that higher education had always served as a cornerstone for the SAR’s success. The city is a global hub for education and talent, Chan said, noting that five local institutions took half of top 10 places in the latest QS Asia University Rankings. Three of them ranked the top five. “This is not by chance. It is the result of sustained government investment, clear policy direction and the hard work of our universities,” he said. “It reflects our commitment to excellence, openness, academic freedom and institutional autonomy.” Hong Kong, Chan said, would keep expanding its horizon and align with the nation’s development to remain in its leading position. With the three university towns at the Northern Metropolis as well as the SAR’s Study in Hong Kong brand, he said the government welcomed people from the mainland and all over the world to pursue their studies here. “Hong Kong is a bridge between the mainland and the global higher education system. We are opening doors for our youth to engage with diverse cultures and cutting-edge ideas," Chan said. " By nurturing globally-minded innovators, we plant the seeds for a more collaborative and prosperous world.” Edited by Tony Sabine

• Software update triggers HK parking meter outage (2026-11-03 14:11)

The Transport Department said a software update triggered a citywide malfunction of Hong Kong’s parking meter system on Tuesday. The department said preliminary investigations found that a software update in the morning caused a back-end software fault, which prevented the system from making a normal connection with the parking meters. It added that about 11,000 parking meters were affected across the city. The department has instructed the operator to conduct a thorough investigation into the cause of the outage and submit a detailed report. There is no evidence that the system was attacked at the moment, the department said, adding it has reported the matter to the Digital Policy Office. The operator will arrange for full refunds for all meter transactions between 8am and 12.15pm to users, and will strive to complete the approval of the refunds within this week, it added. The Transport Department received a report at around 8.20am from the operator that the parking meter system had malfunctioned, with payment functions suspended or meter displays not operating normally. The system resumed normal operations at 12.15pm. Edited by Aaron Tam

• HK recovery uneven despite high GDP: economist (2026-11-03 12:38)

A local economist said Hong Kong’s third-quarter GDP performance has lifted business sentiment, but the recovery remains uneven and will take time to broaden. Ho Lok-sang, adjunct professor with the Academy for Applied Policy Studies and Education Futures at theEducation University of Hong Kong, made the assessment as advance estimates showed HongKong’s economy grew 5.2 percent year on year in the third quarter of 2026. The clearest signof recovery, he said, was in prime office space. "Especially for the Grade A centrally locatedlocations, [the] office take-up rate is pretty impressive," he said. "Now, certainly it’srecovering." But Ho stressed that the strength is not spreading beyond that segment. "On theoutside of the Grade A and centrally located areas, office demand is still relatively weak, and thedemand for commercial properties is still relatively weak," he said. He added that a broaderrecovery will not come quickly and will likely depend on lower rents. "I think that it will takequite some time to recover, and I think recovery will also necessitate a decline in rents," Hosaid. Ho was more upbeat about the rest of the year's outlook. "Definitely the full year growth isgoing to be quite strong, and I am pretty confident that it will be over four percent or could beas much as 4.5 percent,” he said. The government's real GDP growth forecast for 2026 as awhole is 3.5 to 4.5 percent. Ho said the financial sector is performing "pretty well, extremelywell", with IPOs still at a very high level and "no sign of it ebbing". He added that exports, too,are "doing quite well". But he flagged persistent weak spots: "Demand in terms of bothconstruction demand and also the retail consumption demand and restaurant business are stilllagging behind". To support these sectors, Ho pointed to major events and tourism. "Of coursethe major events – for example concerts and Halloween and so on – it’s entirely possible toboost tourism even more," he said. "Tourism is doing pretty well this year, and we hope that thetourists can stay a bit longer and consume a bit more." Ho said that outcome depends on thebusiness sector and the government continuing to promote such major events. Meanwhile,Kenny Shui, vice president of Our Hong Kong Foundation, said the third-quarter figures pointedto strengthening momentum: goods exports rose 30.4 percent on AI and electronics demand,while services exports grew 4.3 percent on tourism and financial activity. But he said privateconsumption rose just 2.8 percent, slower than the previous quarter, showing that the strengthin retail and investment has yet to fully reach households. "Growth momentum is broadening,but the recovery still needs to be felt more widely," Shui said. With first-nine-month growth at5.1 percent, Shui expects a fourth-quarter growth of four to five percent and full-year growth ofaround five percent – above the government’s forecast, leaving room for an upward revision.He cautioned, however, that interest rates could weigh on business investment and householdspending, and with unemployment at 3.9 percent, consumption still needs job and incomesupport. In the fourth quarter, the key will be whether exports stay strong and consumptionand employment improve, Shui added. Edited by Aaron Tam

The Census and Statistics Department said the increase compared with a 4.2 percent growth in the second quarter. On a seasonally adjusted basis, GDP rose 1.9 percent quarter on quarter. - 'Joint task force to target bid-rigging early' (2026-11-03 08:48)

Secretary for Security Chris Tang on Tuesday said officers from an interdepartmental task force on combating bid-rigging in building maintenance and renovation projects would proactively look for clues to prevent such activities. Authorities have vowed to step up crackdowns on bid-rigging following the deadly Wang Fuk Court fire. Proposed measures included the criminalisation of bid-rigging in relation to these projects, enabling a dual-track approach of both criminal and civil enforcement. Authorities will also set up a joint task force that comprises officers from police, the ICAC and the Competition Commission to better coordinate law enforcement actions. Speaking to lawmakers at a meeting of the Legislative Council’s Panel on Security and Panel on Economic Development, Tang said the task force's establishment could enable early intervention. Tang said officers would adopt different tactics against bid-rigging, such as surveillance, undercover operations and the use of informants. He added that the three agencies of the task force would also attend owners’ corporation meetings to look for suspicious activities, including people who hold many proxy votes or suspected triad members engaging in harassment or intimidation. Officers would take enforcement actions when necessary, he added. “If we notice any abnormal situations at the scene that violate the law, such as intimidation and blackmail, our law enforcement colleagues on site will take immediate action,” Tang said. “Even if the situation is not serious enough to require enforcement action, if we notice signs that may point to hidden crimes, we will carry out investigations.” Tang said the task force would consider a series of factors when deciding which projects would be prioritised for investigation. “We will consider the impact of the projects, for example, projects conducted at large estates with a lot of residents and those involving a large amount of money, and if someone seeking to participate in bid-rigging has triad backgrounds – these are all factors we take into consideration.” Secretary for Commerce and Economic Development Algernon Yau, meanwhile, told lawmakers that relevant legislative amendments to combat bid-rigging would be submitted to the legislature as soon as possible. - HK eager to help build 'enterprises of tomorrow' (2026-11-03 08:10)

Hong Kong is ambitious about helping create the "enterprises of tomorrow", Financial Secretary Paul Chan said on Tuesday in amplifying the pivotal role the Northern Metropolis would play in realising this vision. That came as he told investors at the Global Financial Leaders' Investment Summit in Central about the dedication that investors can expect of Hong Kong to strengthening its contribution to innovation. “Our ambition is not only to finance businesses created elsewhere, but also to help create the enterprises of tomorrow," Chan said. "TheNorthern Metropolis is central to this effort. "It will bring universities, research facilities andtechnology enterprises closer together, linking education, technology and talent more closelywith industry." The mega development project in the northern New Territories would, Chansaid, serve as a base for closer ties with other Greater Bay Area cities, allowing Hong Kong todraw on their strengths in commercialisation, engineering and advanced manufacturing. HongKong was eager to pair promising businesses with capital and partners, as well as give investorstrusted pathways into unfamiliar sectors and economies, he added. Hong Kong had, Chanpointed out, also taken steps to widen its connections with various economies and broadenasset classes in various regions. "In Southeast Asia, we are welcoming more enterprises fromIndonesia, Thailand and Malaysia to lease in Hong Kong," he said. "In the Middle East, HongKong and Saudi Arabia have listed ETFs, tracking each other's markets, giving investors newroutes to invest." "In Central Asia, Kazakhstan has already tapped Hong Kong's equity andbond markets. We welcome more issuers to raise capital here through listings and bondissuances." Chan added that Hong Kong would also continue to expand the range of assetsand financial services to give investors more options to diversify. This, he said, included acentral focus on developing a commodity and gold trading ecosystem. Edited by Tony Sabine

- Real estate recovery drives growth forecast higher: FS (2026-11-03 08:07)

Financial Secretary Paul Chan on Tuesday said all three drivers of economic growth performed well in the third quarter, with consumption, investment, and exports all recording growth to varying degrees. Hong Kong's advance estimates for the third-quarter GDP are set to be released later in the day. The financial chief had announced over the weekend that the city's full-year economic growth forecast will be revised upwards following a stronger-than-expected 5.1 percent GDP growth in the first half of the year. Chan said other factors also supported the projection, noting that full-year visitor arrivals are likely to exceed the target of 50 million and that the real estate market is improving. "The residential property market has been on the rise since the latter half of last year. Last year, the increase was approximately three percent, while the rise this year has been between seven and 10 percent. In the residential property market, it's fair to say we are moving into a stage of steady ascent." he said. "In commercial real estate, we have observed significant improvements in office rentals, in terms of rental prices and vacancy rates, particularly in central business districts. It has also stabilised in other districts." An expected influx of visitors towards the end of the year will also have a positive impact on the retail and catering sectors, Chan added. While certain industries, such as construction, catering, and retail, are facing more pressure with higher jobless rates, Chan stressed that the overall employment situation is stable, with unemployment standing at around 3.9 percent. In predicting next year's economic growth, Chan stressed that government economists are currently assessing the impact of several key factors. These, he said, include expected high interest rates, geopolitical uncertainties like fluctuating oil prices driven by Middle East wars, upcoming elections in major economies, and the reallocation of international funds. • Financial institutions laud HK's gateway guardianship (2026-11-03 07:09)

Global bank leaders have lauded Hong Kong for its role as a gateway between the mainland and the rest of the world, facilitating two-way financial flows and minimising risks in an era of uncertainty. At a panel meeting held at the Global Financial Leaders' Investment Summit in Central, State Street chairman and chief executive Ronald O'Hanley noted that trade patterns had changed in recent years due to uncertainties brought by the pandemic and global conflicts. More borrowers and people looking to raise capital, he said, are looking for safer options when building supply chains and structuring financing – switching from "just in time to just in case". "Where we're seeing the most change is around the role of China, and Hong Kong is the gateway to that," O'Hanley said. "It's the kind of movement of money north and south and movement of capital north and south, and Hong Kong is playing that role." Barclays group chief executive C S Venkatakrishnan said firms had been reducing their dependency on strategic imports over the past decade and that the city which is positioned as both an international financial centre as well as a domestic one is the one that can help countries manage the dependencies. "I think in order for international finance not to get caught up in the strategic breakdown of dependence, it's important for the international financial centres like Hong Kong to do what you're doing – which is to have fair and transparent regulation to promote growth and to make it easy for people to operate," he said. BNP Paribas chairman Jean Lemierre noted that more mainland firms were operating in Europe. With Hong Kong being a renminbi hub, it acts as a bridge between China and Europe that helps these companies gain access to the euro, he said, adding that mainland firms can have better understanding of the European market through the SAR. • Beijing approves removal of Winnie Ho as housing chief (2026-11-03 05:17)

The State Council has decided to remove Winnie Ho from the post of housing secretary of the Hong Kong government, Xinhua reported on Tuesday. It said the decision, made on Tuesday, was in accordance with the Basic Law and based on the suggestion of Chief Executive John Lee. That came after Lee said Ho had tendered her resignation on October 28 and indicated that she would shoulder political accountability for the Wang Fuk Court fire in Tai Po. A day after that, the government made public the investigation report by an independent committee into the deadly blaze and unveiled sweeping measures to prevent a recurrence. In a statement, Lee recounted Ho's career from the time that she joined the government in 1992, becoming director of architectural services in 2020 to being appointed as secretary for housing in 2022. Lee said Ho had been dedicated to implementing his directives, including constructing some 30,000 Light Public Housing units, shortening the composite waiting time for subsidised rental housing from 6.1 years to 4.8 years, effectively combating the abuse of public rental housing and enacting the Basic Housing Units Ordinance to eradicate substandard subdivided units. "As she officially leaves her post today, I wish her all the best in her future endeavours and a healthy life," he said. Edited by Tony Sabine

• Parking meters restored after hours of breakdown (2026-11-03 04:47)

The Transport Department said the operation of the city's parking meter system had returned to normal following emergency repairs after a breakdown that lasted for nearly four hours on Tuesday morning. The department said it received a report from the operator at about 8.20am that the system had malfunctioned. The Digital Policy Office was notified of the incident, the department said, noting that there was no evidence to suggest the system had been hacked. Secretary for Transport and Logistics Mable Chan said officials had urged the operator of the parking meters to submit a report as soon as possible. "I want to reiterate that we attach huge importance to this incident and the system malfunction. I have instructed the Transport Department to require the system operator, Hong Kong Telecom, to submit a report as soon as possible. - New service to simplify mainland flight transit in HK (2026-11-03 04:36)

Secretary for Transport and Logistics Mable Chan on Tuesday said a new service had been launched to streamline international travel for mainland passengers departing from regional airports via Hong Kong International Airport to destinations around the world. A pilot phase is underway in collaboration with airports in Hangzhou and Wuhan. The new initiative is part of the national aviation programme named: "Trunk-Branch Connectivity, Whole-Network Linkage". Passengers can check in for their entire journey at their local airports, and fly out to international destinations via Hong Kong, instead of having to re-claim their luggage and then check in again in the SAR. Speaking at the opening ceremony of this year's Super Terminal Expo, Chan described the scheme as a game-changing service. "To put this into perspective, this transfer platform is already active across more than 260 airports in the mainland and has accumulatively facilitated over 260 million transfer passengers, allowing tens of millions of travellers to enjoy the unprecedented convenience of one-stop check-in and seamless baggage transfers," she said. "This is far more than a commercial expansion. It is a policy breakthrough, which embeds Hong Kong directly into the national overall aviation architecture." Chan stressed that Hong Kong International Airport plays a vital “linchpin role” to fulfil the SAR’s unique mandate as a super-connector and a super value-adder that bridges the country and the world. Enhancing connectivity between the world’s second-largest economy and the rest of the world, she said, also unlocks tremendous opportunities for trade and aviation. To facilitate this goal, Chan noted that Hong Kong had also set a target of expanding its global aviation network from the existing 220 destinations to 240 under its recently unveiled five-year plan. - Foreign firms debut in HK to access mainland market (2026-11-02 14:04)

A number of foreign companies have made their debut at the annual Hong Kong Fintech Week and StartmeupHK that commenced on Monday, hoping to use the SAR as a springboard to tap into the mainland market. They include a Canadian company that produces renewable fuels. Jag Singh from SBI BioEnergy noted that his firm can contribute to the SAR’s green aviation development, and hopes to also explore opportunities in the mainland market. “Everyone in the world has a shortage of sustainable aviation fuel and a target to blend sustainable aviation fuel,” he said. “So we are helping to achieve that and we can do it globally because it's our own process modular, and we have all the control of the technology because we have the hydrogen production as well as the conversion system in them.” Singh went on to say that the firm’s next goal is to expand even further in Asia through Hong Kong. "We hear a lot about the great agreements and structures here and IP protection, and that's very important to us because these are our babies – these are our patented processes – we spent a lot of time and blood, sweat and tears to make this happen," he said. "So I think it’s a perfect gateway or potential base as a springboard to the rest of Asia and China." Canadian firm Deep Sky, whichspecialises in carbon removal, is also taking part in the event. “What I’ve noticed is there's anincredible density of companies that are developing energy infrastructure in [the] mainland andinternationally, financiers financing those projects and trading firms who are trading theproducts,” the firm's Charlie Renzoni said. “So I see an incredibly important connectionbetween Hong Kong, [the] mainland and the rest of the world.” For Korean firm MoneyStation,which focuses on AI-powered investment intelligence, they decided to make the SAR their firststop to go overseas. “Hong Kong is like a pioneer in adapting the new financial businessmodels like cryptos or stock markets and asset management,” its founder James Lee said. Headded that the city’s annual event also offered them a chance to look for strategic businesspartners. Edited by Aaron Tam

- 'HK crucial for mainland firms' global expansion' (2026-11-02 13:17)

Mainland companies have hailed the city’s annual flagship finance and technology event, saying it offers an opportunity for them to carry out exchanges with potential overseas partners. Speaking on the sidelines of the Hong Kong Fintech Week and StartmeupHK on Monday, Liu Yong from the Zhongguancun Fintech Industry Development said this year was their third time participating in the event. He said that the SAR’s role as a super connector was crucial for the mainland in setting up shop overseas. “Hong Kong can fully leverage its strength in international talent. Because in the international aspects, such as accounting standards, Hong Kong itself is an international financial centre – it has a very good foundation and conditions,” he said. Mu Rong from the Greater Bay Area fintech delegation noted that some firms focusing on securities and asset management, which used to adopt a wait-and-see approach, have gradually set up shop in Hong Kong to start doing business overseas. “Some of these tech companies have started making profits. The orders that they received from overseas customers were even larger than those from the mainland,” she said. “This shows that Hong Kong fully recognised their technical capabilities.” Mu went on to say that firms that wish to expand to international markets will now team up, rather than go it alone. Wang Yu, who represented a delegation led by the Union of Finance Alumni of Peking University said that more than 30 percent of the firms in their group – particularly those focusing on AI – are determined to expand globally via the SAR. Wang highlighted how Hong Kong’s convenience across various aspects, including culture and language, makes it an ideal platform to go global. Edited by Aaron Tam

- Apple iPhone pre-sales linked to 1,700 fraud cases (2026-11-02 10:35)

Police have received more than 1,700 reports of suspected credit-card fraud cases linked to Apple's recent iPhone pre-sales in September and October. At a Southern District Council meeting on Monday, Police Commissioner Joe Chow said the force received 1,589 reports of unauthorised credit card transactions involving the purchases of various Apple iPhone 18 models. Pre-orders for the smartphone began on September 12 in Hong Kong. Another 138 reports were filed in October, when the iPhone Duo began accepting orders. According to Chow, Apple opted against extra security measures for credit card transactions. An example would be the "3D Secure" protocol, which asks customers to enter a one-time password or verify their identity on the bank's mobile app. "During this period, we contacted Apple, credit card companies and banks, and cancelled all problematic purchase records. As a result, the victims did not suffer any losses," Chow said. The police chief said officers had reached out to Apple on multiple occasions to express hope that the company would implement effective security measures and strengthen verification in future product launches. Chow also briefed district councillors on Hong Kong's law-and-order situation. He said fraud remained the dominant crime category, with 34,679 cases in the first nine months of the year, making up 51 percent of all crimes. Victims reported losses of HK$6.02 billion, a 6.7 per cent increase year on year. Phone scams were now the most common type of fraud, followed by online shopping deception. Edited by Raymond Yeung

- Govt pledges 'one-stop liaison service' for homeowners (2026-11-02 09:25)

Deputy Financial Secretary Michael Wong on Monday said liaison officers would be assigned to handle homeowners' enquiries and complaints regarding future building renovation projects. The government announced last week comprehensive reforms to the building maintenance industry to prevent a repeat of the Wang Fuk Court fire that killed 168 people last year. A report detailing the shortcomings by contractors and government departments in relation to the tragedy was released on the same day. Among the measures proposed by the government, the Housing Bureau's Independent Checking Unit (ICU) would be decommissioned and replaced by a Public Housing Building Control Section this month. Project-specific teams would be set up to assist housing estates undertaking major maintenance and renovation works. A liaison officer would act as the point of contact for the owners' corporation and homeowners. Wong, who attended a Legislative Council housing panel meeting as Acting Secretary for Housing, said the liaison officers will keep homeowners informed of developments. "Currently, the ICU has different professional functions. It may not be practical for homeowners to find the person in charge of each field," he said. "We have internal referrals now, but it's neither direct nor fast enough. In the future, the one-stop liaison officer would handle all these issues, as well as complaints concerning maintenance matters." Wong added that authorities also planned to use artificial intelligence to speed things up, such as auditing and analysing documents. "It's impractical for one person to go through 1,000 documents, while artificial intelligence can finish that in 0.1 seconds," he said. "It will flag anomalies and anything improper, but will not make the final judgment. We will always have people to make the judgment." Wong said any potential issue flagged by AI will be followed up manually. Edited by Raymond Yeung

• 30pc of financial firms now employ agentic AI: survey (2026-11-02 08:05)

The Securities and Futures Commission has released its first-ever AI readiness survey, showing that most large financial firms in Hong Kong already use artificial intelligence across their operations, with adoption expected to accelerate over the coming year. The survey, conducted between July and August this year, covered 20 large financial firms with 78 affiliated licensed corporations in Hong Kong. Together they accounted for over 75 per cent of securities transactions reported by licensed corporations in the six months ended June. The survey found that 95 per cent of surveyed firms expected AI usage to accelerate over the next 12 months, with 90 per cent already connecting AI tools to internal systems. AI use now spans front-, middle- and back-office activities. "AI adoption in Hong Kong in the capital market is growing rapidly in speed and in scale," SFC chief executive officer Julia Leung said during the Hong Kong Fintech Week. Notably, agentic AI – which can autonomously determine and execute steps to achieve an objective – is gaining traction, the survey showed. Thirty per cent of surveyed firms already use it in their business operations, and 25 per cent are piloting it with varying degrees of autonomy and human involvement. However, Leung struck a note of caution. "Just think of agentic AI [as] your kids at home. They define the boundaries we set for them. They can go rogue, they can collude with their siblings, and disrupt your neighbour," she said. Leung also acknowledged that the development of frontier AI models and agents has outpaced governments' and regulators' ability to set rules. The SFC said the findings will inform its supervisory approach to AI, with priorities including protecting investors, strengthening cybersecurity and operational resilience, and ensuring effective AI governance. • HSBC to set up AI institute in race to train staff (2026-11-02 06:21)

Banking giant HSBC says an artificial intelligence and emerging technology institute being set up in Hong Kong is due to become operational in the first quarter of 2027. Announcing the update at Hong Kong Fintech Week on Monday, chief executive Georges Elhedery said the city's biggest lender aims to move the institute to the Northern Metropolis once a suitable location has been identified. For now, he said the Hong Kong University of Science and Technology will be the institute’s first anchor academic partner. "We bring their skills and know-how and capabilities as well as our domain expertise and financial services to find and work on solutions that make our clients' lives much easier in the age of AI, but also other emerging technologies such as blockchain, quantum, etc," Elhedery said. He framed the institute's establishment as part of HSBC's broader AI strategy to give its roughly 200,000 employees – including about 28,000 in Hong Kong – an efficiency boost. "AI is going to be disruptive. It’s going to transform jobs. It’s going to eliminate some. It’s going to create new ones," Elhedery said. "The first mission for us is to bring all our colleagues ⋯ on the journey with us as opposed to creating an environment where uncertainty actually prevails." HSBC is already testing how client agents could interact with the bank’s agents to handle basic tasks, he said, though security remains a major workstream. On AI security, Elhedery said, HSBC is constantly working to identify vulnerabilities and build more resilient systems. Edited by Raymond Yeung

• HKMA eyes next level for Fintech 2030 with AI push (2026-11-02 04:14)

The Hong Kong Monetary Authority has set out the next phase of its Fintech 2030 strategy, which will pair new technology initiatives with a renewed emphasis on governance and risk management. Speaking at Hong Kong Fintech Week on Monday, authority chief executive Eddie Yue said the HKMA is launching Project Sage to examine the application and governance of " agentic finance" – artificial intelligence systems that can execute tasks on behalf of users. "The main purpose of the Sage project is to hope that, under agentic finance, we can both promote application and pay attention to governance," he said. Yue said a cross-sector expert panel would bring together finance, payments, professional services, technology and academic representatives to explore use cases, sandbox testing, interoperability standards and governance safeguards. The HKMA is also issuing a discussion paper on banks' use of agentic AI, seeking views on governance models, responsibility arrangements and a possible central register of trusted agents. Yue said the aim is to set rules that allow innovation while managing risks. He also said the authority would launch a post-quantum cryptography toolbox with the Hong Kong University of Science and Technology to help banks prepare for the challenges stemming from breakthroughs in quantum computing. On tokenisation, Yue said the HKMA is introducing tokenised central bank money to enable 24/7 settlement of interbank tokenised deposits and would expand the number of participating banks to support cross-lender transfers around the clock. "The benefit is that, for example, quite a number of enterprises with global liquidity to manage can, if round-the-clock tokenised deposit transfers are achieved, make payments at any time and anywhere, across different accounts and even cross-border," he said. " And for retail investors, if in the future they want to invest in different retail tokenised financial products, they can also more flexibly do their investments 24/7, strengthening the flexibility and security of their asset allocation." Yue said the HKMA would further pilot tokenised Exchange Fund Bills in the secondary market and explore whether regulated stablecoins could serve as a payment channel. He stressed that innovation must be matched by governance and risk management so it can go further, land better and benefit more people. Edited by Tony Sabine

• HK 'an ideal home for international private law body' (2026-11-02 03:54)

Chief Executive John Lee on Monday said Hong Kong strives to attract global organisations and promote international legal cooperation. He made the remarks in an opening ceremony by the International Institute for the Unification of Private Law – also known as Institut International Pour L'unification du Droit Prive (Unidroit) – of its Asia-Pacific liaison office in the city. At the ceremony, which also marks the beginning of this year's Hong Kong Legal Week, Lee said the establishment of the office would deepen collaboration, facilitating the implementation of private law. "It is a decision of profound significance – for Unidroit, for Hong Kong and for the entire Asia-Pacific region," he said. "The liaison office will serve as a focal point for enhanced engagement with member states and stakeholders in the region. And it will play a crucial role in the legislative and institutional work of Unidroit. "Hong Kong, strategically located at the heart of Asia, is an ideal home for the Asia-Pacific liaison office." Lee said the establishment of the liaison office would strengthen the collaborative relationship between Hong Kong and the institute. The office would also be able to benefit from cooperation with other legalorganisations in the city, he added. Hong Kong, Lee pointed out, is a renowned internationallegal, trade and financial hub and serves as a host to many international organisations. Thecity's laws and dispute resolution framework also align with international standards and havebeen recognised globally, he stressed. The nation's 15th Five-Year Plan supports Hong Kong'sdevelopment as an international legal and dispute resolution services centre, Lee said, while thecity's own five-year blueprint sets out a series of measures for leveraging the strengths of theSAR's common law system. - John Lee says HK offers businesses long-term certainty (2026-11-02 03:11)

Chief Executive John Lee said Hong Kong offers businesses the "certainty" they need to innovate, invest and flourish over the long term, even as global uncertainty persists. That assurance came in opening remarks that he made on the first day of the region's annual flagship finance and technology event, Hong Kong Fintech Week and StartmeupHK, on Monday. The conference brings together some 1,000 government leaders and fintech, finance and technology professionals from more than 100 countries and economies, along with around 800 exhibitors and startups and more than 30 delegations from the mainland and abroad. Lee framed the event against a fast-changing global backdrop, saying technology is advancing at a remarkable speed, with artificial intelligence transforming industries and forcing businesses worldwide to adjust to shifting market conditions and unprecedented technological changes. "In such an ever-changing, all-encompassing environment, one quality is becoming even more valuable — I'm talking about certainty," he said. "Certainty about direction, certainty about opportunities, certainty about where businesses can invest, innovate and flourish in the long term." Lee pointed to Hong Kong's first-ever five-year plan, saying the strategic blueprint reinforces the city's status as an international financial, maritime and trade centre and aviation hub, while accelerating its development as an international innovation and technology centre and a hub for high-calibre talent. He also cited Hong Kong's ranking as the world's freest economy, its more than 1,400 fintech companies and InvestHK's support for more than 550 overseas and mainland companies in the first nine months of the year, generating about US$9 billion in foreign direct investment and some 11,100 jobs. He also pointed to the Northern Metropolis as a long-term source of opportunity, saying the mega project would create an innovation "through-train" that connects talent and research with commercialisation, capital and global markets. Lee expressed confidence that Hong Kong's future would be one for everyone – in business, finance, technology and beyond. "If you believe that technology will define the future, if you believe that Asia will continue to drive global economic growth, and if you believe in the transformation taking place across China, then you must believe in Hong Kong's pivotal place in making it happen," he said. "After all, it's in Hong Kong that you access global capital while remaining close to one of the world's most dynamic engines of innovation and growth." He added that Hong Kong is a place where ideas can move from research to commercialisation and then into global markets – an East-meets-West city built on multilateralism, free trade and mutual opportunity. • ICAC charges two ex-cleaning firm executives (2026-11-02 03:04)

Two former senior executives of a cleaning company have been charged by the ICAC for allegedly accepting bribes totalling more than HK$75 million in connection with the procurement of cleaning vehicles and maintenance services, with the case expected to be mentioned at Kwun Tong Magistrates' Courts on Monday. William Fung, 54, former director of Johnson Cleaning Services Company Limited and chief executive officer of its parent company, and Jimmy Lee, 57, former general manager of Johnson, were both charged on October 30 with one count of conspiracy for an agent to accept advantages under the Prevention of Bribery Ordinance and the Crimes Ordinance. At the time of the alleged offences, Fung oversaw Johnson's business including subcontracts, purchase orders and the release of payments. Lee was under his direct supervision. Between November 2024 and January 2026, Johnson procured multiple fleets of cleaning vehicles from a supplier and regularly used the supplier's vehicle maintenance services, with total expenses exceeding HK$160 million. The charge alleges that Fung and Lee conspired to accept bribes totalling over HK$75 million from individuals including the supplier's proprietor, as a reward for showing favour to the supplier in the company's business dealings. The ICAC said Johnson had rendered full assistance during its investigation. As the corruption investigation is ongoing, the commission said it would not rule out further prosecution. The Observatory on Sunday said Hong Kong recorded its warmest October since records began in 1884. The forecaster said the average temperature last month stood at 27.6 degrees Celsius. The mean maximum and minimum temperatures also set records, at 30.5 degrees and 25.8 degrees respectively. The Observatory attributed the unusually warm conditions to the ongoing El Niño and a weak northeast monsoon, while noting that climate change also played a role. A fresh to strong northeast monsoon is expected to reach the city in the coming days, bringing a slight drop in temperatures early next week. Edited by Aaron Tam

• Bar Association backs criminalising bid-rigging (2026-11-01 09:45)

The Bar Association on Sunday said it supports the criminalisation of bid-rigging activities through amendments to the Competition Ordinance. This came as its task force on law review proposed about 50 legislative amendments following the deadly Wang Fuk Court fire. It covered bid-rigging, tender specifications, declaration of interests, as well as project safety and risks. Jose-Antonio Maurellet, chairman of the association, expressed support of criminalising bid-rigging in parallel to the existing civil regime. “The existence of the dual-track system, of course, does not mean that civil and criminal proceedings would be taken forward at the same time for the same case – this would contravene the principle against double jeopardy,” hesaid. “The enforcement authorities concerned will therefore need to coordinate with oneanother and to decide whether a case is to be dealt with by civil enforcement or by criminalprosecution.” He went on to say that under the new criminal offence, the elements of crime,such as the definition of bid-rigging and the burden of proof, must be clearly defined. Theassociation also proposed to amend the Building Management Ordinance, saying if a projectexceeds a certain value, tenders must be submitted in “two envelopes” – one for thetechnical proposal and the other for price. The price proposal may only be opened after thetechnical proposal has met a minimum score specified in the evaluation to encourage a focuson quality, it said. Edited by Aaron Tam

- Lan Kwai Fong welcomes record 105k Halloween revellers (2026-11-01 09:35)

Lan Kwai Fong Group on Sunday said it welcomed a record 105,000 revellers on Halloween, up from 80,000 a year earlier, as bars and restaurants saw business nearly double. The group's chairman, Allan Zeman said the size of the crowd on Saturday – also the final day of Hong Kong's inaugural month-long programme for the spooky festival – was the busiest Halloween the entertainment district had ever seen. "The first Saturday that it came out, it was busy, the second Saturday, more people came, and then the third Saturday was really quite busy but not as busy as last Saturday night," he said. “It was a record because last year we had 80,000 people and never expected to break the record.” He lauded the Tourism Board’s Halloween Month, saying it was a draw for visitors from across Hong Kong, the mainland and overseas. " The beauty was there was people from all over," Zeman said. Locals made up roughly 50 to 60 percent of the crowd and mainland visitors stood at about 20 to 30 percent, with Zeman saying there were more tourists from around the world as well. "In the past we never had so many international people," he said, adding that visitors told him they had come from Canada and the United States specifically to experience Lan Kwai Fong. Zeman also said bars and restaurants did 90 to 100 percent more business than on a normal Saturday, while other businesses reported gains of 40 to 50 percent. "It was just the best Halloween that Lan Kwai Fong has ever seen," he said. The Lan Kwai Fong Group chairman also said the opening of the round-the-clock Huanggang Port and extended clearance hours at Shenzhen Bay control point made a difference. It’s a "game changer for Hong Kong – not just for Halloween", he said, citing facial recognition that can clear travellers in about two minutes. Edited by Aaron Tam

- HK Q3 growth set to beat forecasts: FS (2026-11-01 08:18)

Hong Kong’s economy is expected to grow faster than market forecasts in Q3, extending its positive growth streak to 15 consecutive quarters, according to Financial Secretary Paul Chan. In his weekly blog on Sunday, Chan said the government will release advance estimates for third-quarter GDP on Tuesday. Preliminary indications suggest that faster export growth and solid domestic demand will push year-on-year growth above market expectations and accelerate from the second quarter. "For the first three quarters combined, real GDP growth year-on-year will be the highest for the same period in five years," he said. "With the economy maintaining good momentum, the full-year economic growth forecast is expected to be revisedupward again." Chan attributed part of the growth to technological innovation, noting that theglobal artificial intelligence investment boom continues to drive strong demand for high-endelectronic components and AI-related goods. "The value of Hong Kong’s merchandise exportssurged by 64.9 percent year-on-year in September, recording double-digit growth for the 20thconsecutive month, with the monthly increase hitting a more than 40-year high," he said. "Among these, exports of 'office machines and automatic data processing machines' soared by183.7 percent." Private investment expenditure has also grown by double digits for threestraight quarters and maintained that momentum into the third quarter, Chan said, reflectingcorporate confidence in the outlook. Service exports have benefited from continued growth ininbound tourism, buoyant cross-boundary transport and an active financial market. Chan saidupcoming retail and catering receipts figures are expected to continue showing moderategrowth. He also noted that two major international financial events – Hong Kong Fintech Weekand the Global Financial Leaders’ Investment Summit – will begin on Monday. Fintech industryplayers and investors from more than 100 economies, as well as heads of top internationalfinancial institutions, will gather in Hong Kong to discuss key issues in global financial marketsand technological development and to identify and create new investment opportunitiesthrough high-level exchanges. - Runners unfazed by heat in first-ever NM marathon (2026-11-01 08:06)

Around 15,000 people took part in the inaugural Northern Metropolis Marathon on Sunday morning, with the organiser saying it will try to hold future races in cooler months and extend the route to Shenzhen. At the sound of the horn, eager runners began their 42.1km journey at 6:30am in Shek Mun, where the Heung Yee Kuk – which organised the event – is headquartered. Full marathoners then headed north via the Science Park, Tolo Highway, Lam Tsuen River in Tai Po and the Lung Shan Tunnel before crossing the line at the recently commissioned Fanling Bypass. Half-marathon runners had a similar route, starting at the Science Park and finishing in Fanling. Most participants said the arrangements were smooth. But depending on their luck, some might have had to briefly stop at the traffic lights at a crossing to let cars pass. A certain section of the route also saw runners sharing a bike path with cyclists. Lai, a marathon finisher, said he was not pleased with his time of three hours and 11 minutes. "I kind of expected it, because of the heat," he said. "To me the route didn't matter. Running in 28 degrees [Celsius] was really tough, and there was a lack of water stations. There should be one station every 2.5 kilometres, compared to every three to four kilometres right now." Former SAR representative Chan Ka-ho, meanwhile, came fourth overall in the men's marathon. "There aren't that many full marathon courses in Hong Kong, perhaps only three or four. So this new course offers a fresh experience," he said. "If you ask me if the route is fast, I would say no. But for recreational runners who wish to step onto the Fanling Bypass and Lung Shan Tunnel, then it's quite nice." To promote local produce and delicacies, each finisher was given a hydroponic cabbage as well as pastries. Heung Yee Kuk chairman Kenneth Lau said he was surprised by the turnout. He hoped that the route allowed participants to experience the charm of the New Territories, and thanked authorities for providing help to overcome various challenges. "Many people haveasked, if they can run all the way to Shenzhen... We can see that infrastructure development inYuen Long and the rest of the Northern Metropolis is in full swing, with numerous constructionsites and projects under way," he said. "I believe that in the future, the route will surely extendto San Tin, the Lok Ma Chau Loop, or even all the way into the Shenzhen area." Lau admitted theday's temperature of 25 degrees Celsius or so was not the most ideal for running, and hoped tohold future races in December if possible. Edited by Aaron Tam

- 'Revolutionary change aimed for building maintenance' (2026-11-01 05:15)

Secretary for Justice Paul Lam on Sunday said the government's efforts to amend the law following the deadly Wang Fuk Court inferno aim to make a "revolutionary change" to the entire building maintenance ecosystem in Hong Kong. His remarks came as authorities plan to submit legislative amendments to the Legislative Council within this year to reform the building maintenance and renovation system, as well as combat bid-rigging activities. Speaking on a Commercial Radio programme, Lam said dishonest contractors should be driven out of the market. "In today's large-scale building maintenance, there is an objective fact – an unfortunate and unacceptable fact – that the 'fat of the meat' is too rich, and the market was almost monopolised by bad actors," he said. "A friend of mine in law enforcement put it very well: bad money drives out good. Genuinely decent maintenance workers and professionals were not willing to take part in the market. People have no choice – it's all bad actors. "So the first step is to drive the bad actors out of the market, so that the highly professional and honest people will be willing to re-enter the market." Lam said authorities should also assist home owners in finding suitable contractors and professionals, and ensure that construction works are carried out in a safe and lawful manner. Speaking on the same show, Secretary for Commerce and Economic Development Algernon Yau said bid-rigging involves complex issues including price-fixing and market sharing. He believes criminalising such activities would enable greater powers to combat bid-rigging, expressing hope that the amendments could be passed by April next year. Edited by Tony Sabine

- Vaccination calls as flu season 'not over' (2026-10-31 10:30)

A seven-year-old girl with an underlying illness is critically ill with influenza A as authorities urge vaccination. The girl developed a runny nose, diarrhoea and abdominal pain on Thursday, followed by fever and convulsions on Friday, according to the Department of Health. She was admitted to Tuen Mun Hospital. She was transferred to the hospital's paediatric intensive care unit after her condition deteriorated and remains there for further treatment. Health authorities warn that the city's flu season is not over. Hong Kong's current flu season has already dragged on for four months after beginning in late June, according to health officials.Dr. Edwin Tsui, Controller of the Centre for Health Protection, noted that while the latestsurveillance data shows signs of decline, overall influenza activity "remained above the baselinelevel." "A cumulative total of 28 cases of severe paediatric influenza infection have beenrecorded in the current influenza season. Among these cases, 20 patients have recovered andbeen discharged from hospital, two are in stable condition, four are in critical condition and twohave passed away," Tsui said. The CHP has urged residents to get vaccinated to reduce the riskof potential illness. Its analysis of the previous year’s data showed that unvaccinated childrenwho contracted flu had approximately five times the rate of severe complications or deathcompared with vaccinated children. - 58 arrested in triad crackdown as youth crimes spike (2026-10-31 09:28)

Police on Saturday arrested 58 people in a city-wide, anti-triad operation, disrupting gang networks exploiting the youth. The suspects rounded up include core gang members as well as those aged below 18. They are alleged to have committed a series of offenses, including claiming to be triad members, inviting another person to become a triad member, false imprisonment and money laundering. Chief inspector Chan Pak-ki said the arrests came after undercover officers infiltrated two triad groups amid a rise in youth crimes early this year. “We found that these triad groups would obtain the youths' trust first. They might carry out simple initiation ceremonies," she said. "After obtaining their trust, they lured them, through false promises that there was quick money to be made, into carrying out a lot of illegal acts.” The force also busted a number of illegal gambling and drug dens. Chan did not rule out further arrests, adding that the operation was still ongoing. Edited by Azam Khan

- Lan Kwai Fong expects monster finish to Halloween (2026-10-31 08:38)

Hong Kong's premier nightlife and party district Lan Kwai Fong is expecting business to jump about 50 percent this Halloween. Turnover is already up at least 30 to 40 percent over the past two weekends, according to Anthea Cheung, Lan Kwai Fong Association director. She credited this growth to the Tourism Board's inaugural Hong Kong Halloween Month, which generated significant festive buzz ahead of this weekend's finale and attracted higher-than-expected interest. Cheung said locals still made up around 70 percent of visitors to the district around which Halloween celebrations traditionally centre, with the rest coming from overseas and the mainland. The number of arrivals from the Greater Bay Area have spiked with cross-boundary travel made easier, she added, with many of them dressing up for a night out. Bars and restaurants, she pointed out, have kept some seats in reserve for walk-in customers since bookings for tables are already full. “We expect about a 50 percent increase tonight – it’s Halloween proper, and it’s a weekend too," Cheung said. "Our merchants are ready, they’ve stocked enough drinks and food for tonight’s celebrations.” Looking ahead, the association wants more hotel, dining and transport package deals to draw visitors into staying longer and spending more. As Lan Kwai Fong gears up to cope with crowds of revellers, immigration officers inspected Huanggang Port and Shenzhen Bay Control Point ahead of an expected late-night outbound peak on Saturday and Sunday by mainlanders here for Halloween night.The Immigration Department urged travellers seeking a quicker crossing to avoid peak hourswhere possible, adding that it is coordinating with public transport operators to step up theirservice frequency. - More experts 'applying to join building-repairs lists' (2026-10-31 07:33)

Secretary for Development Bernadette Linn said government has received an encouraging response from consultants and contractors seeking inclusion in three pre-qualified lists under a new council that will soon be offering full-cycle building repairs. The non-statutory Building Maintenance Support and Services Council – to be established by year-end – will gradually take over the Urban Renewal Authority's building-upkeep subsidy schemes under its Smart Tender system. Taking to the airwaves on Saturday, Secretary for Development Bernadette Linn said the government had received about 150 applications from inspection and supervision consultants as well as 350 applications from contractors. "Why do I say it's encouraging? Because the URA's Smart Tender platform also had a pre-qualified list – now it has been taken down as we have this new one," she said. "The number of applications this time, compared to the one that was taken down, saw an increase of two to three times. "This means that there are more consultants and contractors who did not participate in the past. I took it as a vote of confidence in the future system." While the council will prioritise around 1,800 maintenance projects that are already in the Smart Tender system, Linn said it would first focus on the 600 or so projects that had yet to undergo building inspections. "As inspections have not been carried out on these buildings, we can – when the new service is rolled out – deploy an inspection consultant for them," she said. Most of the remaining buildings, she pointed out, have already recruited supervision consultants. Initially, the government had been planning to put the URA or its subsidiaries in charge of the new support service. However, Linn said, following through on that plan would have significantly increased the URA's burden as it was already handling many building maintenance-related works as well as redevelopment projects. As for the new Public Housing Building Control Section that will replace the Housing Bureau's Independent Checking Unit within a month, Deputy Financial Secretary Michael Wong said he was confident that it would bring about more fundamental changes. About 300 staff from the unit, which has been found by an independent inquiry to be primarily responsible for failed supervision of major renovations at Wang Fuk Court in the runup to the fire, will move to the new section. "We have held more than 10 training classes [for staff] so as to raise vigilance and awareness," said Wong, who is also acting secretary for housing. A dedicated team will oversee each major maintenance project, while a project liaison officer will handle all enquiries from owners' corporations, he added. Edited by Azam Khan

- HK may see strongest growth in five years: Paul Chan (2026-10-31 06:54)

Hong Kong could record its strongest full-year economic growth figure in five years in 2026, according to Financial Secretary Paul Chan. Speaking on a radio programme on Saturday, he said the economy grew by 5.1 percent in the first half of the year and that strong export performance and investment growth continued into the third quarter. "What I'm most pleasedto see is that in terms of investment, the growth momentum in the first half of the year carriedthrough into the third quarter," Chan said. "Visitor numbers to Hong Kong are high, the streetsare busy, and we're holding many mega events – such as the Wine and Dine Festival – plusmany other big events and concerts. "We have FinTech Week coming up. There's a chance that2026 will be the strongest full-year economic growth in the past five years." On next year’ sbudget, Chan said any relief measures would depend on economic performance. He said thegovernment would do its best but substantial infrastructure spending ahead meant authoritieswould need to manage public finances closely. He also flagged external risks. If geopoliticaltensions and the Middle East conflict persist, oil prices could rise and feed into inflationarypressures, Chan stressed. He expects interest rates to stay relatively high next year, which couldaffect the property market and the wider economy, and said the authorities would remain alertto financial risks. - Buildings-repair body 'to operate on user-pays basis' (2026-10-31 04:21)

The new Building Maintenance Support and Services Council will operate on a non-profit basis but must recover costs on a user-pays basis, Financial Secretary Paul Chan said on Saturday, as the government moves to set it up in response to the independent committee report on the Wang Fuk Court fire. The council will guide owners through the full cycle of building repairs – handling tendering and evaluation on their behalf – for a fee. Chan told a Commercial Radio programme that the non-statutory company, wholly owned by Financial Secretary Incorporated, must recover costs, as owners are responsible for maintaining private residential properties. He said the fees would depend on the scope of the works and would cost roughly several thousand dollars per flat. "We understand that Hong Kong has many old districts, and some buildings are quite old," Chan said. "Many elderly people live there, and they may not be able to fully afford the fees. So in these areas, the government can provide some subsidies." For better-off owners, professional guidance matters more than cash subsidies, so a one-size-fits-all subsidy ratio would not be appropriate, Chan pointed out. He said a pre-screened list of professionals and contractors would be published for owners to choose from, describing it as government-checked to give owners greater peace of mind. The government has earmarked HK$300 million for the plan, including HK$100 million as start-up capital and HK$200 million to subsidise owners. The new body is expected to start operating by the end of the year, with recruitment for a chief executive already underway. Edited by Robert Kemp

• Eight applicants in race for ride-hailing licences (2026-10-30 10:18)

The Transport Department said eight applications had been lodged for ride-hailing service licences by the deadline at noon on Friday. The department said the number of applications reflected a positive response from the sector. Representatives from the Transport and Logistics Bureau, the Digital Policy Office and the Transport Department will assess the applications and make recommendations to the transport commissioner, with the aim of announcing the qualified platforms before the year ends. “We will carefully assess each application to ensure that licensed platforms have the necessary operational and financial capabilities to provide safe, reliable and efficient ride-hailing services sustainably,” a spokesman said. The department, he added, will unveil details for vehicle-driving as well as vehicle permits in due course. Edited by Edmond Fong

• Race to make bid-rigging criminal offence by April (2026-10-30 09:38)

Officials said on Friday they aim to criminalise bid-rigging by April as well as enhance enforcement through the establishment of an inter-departmental task force. Competition Commission chief executive Rasul Butt said the watchdog would be consulting lawmakers over the proposed amendments “very soon” before seeking opinions from stakeholders. “Thegovernment and, of course, the relevant authorities like the Competition Commission... willneed to engage with some stakeholders,” he said. “In terms of going to Legco to seek Legco'sapproval to pass the new amendments, the aim right now is April next year.” The task force –comprised of representatives from the commission, the police force and the IndependentCommission Against Corruption – will be led by Secretary for Security Chris Tang. Tang said thefight against bid-rigging, currently only a civil offence, would be efficient and enhanced throughthe sharing of intelligence and databases by the task force. “In fact in the past, our threedifferent departments, namely police, ICAC and Competition Commission, we are all separately,vigorously investigating bid-rigging-related offences,” he said. “But now we have a joint taskforce – we can share our intelligence, we can conduct more precise joint operations, and we canhave more proactive elements in cracking bid-rigging activities.” While Tang did not reveal howmany members there would be in the task force, he stressed that setting it up would notrequire any additional resources. He noted that under the coordination of the Home AffairsDepartment, task force members would attend owners' corporations meetings at high-riskbuildings – meaning those with high project costs and a significant number of flats involved – tolook for indications that bid-rigging might be involved. However, Tang warned, the task forcewill also rely on intelligence, undercover operations and informers to crack down onmalpractices. Edited by Edmond Fong

- 'Huanggang port ready for increased traffic flows' (2026-10-30 08:01)

The Transport Department has warned that traffic around the Huanggang control point and San Tin Road will be very heavy on Friday night and over the next two nights, as Halloween celebrations and other events in Hong Kong and Kowloon are expected to end around midnight. In a post on its social media page, the department said the Huanggang checkpoint provides dedicated public transport lanes, allowing franchised buses, cross-boundary coaches and green minibuses to travel via San Sham Road directly to the port. It said road markings have been strengthened and the dedicated lanes extended to improve effectiveness. During peak traffic periods, four franchised bus routes heading to the Huanggang port via the San Tin Public Transport Interchange will enter the interchange directly from a junction of the San Tin section of Castle Peak Road helping to divert traffic away from the busy San Tin roundabout. The department said it has instructed public transport operators to reserve sufficient vehicles and manpower, and to increase service frequency according to passenger flow. Its Emergency Transport Co-ordination Centre will monitor traffic conditions around the clock and take appropriate measures as needed, it said. Edited by Tony Sabine

- Tip-offs 'helping stub out construction-site smoking' (2026-10-30 07:41)

Secretary for Labour and Welfare Chris Sun called on the public on Friday to continue to provide information to help enforce the full smoking ban on construction sites and buildings undergoing major renovations. The call came as he revealed that citizen tip-offs had led to a disproportionately high number of successful prosecutions since the new rules took effect three months ago. Sun said the Labour Department has issued 87 fixed-penalty notices since the banwas introduced, of which 27 – about one third – were based on information provided bycitizens. There are currently, he pointed out, four contractor cases involving five summonsesgoing through prosecution proceedings. The department has conducted more than 6,900inspections over the past three months, he said, of which about 430 were triggered bycomplaints or tip-offs. "The proportion of inspections is certainly not large, but the success rateis very high, because you see, among our fixed-penalty notices, approximately one third ofthem were issued because some citizens kindly provided us with photos, videos andinformation, enabling us to conduct inspections promptly," said Sun. He also apologised againover the deadly Wang Fuk Court fire, whose independent report was released by thegovernment on Thursday. Sun pointed out that he had to, as a politically appointed official,support the chief executive and be accountable to him. The chief executive, he said, had madeclear his requirements and he would follow them, stay on the job and strive to implement thegovernment's reform agenda. Edited by Tony Sabine

- Major renovations to get dedicated checks by new unit (2026-10-30 06:20)

A Housing Bureau unit found to have been primarily responsible for failed supervision of major renovations at Wang Fuk Court in the runup to the fire will be replaced within about a month by a new body, Deputy Financial Secretary Michael Wong said on Friday. About 300 staff at the bureau's Independent Checking Unit will move over to the new Public Housing Building Control Unit, which will have a project-based workflow. Making the announcement, Wong, the acting secretary for housing, said under the new workflow system, each major maintenance job would get a dedicated team and a project liaison officer as a one-stop contact for owners' corporations, instead of splitting inspection, structural checks, minor works and site monitoring across different desks. A directorate-grade officer, he added, would shortly be seconded from the Buildings Department to the new unit to guide day-to-day work and keep enforcement standards aligned. "We believe there are several things that will bring a substantial improvement in the quality of our future services," Wong said. "First, we're changing our basic regulatory model to a project-based approach. "Also, communication with the Buildings Department – which was originally set at once every 12 months – has recently been changed to once a quarter." Wong added the authorities would, through training, make relevant personnel more vigilant and give them a deeper understanding of the relevant guidelines. He said he believes this can help greatly improve the quality of future work. Edited by Altis Wong

- New council to take over URA's role in building upkeep (2026-10-30 05:34)

Secretary for Development Bernadette Linn on Friday said the government would set up a new council by the end of the year to help homeowners through the full cycle of building repairs – offering a paid service to handle tendering and evaluation on their behalf. Her announcement came after the independent committee investigating the Wang Fuk Court fire called, in its report, for enhanced support services that would be run by a new operator with a clearer, more interventionist mandate. Speaking a day after the report's release, Linn said the new Building

Maintenance Support and Services Council would be a non-statutory body and take over, inphases, building-upkeep subsidy schemes presently being run by the Urban Renewal Authority(URA). Unlike the URA's Smart Tender platform, which helps owners solicit bids but does notassess them, the council will arrange for tenders and evaluate them for owners andrecommend up to three suitable bids. Owners using government maintenance subsidies mustchoose from those recommended bids. The council will also assign pre-engaged inspectionconsultants instead of requiring a fresh tender for each inspection, help appoint supervisionconsultants and contractors, monitor the supervision consultant during works, and give ownersindependent advice if contractors propose major scope or cost changes. Linn said the fullerservice could cost several thousand dollars per flat, versus the few hundred being chargedunder the Smart Tender platform. Commenting on the charges for the fuller service, Linnpointed out that the new council would provide a paid service to help owners meet their duty toinspect and maintain private property. Owners, she stressed, remain responsible for majorrepairs and the government is only stepping in because many of them lack the technicalknow-how. Linn was also asked whether the council should take responsibility if trouble cameup. "Now that we have a new council recommending the consultants and contractors, it also hasa role overseeing their performance. In case the council is being lax in its monitoring duty, thenthe council will have liability," she said. "Likewise, if turn of events show that the council hasoverlooked some important matters when recommending certain consultants or contractors,then I'm sure the council will also have to take on civil liabilities under the service contract theyhave signed with the owners." The council is expected to operate on a self-financing basis. Thegovernment has reserved HK$300 million, Linn said, adding that the figure is made up ofHK$100 million in seed funding and HK$200 million to ease fees for needy owners. She said thecouncil's priority would be the around 1,800 maintenance projects already in the Smart Tendersystem that had yet to appoint a contractor and were waiting for the new service. At the newsconference, Linn was also asked whether she had considered resigning over the fire. She saidshe had thought about it but added that the decision was not simply down to her personalpreference; as a senior member of the administration, she also had a duty to continue in herjob to carry out the chief executive's directions. - 'Wang Fuk recommendations will be carried out swiftly' (2026-10-30 01:41)

Most of the 120 recommendations from the independent committee report on the deadly Wang Fuk Court fire could be implemented within a few months, Chief Secretary Eric Chan said on Friday. "To implement the 120 recommendations as soon as possible, I believe, will help to quickly reduce the possibility of similar problems occurring again in the future. This is very important," he said during an RTHK programme. Chan said the recommendations are very comprehensive and the government must draw lessons from the incident to reform and improve existing systems. The chief secretary will lead a steering committee to review each of the 120 proposals, and drive and monitor the implementation of measures. Chan said the committee would meet soon and assign each recommendation to the relevant departments. Where a recommendation involves multiple departments, he said, the lead department responsible for overseeing implementation would be identified. Each department would berequired to submit a report to him on how the recommendation would be implemented orimproved, and he would oversee the timeline for implementation "There are several principles.First, it must be done very rigorously; second, it must be done very promptly; third, it must beeffective — effectively achieving the goal," he said. The chief secretary said somerecommendations are already being rolled out. He expressed hope that six bills, includingamendments to the Fire Services Ordinance and the Competition Ordinance, could besubmitted to the Legislative Council within the year. Once enacted, he said, these laws wouldgive enforcement and regulatory bodies sufficient powers to carry out their work. On theproposal to set up a central database to share information, such as underperformingcontractors, among government departments, Chan said preparation work may take a fewmonths due to the need for data conversion and platform design. He expects the system couldbe initially launched around May or June next year, and that the government would then beable to better serve the public. Edited by Tony Sabine
