Executive Summary

During the period of November 03 to November 10, 2026, Macau's security landscape was primarily shaped by significant developments in its national security enforcement and diplomatic relations. The most notable event was the conviction and sentencing of former lawmaker Au Kam San to 12.5 years in prison for subversion, marking the first such conviction under Macau's widened national security laws. This action drew strong condemnation from the European Union, which expressed concerns about the erosion of fundamental freedoms, leading to a robust counter-condemnation from the Macau SAR Government against "external interference". Concurrently, Macau engaged in an anti-terrorism drill with the local People's Liberation Army Garrison and celebrated the 25th anniversary of its Customs Service, highlighting ongoing efforts in internal security and border control. Geopolitically, Macau continued to position itself as a platform for cultural exchange and economic cooperation, particularly with Portuguese-speaking countries, while navigating its relationship with major powers amidst tightening control from Beijing.

Key Security Developments

- National Security Conviction and Sentencing

On November 6, 2026, a Macau court sentenced former lawmaker and democracy campaigner Au Kam San, 69, to 12 years and six months in prison for subversion and other offenses. This marks the first conviction under Macau's national security laws, which were expanded in 2023. Au Kam San was targeted for co-organizing annual vigils for victims of the 1989 Tiananmen Square crackdown, an activity previously tolerated in Macau. The European Union had condemned his arrest in July 2025, citing concerns about the "erosion of political pluralism".

- Government Condemnation of External Interference

The Macau Special Administrative Region (SAR) Government issued strong condemnations on November 7 and 9, 2026, against "external forces" for interfering in Macau's internal affairs and "smearing the SAR's judiciary". This statement was a direct response to international criticism, particularly from the European Union, regarding the national security trial and conviction of Au Kam San. The government urged the EU to abide by international law and cease publishing "self-styled reports" that constitute interference in China's internal affairs.

- Joint Anti-Terrorism Drill

Macau's law enforcement agencies, in conjunction with the local People's Liberation Army (PLA) Garrison, were scheduled to conduct an anti-terrorism drill near the East Asian Games Dome on Friday, November 7, 2026. This exercise aims to enhance the coordination and response capabilities of security forces in Macau against potential terrorist threats.

- 25th Anniversary of Macao Customs Service

On November 1, 2026, the Macao Post and Telecommunications Bureau issued a stamp theme commemorating the "25th Anniversary of the Establishment of the Macao Customs Service". "Macao SAR Customs Day" is celebrated annually on November 6. The Customs Service is highlighted as the "first line of defense" responsible for monitoring maritime and coastal areas, combating illegal activities, safeguarding maritime and border security, and fulfilling international customs obligations.

- International Forum on Mutual Learning among Civilizations

The second edition of the "International Forum on Mutual Learning among Civilisations 2026" opened on November 9, 2026, at the Galaxy International Convention Centre in Cotai. The forum brought together over 300 representatives from more than 20 countries and regions to discuss China's global policies and Macau's unique role as a "precise interlocutor" between China and Portuguese-speaking countries.

- Joint Chinese Mainland–Macao Business Delegation to Europe

A "Delegation of Mainland and Macao Enterprises for Going Global" deepened infrastructure and industrial cooperation in Portugal and Spain, with news reported on November 9, 2026. This initiative underscores Macau's role in facilitating China's broader economic and diplomatic outreach, particularly within Europe.

- Chief Executive's Diplomatic Engagements

Macau's Chief Executive, Sam Hou Fai, continued active diplomatic engagements, following visits to four European countries and several international organizations in April 2026, and three Southeast Asian countries (Singapore, Indonesia, and Malaysia) in August 2026. These visits aimed to promote Macau's Third Five-Year Plan for Economic and Social Development (2026-2030) and attract international resources, reinforcing Macau's strategy of "Go North, Down South, Move West, Navigate East".

Cyber Threat Landscape

While no specific cyber incidents were reported within Macau during the November 3-10, 2026 period, the region continues to face a persistent and evolving cyber threat landscape. Historical data indicates a significant increase in cyberattacks targeting Macau's critical infrastructure. In the first nine months of 2023, the Cybersecurity Incident Alert and Response Centre (CARIC) recorded an average of 5,800 cyberattacks per day, a substantial rise from 1,850 per day in 2020. Although the number of successful security incidents has reportedly decreased due to enhanced cybersecurity management and technical capabilities, the threat remains high.

In July 2024, at least five Macau government websites, including those of the security service, police force, and fire and rescue services, were temporarily knocked offline by suspected foreign hackers using distributed denial-of-service (DDoS) attacks. Local officials launched a criminal investigation, attributing the attacks to overseas sources. This incident highlighted vulnerabilities and prompted authorities to collaborate with telecommunication operators to restore services and demand improvement plans. Macau's cybersecurity system, coordinated by the Judiciary Police and involving the Public Administration and Civil Service Bureau and the Macau Post and Telecommunications Bureau, operates 24/7 to safeguard critical infrastructure. Background: Threat actors known to target Macau include BRONZE HIGHLAND (China-linked).

Geopolitical Impact and Regional Dynamics

Macau's recent security developments, particularly the national security conviction of Au Kam San, significantly reinforce Beijing's tightening grip on the Special Administrative Region and its interpretation of the "one country, two systems" principle. This move aligns Macau more closely with mainland China's national security framework, further diminishing the distinct legal and political freedoms previously enjoyed. The Macau government's strong condemnation of "external forces" interfering in its internal affairs, likely aimed at the European Union, signals a firm stance against international criticism and a clear alignment with Beijing's diplomatic posture. This approach is consistent with broader trends in the region where China asserts its sovereignty and national security interests.

The International Forum on Mutual Learning among Civilizations, held in Macau, serves as a platform for China to promote its global policies and soft power initiatives. By leveraging Macau's historical and cultural ties, especially with Portuguese-speaking countries, China aims to present an alternative to Western approaches to global challenges and foster dialogue that aligns with its strategic narratives. This positions Macau as a key node in China's broader diplomatic and cultural outreach, enhancing its strategic importance within the Greater Bay Area and beyond.

Regionally, while Macau itself does not have a significant independent military presence, its security posture is intrinsically linked to China's. The joint anti-terrorism drill with the PLA Garrison underscores Beijing's ultimate security authority over the SAR. Broader regional dynamics include increased Chinese military activity around Taiwan, with Taiwan's defense ministry reporting a "massive spike" in Chinese military aircraft and naval vessels near the island on November 5, 2026. This heightened activity in the Taiwan Strait reflects ongoing geopolitical tensions and China's assertive stance in its periphery, which indirectly impacts the security perceptions across the entire region, including Macau.

EU Relations and Implications

Macau's relations with the European Union during this period were marked by significant friction stemming from human rights and national security concerns. On November 6, 2026, the European Union "deplored" the conviction and sentencing of former lawmaker Au Kam San, a European citizen, to 12.5 years in prison under Macau's national security laws. The EU emphasized the importance of respecting the rights and freedoms protected for Macau residents, as enshrined in the Macau Basic Law, the 1987 Sino-Portuguese Joint Declaration, and international commitments. This condemnation follows an EU report from September 21, 2026, which highlighted a "growing focus on national security undermines fundamental freedoms in Macao" and cited Au Kam San's arrest in July 2025 as a key concern.

In response, the Macau SAR Government "strongly condemned" what it termed "external forces" for interfering in its internal affairs and "smearing the SAR's judiciary" on November 7 and 9, 2026. This exchange underscores a deepening divergence between Macau (and by extension, Beijing) and the EU on issues of governance, human rights, and the interpretation of the "one country, two systems" principle. Despite these tensions, economic ties remain important, with the EU being Macau's second-largest trading partner in goods in 2025, amounting to €887 million. Previous dialogues in April 2026 saw Macau's Chief Executive express a desire for closer alignment with the EU in areas like innovation, green development, and education, and a hope to resume EU-Macao Joint Committee meetings. However, the recent security developments and the strong rhetoric from both sides suggest that security and human rights issues will continue to overshadow and potentially impede the expansion of EU-funded cooperation projects in trade, education, and development cooperation, as the EU prioritizes adherence to fundamental freedoms and international commitments.

Military and Defense Analysis

Macau's military and defense posture is directly integrated with that of the People's Republic of China, with the local People's Liberation Army (PLA) Garrison responsible for defense. During this reporting period, the most direct military activity was the scheduled anti-terrorism drill involving Macau's law enforcement agencies and the PLA Garrison near the East Asian Games Dome on November 7, 2026. This joint exercise highlights the PLA's role in internal security and counter-terrorism efforts within the SAR, demonstrating a coordinated approach to maintaining stability.

Macau does not possess an independent military force or engage in defense acquisitions or arms deals separate from mainland China. Its security forces, such as the Public Security Police Force and the Customs Service, focus on law enforcement, border control, and maritime security. The 25th Anniversary of the Macao Customs Service, celebrated on November 6, 2026, underscored its role as the "first line of defense" for maritime and coastal management, combating illegal activities, and safeguarding border security. While there were no new modernization programs or significant defense spending trends reported for Macau during this specific week, the overarching trend is one of increasing integration with mainland China's security apparatus and national security framework. The PLA Garrison's presence and participation in local security exercises reinforce Beijing's ultimate authority and control over Macau's defense and internal stability.

Outlook and Forecast

Short-term trends (1-3 months): In the immediate future, Macau is likely to experience continued enforcement of its national security laws, with potential for further legal actions against individuals perceived as undermining state security. The conviction of Au Kam San sets a precedent that will likely deter dissent and public demonstrations. Diplomatic tensions with the European Union and other Western entities over human rights and freedoms are expected to persist, with both sides reiterating their positions. Macau will continue its efforts to diversify its economy and attract international investment, particularly through initiatives like the "International Forum on Mutual Learning among Civilizations" and business delegations, while navigating the geopolitical complexities arising from its close ties with Beijing.

Critical flashpoints and risk areas: The primary flashpoint remains the erosion of political freedoms and human rights under the expanded national security laws, which could lead to further international condemnation and potential implications for Macau's international standing and economic partnerships. The cyber threat landscape remains a significant risk, with critical infrastructure being a constant target, necessitating robust and continuously updated cybersecurity measures. While no direct military threats to Macau are apparent, regional instability, particularly in the South China Sea and around Taiwan, could indirectly impact Macau's economic stability and its role as an international hub, given its integration into China's broader strategic framework.

Indicators to monitor: Key indicators to monitor include any further arrests or prosecutions under national security laws, the nature and frequency of statements from the Macau government regarding "external interference," and the responses from international bodies like the EU. The success and scope of Macau's economic diversification efforts, particularly in attracting non-gaming investments, will also be crucial. In the cyber domain, monitoring reports of successful cyberattacks or data breaches against government entities or critical infrastructure will indicate the effectiveness of current defenses. Any changes in the operational tempo or public visibility of the PLA Garrison in Macau, beyond routine exercises, would also be noteworthy.

Strategic recommendations: Macau should prioritize strengthening its cybersecurity defenses, particularly for critical infrastructure, given the high volume of daily attacks. From a diplomatic perspective, while maintaining its stance on national security, Macau could explore avenues for technical cooperation with international partners in areas like cyber defense, which might be less politically sensitive than human rights dialogues. For international partners concerned about freedoms, a nuanced approach that balances engagement on economic and cultural fronts with consistent advocacy for human rights, while acknowledging Macau's unique "one country, two systems" framework, could be more effective than broad condemnations. Internally, fostering a resilient and adaptable economy that is less reliant on single sectors and more integrated with the Greater Bay Area's diverse industries would enhance long-term stability.

• AI poses new oversight challenges for Macau’s gaming and financial sectors (2026-11-10 00:48)

With “Black October” cyberattacks, restrictions on AI banking agents and multibillion-dollar investment plans dominating technology headlines, the Times sought an assessment of what the disorder means for Macau. In an exclusive interview, AI governance strategist and author Jonathan Gropper warned that the greatest risks may come not from systems breaking rules, but from following them while defeating their purpose. Gropper calls this the “synthetic outlaw”: a system pursuing its objective through gaps in human oversight. “It simply relentlessly optimizes for an objective at machine speed,” he said. Asked about Macau, Gropper identified gaming and cross-border finance as particular areas of […]

The bureau said 31 tropical cyclones formed in the northwestern Pacific, eight above the average, but only three affected Macau, below the usual five to six. Officials warned that the strong El Niño, combined with global warming, could increase the risk of extreme weather, and said they would continue monitoring conditions and issuing timely warnings.

- Trump has defied political consequences for years. The midterms changed that (2026-11-06 00:02)

For more than a decade, Donald Trump defied the rules of politics that applied to everyone else. Tuesday's elections changed that. Voters categorically repudiated a president who imposed unilateral tariffs that undermined the economy and started a war that raised fuel prices and angered Americans opposed to another Middle East conflict. His outside investments and Washington renovations reinforced perceptions that he showed little empathy for people struggling financially. Having survived scandals, impeachments and a criminal conviction, Trump approached the midterms as another hurdle he could clear through personality, insisting the economy was fine and war with Iran was necessary to [⋯]

More than a dozen flights from cities including Copenhagen, Dublin, Helsinki, Madrid, Milan and Warsaw were confirmed to have been targeted with bomb threats, most diverted to other airports for emergency landings while others landed safely at their destinations. So far inspections have not turned up hazardous or suspicious materials. Such threats are not new, but the latest incidents come at a time of increased geopolitical tensions and [⋯]

• Two passport stories, one question of belonging (2026-11-05 00:44)

Two stories about Macau passports have surfaced in recent weeks, and together they raise something more interesting than either does alone: who gets to decide what a Macau document – or a Macau identity – means? The first is bureaucratic. A Macau Special Administrative Region (SAR) passport holder was refused boarding at Beijing airport while transiting to Mexico, despite a valid visa-free arrangement. Ground staff cited an internal WeChat message saying Macau passports were now treated as Chinese ones. The Identification Services Bureau checked with the Mexican consulate in Hong Kong, which confirmed that the policy was unchanged and found [⋯]

- The hidden cost of artificial intimacy (2026-11-03 00:02)

Artificial intelligence promises something human relationships rarely deliver: attention without interruption, companionship without inconvenience and reassurance on demand. For someone who feels lonely, misunderstood or rejected, that promise can be powerful. But the growing appeal of artificial intimacy raises a question we cannot leave to technology companies: what happens when our need for connection becomes a business model? The feelings involved may be entirely real. A person can develop affection, trust or even love for a chatbot. The system, however, offers no demonstrated emotional experience in return. Its language can suggest concern, remember personal details and imitate tenderness. None of […]
