Executive Summary

Indonesia's security posture from March 11-18, 2026, was primarily shaped by its significant commitment to international peacekeeping, ongoing military modernization, and complex diplomatic engagements amidst escalating global tensions. The nation finalized the deployment of 8,000 troops to Gaza as part of a US-led stabilization force, a move that coincided with severe disruptions to its maritime logistics due to the Strait of Hormuz crisis. Concurrently, Indonesia advanced its defense capabilities through major acquisitions, including the BrahMos supersonic missile system from India and Rafale fighter jets from France, signaling a strategic diversification of its arms suppliers. Diplomatically, Jakarta navigated intricate relationships with key partners like the US, China, and Australia, while reaffirming its "free and active" foreign policy by declining to co-sponsor a UN resolution on Iran. The period underscored Indonesia's ambition for a blue-water navy and its efforts to enhance maritime security and economic resilience in a volatile geopolitical landscape.

Key Security Developments

- Gaza Peacekeeping Deployment Finalized

As of March 11, 2026, Indonesia's Ministry of Defense finalized the force structure for the International Stabilization Force (ISF) in Gaza, committing a substantial 8,000 troops to the mission. This deployment, the largest single-country contribution to the Donald Trump-led "Board of Peace" initiative, includes 5,000 Navy personnel integrated into three composite brigades. The mission represents a significant operational and diplomatic undertaking for Indonesia, placing its forces in a kinetically volatile Middle East theater.

- Impact of Strait of Hormuz Crisis on Maritime Strategy

The closure of the Strait of Hormuz since March 2, 2026, following the escalation of the U.S.-Israel-Iran conflict, has profoundly impacted Indonesia's maritime strategy. Drone strikes on Omani ports like Salalah and Duqm on March 3, 2026, disrupted crucial fuel storage facilities that Indonesia had designated as replenishment hubs for its Mediterranean and Gulf of Aden deployments. This crisis has transformed Indonesian naval assets from neutral brokers into potential targets within a non-linear warfare environment, stress-testing Jakarta's "independent and active" foreign policy.

- Naval Modernization and Blue-Water Ambition

The Indonesian Navy (TNI-AL) is undergoing a "massive qualitative transformation" in March 2026, driven by the induction of high-tonnage Multipurpose Combat Ships (PPA), I-Class frigates, and Scorpène Evolved submarines. This modernization aligns with Indonesia's aggressive pursuit of a blue-water navy posture, articulated through the ASTA CITA strategic directive and codified under LAW NO. 3/2025, aiming to project power beyond the archipelago into the Western Indian Ocean and the South China Sea.

- Defense Acquisition: BrahMos Supersonic Missiles

Indonesia has agreed with India to procure the BrahMos supersonic missile system to modernize its armed forces and strengthen maritime defense capabilities. This acquisition, reported on March 11, 2026, is valued between US$200 million and $350 million and is seen as a strategic move to transform Indonesia's archipelago into a maritime barrier, enhancing regional deterrence from the South China Sea to the Indian Ocean. It also reflects Indonesia's strategy to diversify its military suppliers and avoid dependence on a single provider.

- Fighter Jet Diversification Strategy

Indonesia received its first three Rafale fighter jets as part of an USD 8.1 billion agreement with France, with wider deliveries scheduled to start in 2026. Concurrently, Indonesia remains a partner in South Korea's KF-21 Boramae program and is considering Türkiye's KAAN and China's Chengdu J-10 fighters. This multi-source procurement strategy aims to spread fighter risk beyond traditional suppliers and maintain strategic autonomy.

- Increased Defense Budget for 2026

The 2026 defense budget has been approved at IDR 187.1 trillion (approximately US$11.8 billion), an increase from IDR 166.26 trillion in 2025. Despite this increase, it remains at only 0.8% of GDP, significantly lower than the regional average of 1.5%. This fiscal reality necessitates reliance on unique financing models, such as the trilateral "Sovereign Venture Defense" involving Qatari capital and Turkish technology for I-Class frigates.

- Maritime Security Index Improvement Initiative

The Indonesian Maritime Security Agency (Bakamla) reported a Maritime Security Index (IKL) of 60 out of 100 in January 2026, a metric used to assess maritime safety and enforcement capacity. Bakamla aims to improve this index, noting that each one-point increase could correspond to IDR 109.7 trillion in potential investment, linking stronger patrols and inter-agency coordination to investor confidence in the blue economy.

- Cybersecurity: Child Online Safety Regulation

Indonesia is set to enforce a comprehensive regulation, Government Regulation No. 17 of 2025 (PP Tunas), to protect children online, with implementation of age restrictions for high-risk digital platforms beginning on March 28, 2026. This regulation, signed by President Prabowo Subianto on March 28, 2025, aims to curb online risks such as abuse, exploitation, and harmful content, and requires digital platforms to adjust their operations for compliance.

- Elevated Military Alert Status

A senior Indonesian lawmaker confirmed that the military's decision to raise its alert status to "Siaga 1" (Alert 1) reflects a strong commitment to safeguarding national security. This heightened alert, reported on March 9, 2026, is primarily in response to rising global tensions, particularly those emanating from the Middle East.

- Diplomatic Engagement with Australia on Common Security

Australian Defence Minister Richard Marles visited Jakarta on March 12, 2026, to discuss the operationalization of the Jakarta Treaty on Common Security, signed in February. Practical steps include embedding an Indonesian colonel in Australia's 1st Brigade in Darwin and scoping infrastructure work for an Indonesian training facility in Morotai. This engagement highlights a subtle but significant convergence in how both nations interpret and seek to prevent regional disorder.

- US-Indonesia Trade Deal and Energy Implications

The Agreement on Reciprocal Trade (ART), signed between Indonesia and the United States in February 2026, eliminated tariffs on 1,819 Indonesian products but obliges Indonesia to import approximately US$15 billion worth of US energy commodities annually. This commitment, coupled with the turmoil in the Middle East and the Strait of Hormuz closure, has prompted Indonesia to pivot from Middle Eastern energy supplies to US imports, potentially redefining its energy trajectory but also increasing its vulnerability to external shocks and US policy dependence.

- Indonesia Declines UN Resolution on Iran

On March 13, 2026, Indonesia declined to co-sponsor United Nations Security Council Resolution 2817, which condemned Iran for escalating tensions in the Middle East. The Foreign Ministry stated that Indonesia found the draft resolution lacked balance in addressing the conflict and reiterated its stance that diplomatic engagement remains the most effective way to reduce tensions, particularly in the dispute involving Iran, Israel, and the United States.

Geopolitical Impact and Regional Dynamics

Indonesia's recent security and diplomatic activities underscore its strategic positioning amidst a rapidly fragmenting global order. The commitment of 8,000 troops to the Gaza peacekeeping mission, a significant contribution to a US-led initiative, demonstrates Indonesia's willingness to engage actively in global stability efforts, even as it navigates complex regional dynamics. This move, however, coincides with the severe disruption of its naval logistics due to the Strait of Hormuz crisis, highlighting the direct impact of Middle East instability on Indonesia's blue-water navy ambitions and its "free and active" foreign policy. The crisis has forced Indonesia to re-evaluate its energy supply chains, pivoting towards US energy imports, which could reshape its long-term energy security and economic resilience, but also increase its dependence on a single partner.

The acquisition of the BrahMos supersonic missile system from India and the diversification of fighter jet suppliers (Rafale from France, continued KF-21 partnership with South Korea, and consideration of KAAN from Türkiye and J-10 from China) reflect Indonesia's strategic hedging in the face of intensifying great-power competition, particularly in the South China Sea. By strengthening its anti-ship capabilities, Indonesia aims to transform its archipelago into a formidable maritime barrier, enhancing deterrence and maintaining strategic autonomy without aligning exclusively with any major power. This approach is crucial for regional stability, as it allows Indonesia to assert its sovereignty and protect its maritime interests while avoiding direct entanglement in rivalries.

Diplomatic relations during this period were multifaceted. The operationalization of the Jakarta Treaty on Common Security with Australia, including military cooperation initiatives, signals a deepening bilateral defense partnership focused on shared security concerns in the Indo-Pacific. Concurrently, Indonesia reaffirmed its commitment to strengthening economic and technological ties with China, supporting Beijing's role as host of APEC 2026. The decision to decline co-sponsorship of a UN resolution condemning Iran, citing a lack of balance, further illustrates Indonesia's commitment to non-alignment and its preference for diplomatic solutions in complex international disputes. These engagements demonstrate Indonesia's balancing act between major powers (US, China, Australia) and its consistent advocacy for de-escalation and multilateralism in a volatile global environment.

Military and Defense Analysis

Indonesia's military and defense posture in March 2026 is characterized by an ambitious modernization drive aimed at achieving a blue-water navy capability and diversifying its defense procurement. The Indonesian Navy (TNI-AL) is undergoing a significant transformation with the acquisition of high-tonnage Multipurpose Combat Ships (PPA), I-Class frigates, and Scorpène Evolved submarines. This qualitative uplift is critical for Indonesia's stated goal of projecting power beyond its archipelago into the Western Indian Ocean and the South China Sea, as outlined in the ASTA CITA strategic directive. The deployment of 5,000 Navy personnel as part of the 8,000-strong Gaza peacekeeping force highlights the TNI-AL's growing capacity for international operations, though the logistical challenges posed by the Strait of Hormuz crisis underscore vulnerabilities in its extended operational reach.

Defense spending for 2026 is set at IDR 187.1 trillion (approximately US$11.8 billion), an increase from the previous year, yet it remains at 0.8% of GDP, which is below regional averages. This fiscal constraint has led Indonesia to explore innovative financing models, such as the "Sovereign Venture Defense" with Qatari capital and Turkish technology for naval acquisitions, allowing it to bypass traditional budget ceilings. Beyond naval assets, the Indonesian Air Force is diversifying its fighter fleet with the delivery of Rafale jets and continued participation in the KF-21 Boramae program, while also considering Turkish KAAAN and Chinese J-10 aircraft. The planned procurement of India's BrahMos supersonic missile system further enhances Indonesia's anti-access/area-denial (A2/AD) capabilities, particularly in its archipelagic waters and strategic chokepoints, strengthening its deterrence posture against potential threats in the South China Sea.

Domestic defense industry developments are also a focus, with Indonesia developing its first homegrown unmanned submarine, a significant technological milestone. The government is also integrating defense policy with strategic resource control through the Mineral Industry Agency (MIA), managing critical minerals vital for defense and green energy sectors. While these efforts aim to build an independent and competitive defense industry, limited R&D funding remains a challenge. Overall, Indonesia's military analysis reveals a nation actively modernizing its forces and diversifying its strategic partnerships to enhance its defensive and power projection capabilities, albeit within a constrained budget and a complex geopolitical environment.

Outlook and Forecast

Short-term trends (1-3 months): In the immediate future, Indonesia will likely remain heavily engaged in managing the implications of the Middle East crisis, particularly concerning its energy supply chains and the operational security of its Gaza peacekeeping contingent. The nation's diplomatic efforts will continue to focus on de-escalation and maintaining its non-aligned stance in global conflicts. Domestically, the implementation of the new child online safety regulation by March 28, 2026, will be a key focus for cybersecurity and digital governance. Furthermore, the operationalization of the Jakarta Treaty on Common Security with Australia will see initial practical steps, including military exchanges and infrastructure scoping, setting a precedent for future bilateral defense cooperation.

Critical flashpoints and risk areas: The primary flashpoint remains the escalating conflict in the Middle East, particularly the Strait of Hormuz crisis, which poses significant risks to Indonesia's maritime logistics and energy security. Any further escalation could disrupt global trade routes and directly impact Indonesia's economy and naval deployments. Tensions in the South China Sea, though not explicitly highlighted as a flashpoint in the reporting period, remain a persistent concern, especially given Indonesia's ongoing defense acquisitions aimed at bolstering its maritime deterrence. The complex trade relationship with the US, particularly the energy import obligations under the ART, could also become a risk area if global energy prices fluctuate significantly or if US trade policies shift.

Indicators to monitor: Key indicators to monitor include the stability of oil and gas prices and the effectiveness of Indonesia's diversified energy import strategy. The progress and security of the Indonesian peacekeeping mission in Gaza will be crucial, as will any shifts in the broader Middle East conflict dynamics. Domestically, the success of the child online safety regulation's implementation will indicate Indonesia's capacity for digital governance. In defense, the continued delivery and integration of new defense assets, such as Rafale jets and BrahMos missiles, will be important markers of its modernization progress. Diplomatically, Indonesia's rhetoric and actions regarding major power rivalries, particularly between the US and China, will reveal the practical application of its "free and active" foreign policy.

Strategic recommendations: Indonesia should accelerate its renewable energy development and strengthen domestic clean energy supply chains to reduce its vulnerability to external energy shocks and US policy dependence, as highlighted by the ART's energy clause. Diversifying trade partners beyond major powers would also enhance economic resilience. Militarily, while pursuing blue-water capabilities, Indonesia should prioritize maritime domain awareness (MDA) and robust coastal defense to secure its archipelagic waters and critical sea lines of communication. Diplomatically, maintaining a consistent and balanced approach in major power rivalries, emphasizing multilateralism and de-escalation, will be vital to safeguarding its national interests and contributing to regional stability. Investing further in its domestic defense industry and R&D, particularly in critical minerals and advanced technologies, will also be crucial for long-term strategic autonomy.
