Executive Summary

During the period of June 20-27, 2026, South Korea significantly advanced its defense capabilities and engaged in active diplomacy across key regional and global fronts. A major strategic shift was announced with plans to train 500,000 "drone warriors" and procure tens of thousands of drones by 2029, directly addressing evolving threats from North Korea and incorporating lessons from modern warfare. Diplomatic efforts saw improved ties with Japan, marked by upcoming defense talks and renewed military cooperation, while relations with China focused on economic collaboration despite ongoing maritime disputes. Concurrently, Russia expressed strong disapproval of South Korea's alignment with Western sanctions and joint military activities with the U.S. near the DPRK border, highlighting increasing geopolitical complexities. Maritime security in the Strait of Hormuz remained a critical concern, with South Korean vessels navigating a high-risk zone and discussions ongoing about potential naval deployments.

Key Security Developments

- Military Activities and Exercises in the Philippines

South Korean troops participated in the annual Exercise Kamandag (Venom) in the Philippines on June 19, alongside forces from the United States and Japan. This multilateral drill included an amphibious raid along the coast of Cavite province, south of Manila. The exercise underscores South Korea's commitment to regional security cooperation and interoperability with key allies in the Indo-Pacific.

- Major Pivot to Drone Warfare

On June 26, South Korea's Defense Ministry announced a significant strategic shift towards drone warfare, planning to train 500,000 "drone warriors" and procure 60,000 drones by 2029, with 11,000 scheduled for deployment in 2026. This initiative aims to counter North Korea's expanding drone capabilities and adapt to the changing nature of modern warfare, as observed in conflicts in Ukraine and the Middle East. Defense Minister Ahn Gyu-back stated that drones should become a "universal combat tool" for all troops.

- Development of Counter-Drone Technologies

As part of its drone strategy, South Korea is also expanding its counter-drone capabilities, including the development of advanced technologies such as laser weapons and high-power microwave systems. This modernization plan seeks to enhance defenses against North Korean unmanned aerial systems, which pose threats to both military facilities and critical national infrastructure.

- South Korea-Japan Defense Talks

South Korea and Japan are scheduled to hold defense ministers' talks in Seoul on June 28, marking the first visit by a Japanese defense minister for bilateral discussions in 11 years. The meeting between Defense Minister Ahn Gyu-back and Japanese Defense Minister Shinjiro Koizumi is expected to cover strengthening military exchanges, including routine refueling support from Japan's Self-Defense Forces for the South Korean Air Force's "Black Eagles" aerobatic team. This follows a joint search-and-rescue exercise (SAREX) conducted on June 7, signaling a resumption of defense exchanges.

- South Korea-China Diplomatic Engagement and Maritime Disputes

South Korean Prime Minister Kim Min-seok and Chinese Premier Li Qiang met in Dalian, China, on June 23, the first such meeting in seven years, pledging to bolster bilateral relations and expand economic and technological cooperation. However, on June 26, South Korean President Lee Jae-myung expressed concern over "illegal fishing" by Chinese vessels near the Northern Limit Line (NLL) in the West Sea, calling for a firm response. China's Foreign Ministry responded by stating that both sides maintain close communication on fishing-related issues and urge fishermen to follow regulations.

- Russia's Criticism of South Korea's Stance

On June 25, the Russian Foreign Ministry urged South Korea to cease pressure and sanctions against North Korea and expressed regret over Seoul's alignment with Western anti-Russian rhetoric, including that from the European Union. Russia also conveyed concerns regarding "confrontational military activities by South Korea and the U.S. near the border with the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK)," suggesting these actions escalate tensions on the Korean Peninsula.

- Maritime Security in the Strait of Hormuz

Two vessels operated by South Korean shipping companies successfully navigated through the Strait of Hormuz on June 22, following a U.S.-Iran ceasefire agreement. However, 22 other South Korean-linked vessels remain stranded in the broader high-risk zone. South Korea's Foreign Minister Park Jin discussed maritime security in the Strait of Hormuz with Iranian Foreign Minister Abbas Araghchi on June 26, emphasizing the importance of safe and free navigation. South Korea is also considering deploying naval minesweepers to the strait.

- U.S. Defense Cooperation and Acquisitions

South Korea's Vice Defense Minister Lee Doo-hee met with U.S. House of Representatives members in Washington, D.C., on June 24, seeking support for the transfer of wartime operational control (OPCON) and the acquisition of nuclear-powered submarines. Discussions also covered expanding shipbuilding, maintenance, repair, and overhaul (MRO) cooperation, as well as securing low-enriched uranium for submarines. Separately, the U.S. State Department approved a possible $106 million sale of 766 Boeing Joint Direct Attack Munition (JDAM) guidance kits to South Korea on June 5, enhancing precision-strike capabilities against hardened North Korean targets.

- Cybersecurity Threats from North Korea

On June 27, officials from South Korea, the U.S., and Japan convened in Washington to address North Korea's cyber threats. This follows a report from January 2026 indicating a 26% surge in cybersecurity breaches in South Korea in 2025, with AI-powered attacks and deepfake technology identified as emerging threats for 2026. The South Korean government is establishing a public-private joint response system to counter these AI-driven cyber threats.

- Defense Industry Developments and Global Partnerships

South Korea's defense industry is experiencing rapid growth, with projected revenue for its four major defense companies expected to reach $37 billion in 2026, nearly quadrupling from 2021. South Korea has become the second-largest arms supplier to European NATO members, behind the United States. Notable developments include Hanwha Aerospace's K9 howitzer establishing production sites across four continents, with the UAE confirmed as the latest, and partnerships with Northrop Grumman for missile programs and Rheinmetall for NATO market co-development.

Geopolitical Impact and Regional Dynamics

South Korea's security developments this week underscore a complex and evolving geopolitical landscape, significantly impacting regional stability and relations with major powers. The warming of South Korea-Japan defense ties, evidenced by the upcoming defense ministers' meeting and renewed military cooperation initiatives like the SAREX, is a crucial step towards strengthening the trilateral security framework with the United States. This rapprochement, despite historical sensitivities, is driven by shared concerns over North Korea's escalating threats and a desire to present a united front in the Indo-Pacific. However, the cautious approach to a bilateral military logistics pact (ACSA) highlights lingering domestic unease and the need for careful diplomatic navigation.

Relations with China remain a delicate balancing act. While the premiers' meeting on June 23 signaled a desire for "full-scale restoration" of ties and deepened economic cooperation, President Lee Jae-myung's firm stance on "illegal fishing" by Chinese vessels near the NLL demonstrates persistent points of friction. South Korea seeks to maintain strong economic links with China while upholding its maritime sovereignty and security interests, a challenge given China's growing regional assertiveness. Beijing's criticism of South Korea's extended deterrence cooperation with the U.S. further illustrates the pressure Seoul faces to avoid taking sides in the U.S.-China strategic competition.

The deepening "blood alliance" between Russia and North Korea is a significant destabilizing factor. Russia's strong condemnation of South Korea's joint military activities with the U.S. and its alignment with Western sanctions against Moscow signals a hardening of Russia's pro-Pyongyang stance. This dynamic complicates efforts to denuclearize the Korean Peninsula and increases the risk of miscalculation, as Russia's support potentially emboldens North Korea. South Korea's participation in multilateral drills in the Philippines with the U.S. and Japan also reflects a broader strategy to enhance collective security and deter aggression beyond the immediate peninsula.

Military and Defense Analysis

South Korea's military is undergoing a significant transformation, with a clear focus on adapting to modern warfare and countering North Korean threats. The announced pivot to drone warfare is a cornerstone of this modernization, aiming to integrate 500,000 "drone warriors" and tens of thousands of unmanned systems across all armed services by 2029. This massive procurement of 60,000 drones, including 11,000 by year-end 2026, and the development of counter-drone technologies like lasers, indicate a shift towards a more distributed, networked, and technologically advanced force posture. This move is a direct response to North Korea's successful drone incursions and the lessons learned from the Ukraine conflict, where low-cost drones have proven to be game-changers.

Defense spending trends continue to support these ambitious modernization programs. The acquisition of U.S. Standard Missile-6 (SM-6) interceptors for Aegis destroyers by 2034, a $352 million project, significantly boosts South Korea's missile defense capabilities against anti-ship ballistic missiles, cruise missiles, and aircraft. This acquisition, along with the approved $106 million sale of Boeing JDAM guidance kits to enhance precision-strike capabilities, demonstrates a sustained investment in high-end conventional deterrence. Furthermore, the formal process initiated for acquiring nuclear-powered submarines signals a long-term strategic shift towards enhanced underwater capabilities and extended deterrence, though this remains a sensitive area requiring U.S. support for low-enriched uranium.

The robust growth of South Korea's defense industry is another critical aspect of its military analysis. With projected revenues of $37 billion for major defense companies in 2026, and its emergence as the second-largest arms supplier to NATO, South Korea is not only modernizing its own forces but also becoming a significant global defense exporter. The global expansion of Hanwha Aerospace's K9 howitzer production and partnerships with major Western defense contractors like Northrop Grumman and Rheinmetall highlight the increasing sophistication and competitiveness of the South Korean defense industry. This industrial strength provides a domestic foundation for sustained capability development and reduces reliance on external suppliers for critical systems.

Outlook and Forecast

Short-term trends (1-3 months): In the immediate future, South Korea will likely continue its dual-track approach of strengthening alliances while cautiously engaging with regional powers. The upcoming defense talks with Japan on June 28 will be a key indicator of further military cooperation, particularly regarding logistical support and joint exercises. We can expect continued emphasis on the integration of drone technology into military doctrine and training, with initial deployments of the 11,000 planned drones by year-end 2026. Diplomatic exchanges with China will likely continue to balance economic interests with firm stances on sovereignty issues like illegal fishing. Tensions with Russia are expected to remain elevated, with Moscow likely to reiterate its warnings against South Korea's involvement in Ukraine and its military posture near North Korea. Maritime security in the Strait of Hormuz will remain a focus, with ongoing efforts to ensure safe passage for the remaining stranded vessels and potential decisions on deploying minesweepers.

Critical flashpoints and risk areas: The Demilitarized Zone (DMZ) and the Northern Limit Line (NLL) in the West Sea remain critical flashpoints due to North Korea's continued military provocations and Chinese fishing activities. Any significant North Korean missile or nuclear test, or aggressive actions in the maritime domain, could rapidly escalate tensions. The Strait of Hormuz also presents a risk, as the fragile U.S.-Iran ceasefire could break down, jeopardizing South Korean shipping and potentially requiring military intervention. Cybersecurity threats, particularly those leveraging AI and deepfake technology from North Korea, pose a persistent and evolving risk to critical infrastructure and national security. The ongoing geopolitical competition between the U.S. and China, and Russia's deepening ties with North Korea, create an environment where South Korea could be caught in escalating proxy tensions.

Indicators to monitor: Key indicators to monitor include the outcomes of the South Korea-Japan defense talks and any announcements regarding future joint military exercises or logistics agreements. Developments in inter-Korean relations, particularly any North Korean reactions to South Korea's drone expansion or joint drills, will be crucial. The stability of the U.S.-Iran ceasefire agreement and the safe passage of all South Korean vessels through the Strait of Hormuz should be closely watched. Progress on South Korea's nuclear-powered submarine program and related U.S. support will indicate the long-term trajectory of its defense posture. Finally, the frequency and sophistication of cyberattacks, especially those attributed to North Korea, will serve as a barometer of the evolving threat landscape.

Strategic recommendations: South Korea should continue to strengthen its alliances with the U.S. and Japan, leveraging these partnerships for advanced technology transfer and intelligence sharing, particularly in areas like missile defense and cybersecurity. Accelerating the integration of AI and unmanned systems into its military, coupled with robust counter-drone capabilities, is essential for maintaining a qualitative edge against North Korea. Diplomatically, Seoul should maintain open channels with Beijing to manage maritime disputes and encourage China to play a constructive role in regional stability, while clearly articulating its national security interests. Diversifying energy sources and securing maritime trade routes, potentially through multilateral cooperation in areas like the Strait of Hormuz, should be a priority. Finally, investing heavily in cybersecurity defenses and offensive capabilities against state-sponsored cyber threats is paramount to protect critical infrastructure and national assets.

- Nearly 10 Chinese, Russian military aircraft briefly enter Korea's air defense zone: JCS (2026-06-27 05:57)

Nearly 10 Chinese and Russian military aircraft briefly entered and left Korea's air defense identification zone (KADIZ) above the country's eastern and southern waters, Korea's military said Saturday. The Chinese and Russian military aircraft did not violate Korea's airspace, according to the Joint Chiefs of Staff (JCS), adding that it detected the aircraft before they entered the air defense zone. The Korean military dispatched Air Force fighter jets to prepare for any possible contingencies. The air defense zone is not territorial airspace but is delineated to call on foreign planes to identify themselves so as to prevent accidental clashes. The brief entry appears to have occurred during joint air drills between the two countries, according to a JCS official.

- [\[EXPLAINER\] What Lee Jae Myung's selective enlistment plan means for Korea's shrinking military](#) (2026-06-27 00:02)

Korea has one of the lowest birthrates in the world and a mandatory military service requirement that has shaped the lives of virtually every man in the country for generations. Now those two facts are on a collision course. Every able-bodied Korean man between the ages of 18 and 38 is required by law to serve in the military. Most undergo a physical examination around age 19 and complete their service in their 20s, typically spending 18 months as rank-and-file personnel in the Army or Marine Corps, or slightly longer, in the Navy for 20 months or the Air Force for 21 months. Those who qualify and apply can serve instead as noncommissioned officers (NCOs) — a rank between enlisted personnel and commissioned officers — or as commissioned officers, with initial commitments of four and three years, respectively. But because the rank-and-file route is relatively shorter and requires no selection process, most conscripts take it, despite the limited personal freedom, a strict environment and a long history of hazing and violence within military units. The system was designed for a country

- Uncovering stories of Cheonggye Stream's restoration (2026-06-27 00:02)

At his final lecture for Royal Asiatic Society (RAS) Korea on Dec. 10, 2003, Horace Grant Underwood II shared stories of the past while discussing late Joseon-era and colonial-era photos. At one point, he came to a photo of Cheonggye Stream in the early 20th century and commented on the still-unrealized plan to uncover the waterway: “They say they want to return it to being a clean stream. It was never a clean stream!” Indeed, within a few decades of establishing Seoul as the capital in 1394, the newly founded Joseon government had come to rely on Cheonggye Stream as the city's principal conduit to flush waste out of the city. Attempts to cover the stream began during the 1910-45 Japanese colonial rule, but really took off in the late 1950s, when, over a period of two decades, the stream was covered in stages for a distance of 6 kilometers. Atop this was built an elevated expressway, the first section of which opened in 1969, seven years before it was completed. A well-known section of the covered stream was Hwanghak-dong Flea Market, which had grown to hundreds of stalls, many of

With a metallic click, cold metal cuffs close around both wrists. “You are now in custody.” Suddenly, moving one’s arms freely becomes impossible. The discomfort sets in quickly, as even scratching one’s head becomes an awkward struggle inside the moving prison transport van. But after passing through a firmly shut iron gate and arriving at Cheongju Women’s Prison, where pale yellow buildings surround a small exercise yard, the handcuffs suddenly seem like the least of one’s problems. Inside one of the prison’s shared cells, the space is so cramped and crowded that there is barely enough room to stretch out an arm, even after the handcuffs are removed. The grim reality is that Cheongju Women’s Prison is considered to be in better condition than most prisons in the country. As Korea’s only correctional facility exclusively for women, it is generally regarded as one of the better-equipped institutions. Yet even here, the persistent problem of overcrowding proved impossible to escape. The Cheongju Women's Prison was designed to accommodate 619 inmates at 100 percent capacity

- Police capture suspect behind stabbing at museum in central Seoul (2026-06-26 11:57)

Police on Friday captured a suspect accused of stabbing a man at a museum in central Seoul, hours after he fled the scene, officials said. The suspect in his 70s, whose identity remains unknown, is accused of stabbing the victim in his 40s with a sickle at the Ilmin Museum of Art early Friday morning, according to police. He then fled the scene. The Jongno Police Station said it put the suspect under urgent arrest after finding him hiding at a friend's residence in Seoul's Gwanak Ward at 5:50 p.m. The victim was being treated at a nearby hospital after sustaining non-life-threatening injuries, according to officials. Police plan to look into the exact circumstances of the incident and the suspect's motives before filing for a warrant to arrest him.

- Supreme Court finalizes acquittal of 'Squid Game' actor O Yeong-su in sexual misconduct case (2026-06-26 11:57)

The top court on Friday finalized the acquittal of "Squid Game" actor O Yeong-su on charges of sexually harassing a woman in 2017, ending a legal battle that had lasted more than three years since his indictment. The Supreme Court dismissed the prosecution's appeal and upheld the lower court's ruling that acquitted the 82-year-old of sexual assault charges, according to judicial officials. O was indicted without physical detention in 2022 on charges of hugging and kissing a woman on the cheek against her will during a regional tour for a play in 2017. The district court had initially sentenced the actor to an eight-month prison term, suspended for two years, but the appellate court overturned the ruling and acquitted O of the charges. The appeals court at the time said O may have committed sexual assault but still acquitted him, citing the need to protect the defendant's interest in cases where reasonable doubt remains. The prosecution has since appealed the acquittal, but the top court dismissed the appeal. O won Best Performance by an Actor in a Supporting Role on TV at the 2022 Golden G

- N. Korean defectors revisit heavily-fortified border for fleeting look at home (2026-06-26 11:57)

For the nearly 100 North Korean defectors who boarded a special train heading north from Seoul on Friday, the journey was a painful exercise in geographical proximity. Traveling to the edge of the Demilitarized Zone, the heavily mined buffer strip separating the two Koreas, they reached an elevated vantage point that offered the closest physical view of their native towns since they risked their lives to cross one of the world's most heavily fortified borders. The daylong pilgrimage, organized by the Ministry of Unification, served as a poignant prelude to the upcoming third annual North Korean Defectors' Day on July 14. The national holiday was established to recognize the civic integration of the more than 34,000 defectors now living in the South, a community increasingly referred to by officials as "bukhyangmin" — defectors who honor their North Korean heritage while adapting to the complexities of life in the democratic South. The group — comprising community organizers, vulnerable families and young university students — arrived via the DMZ Peace Connection Train at Dorasa

- 2 foreigners flee to Brunei after vandalizing Busan subway (2026-06-26 11:57)

Police said Friday they have identified and are pursuing two foreign nationals accused of vandalizing a subway train with graffiti at a rail depot in Busan before fleeing to another country. The Busan Gangseo Police Station said the suspects are an Australian man in his 20s and a Belgian man in his 30s, facing charges of trespassing and property damage. They allegedly entered the depot in Gangseo District at around 2:51 a.m. on Tuesday and spray-painted a two-car subway train. CCTV footage showed them scaling a fence before carrying out the graffiti attack. Officers said the painting itself took only about three minutes, although the two men remained inside the depot for roughly 18 minutes before leaving. After the incident, the suspects boarded a KTX train bound for Seoul. Police believe they deliberately attempted to evade detection by wearing face masks, changing clothes multiple times, paying with cash and getting off at different locations. Investigators said the pair flew to Brunei the following day. Police tracked their movements by reviewing CCTV footage before confirming through

- US professor questioned over alleged defamation of President Lee (2026-06-26 11:57)

Morse Tan, a Korean American professor at U.S.-based Liberty University, has been questioned by police over his alleged defamation of President Lee Jae Myung, his lawyers said Friday. The U.S. professor underwent a two-hour private questioning session Thursday, according to his lawyers. Tan is accused of falsely claiming at a press conference in the United States last year that Lee was involved in murder as a teenager and had been sent to a juvenile detention center for the crime. "We believe further questioning to be highly unlikely," the lawyers said in a notice to the press. Tan was originally scheduled for questioning Wednesday but demanded a change in schedule, citing concerns of media exposure. After entering the country on May 28 to observe the June 3 local elections, Tan had failed to comply with earlier police summons. Consequently, police requested a travel ban on the professor, and the justice ministry earlier barred him from leaving the country until Tuesday.

- Seoul court upholds 6-month prison sentence for US streamer Johnny Somali (2026-06-26 11:57)

A Seoul appeals court upheld a six-month prison sentence Thursday for American YouTuber Johnny Somali, rejecting appeals by both prosecutors and the defendant in a case involving disruptive public acts and sexually explicit deepfakes. The Seoul Western District Court's Criminal Appeals Division 1 maintained the lower court's sentence of six months in prison and 20 days of detention for the streamer, whose legal name is Ramsey Khalid Ismael. However, the court set aside an earlier order to confiscate a mobile phone used in the crimes, stating the confiscation lacked legal grounds. Somali faced charges including interfering with business operations and distributing sexually explicit deepfakes under the Act on Special Cases Concerning the Punishment of Sexual Crimes. The content creator drew widespread public anger after kissing the Statue of Peace, a memorial to victims of Japan's wartime sexual slavery. The formal charges stemmed partly from an October 2024 incident at a convenience store in Seoul's Mapo District. He played loud music and spilled cup noodle broth on a table, disrupting bu

- Korea launches joint drone headquarters (2026-06-26 11:57)

The Ministry of National Defense unveiled a sweeping overhaul of the military's drone operations Friday, shifting combat responsibilities from a centralized drone command to individual service branches while creating a new defense drone headquarters under the ministry. Under the restructuring, operational control of drone units will be distributed across the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps. The existing drone operations command headquarters will be reorganized into a defense drone headquarters focused on force development, procurement support and cooperation with the private sector — no longer commanding combat units directly. Defense Minister Ahn Gyu-back said recent conflicts in Ukraine and the Middle East had demonstrated that drones had become game changers on the battlefield. "In the past, a small number of expensive weapons systems dominated the battlefield. Now, large numbers of low-cost drones are fundamentally changing the way wars are fought," Ahn said. Ahn said the policy is intended to strengthen the military's defense capabilities against unmanned aerial veh

- Ex-first lady sentenced to 7 years in prison for taking gifts for job appointments (2026-06-26 11:57)

A Seoul court on Friday sentenced former first lady Kim Keon Hee to seven years in prison for taking expensive gifts in return for job appointments and business favors. The Seoul Central District Court handed down the sentence to Kim, the wife of ousted former President Yoon Suk Yeol, after she was indicted on charges of accepting bribes for mediation, including over 100 million won ($64,750) worth of jewelry in exchange for a government job for a son-in-law of a construction company chairman. In total, she was charged with taking approximately 300 million won worth of gifts, and the court found her guilty on all counts. "The defendant disregarded the social responsibilities associated with the position of first lady and used it merely as a means to pursue her private interests," presiding judge Cho Sun-pyo said during the hearing, which was televised live. Kim was indicted in December on charges of receiving a Van Cleef & Arpels necklace and other jewelry from the construction company chairman between March and May 2022; a golden turtle ornament in April 2022 from Lee Bae-yong, former h

- Lee says 3 more Korean vessels expected to exit Strait of Hormuz over weekend (2026-06-26 11:57)

President Lee Jae Myung said Friday that he expects three more Korean-operated vessels stranded in the Strait of Hormuz to exit the waterway this weekend, leaving only two that are unable to leave the area due to other issues. Lee made the remark on X, formerly Twitter, while sharing a news article on the recent departure of eight Korean-linked ships from the strait that had effectively been shut since late February following the U.S. and Israeli airstrikes against Iran. "Now there are five remaining vessels, and three of them, excluding the Namu, which is under repair, and another vessel that has stated its intention to stay due to cargo issues, are expected to pass through before the end of the weekend," he wrote. The Namu, operated by major Korean shipping company HMM, was damaged in early May after being attacked by what the government has said were likely anti-ship missiles developed by Iran. "The efforts of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, the (presidential) National Security Office and the National Intelligence Service were considerable and effective in enabling an escape of vess

- Korea dispatches envoys to NATO, Europe to secure space, defense ties (2026-06-26 11:57)

In a strategic move bridging commercial space tech with Western defense architecture, Korea is dispatching a joint public-private delegation to the European Union, NATO and key Eastern European allies to secure a foothold in the rapidly integrating global space and defense markets. The Ministry of Foreign Affairs and the Korea AeroSpace Administration (KASA) said Friday that the delegation will tour Belgium, Romania and Poland beginning Monday. The multicity tour will feature a robust contingent of Korean tech and defense giants — including Hanwha Systems, Korea Aerospace Industries and Hyundai Rotem — alongside cutting-edge space startups like Innospace and Nara Space. The mission underscores Seoul's ambition to transform its domestic space capabilities into an export-driven powerhouse, moving past traditional satellites into space-defense convergence. By targeting Brussels, Bucharest and Warsaw, Seoul is directly positioning its defense-heavy space sector to meet the heightened security anxieties and modernization demands gripping the North Atlantic alliance and Eastern

- 8 more Korean-operated vessels exit Strait of Hormuz (2026-06-26 11:57)

Eight more Korean-operated vessels have exited the Strait of Hormuz following last week's ceasefire agreement between the United States and Iran, bringing the total number of vessels that have left the region to five, the maritime ministry said Friday. The Ministry of Oceans and Fisheries said the ships safely passed through the strategic waterway and are sailing normally. A total of 37 Korean sailors were aboard the vessels, with one vessel bound for Korea, the ministry said. With the latest departure, the number of Korean-linked ships remaining inside the strait has fallen to five. The ministry said 47 Korean sailors remain in the Persian Gulf, including 30 aboard foreign-flagged ships. Under the ceasefire agreement reached with Washington, Tehran has agreed to allow vessels to transit the Strait of Hormuz without any fees for 60 days following the signing of the interim pact.

- Gyeonggi Province moves to close health care gap for uninsured foreign residents (2026-06-26 05:57)

In an ambitious effort to close a gap in its health care system, Korea's most populous province passed a landmark ordinance to provide medical services to undocumented and uninsured foreign residents, framing the measure as a critical defense for wider public safety. The Gyeonggi Provincial Assembly approved the bill this week, establishing a formal legal framework to connect marginalized foreign workers with regional public health resources. Officials announced the bill's passage Friday, emphasizing that the initiative is designed to prevent preventable medical emergencies and contain potential infectious disease outbreaks before they compromise the broader community. Gyeonggi Province, which surrounds the capital city of Seoul, serves as Korea's industrial and agricultural heartland, relying heavily on a vast network of foreign laborers. Yet, those without valid visas or traditional employment are locked out of the country's National Health Insurance system. For these residents, a routine hospital visit can result in astronomical fees under international billing rates. Combined wit

The former owner of a store in Itaewon who killed self after suffering from a traumatizing experience of helping others killed in the 2022 crowd crush in the Seoul district was Friday named a victim of the disaster, the government said. The deceased, identified only as Park, operated a bar near the site of the accident that left 159 people killed, according to the interior ministry. Park helped transport injured people to hospitals at the time of the disaster, but has since suffered from physical and psychological trauma before being found dead at the age of 37 in April 2025. "The government will continue to make sure all necessary support is provided to the victims and their bereaved families while protecting their honor and privacy," a ministry official said.

- Seoul, Hanoi seek to smooth out corporate tax hurdles (2026-06-26 05:57)

The heads of the tax authorities of Korea and Vietnam met in Seoul on Thursday to hammer out cross-border fiscal disputes, highlighting the growing administrative friction that threatens one of Asia's most critical economic corridors. The 25th Korea-Vietnam Bilateral Tax Commissioners' Meeting between Lim Kwang-hyun, commissioner of the National Tax Service, and Mai Xuan Thanh, director general of Vietnam's General Department of Taxation, comes at a high-stakes juncture. Vietnam is Korea's third-largest trading partner, with bilateral commerce reaching $94.5 billion last year. Meanwhile, Korea remains the single largest foreign direct investor in Vietnam, where more than 2,600 Korean companies operate, a footprint larger than in any other foreign market, according to the state-run Korea Trade-Investment Promotion Agency. That deep integration, however, has led to complex corporate challenges. During the talks, Lim pressed his Vietnamese counterpart on three systemic issues squeezing Korean multinationals: chronic delays in value-added tax refunds, rising volatility in transfer prices

- Korea turns to public for next tourism strategy (2026-06-26 05:57)

As Korea grapples with an accelerating demographic crisis that threatens to hollow out its rural provinces, the government is turning to its own citizens to help rescue local economies. The Ministry of Culture, Sports and Tourism, alongside the Korea Tourism Organization, recently concluded a fast-paced, three-week public policy competition that drew over 1,100 submissions. The competition aims to crowdsource novel, actionable ideas to boost inbound international travel and breathe life into the country's quiet regional economies. The initiative follows directives from February's National Tourism Strategy Council, where officials stressed the urgent need to decentralize tourism away from Seoul. Ultimately, judges selected 20 winning proposals, ranging from regulatory overhauls to transit overhauls. Taking the grand prize was Kim Deok-hyeon, a graduate student in his 20s, who proposed expanding Korea's existing tourism resident ID card to foreign visitors. Currently restricted to citizens, the program grants cardholders discounts on lodging and experiences in designated regions with

- Korea backs 100 small businesses in global export push (2026-06-26 05:57)

Korea is betting that its next generation of global export powerhouses will not come from sprawling family-run conglomerates, but from the kitchens, boutiques and workshops of its neighborhood small business owners. The Ministry of Startups and SMEs said Thursday that it selected 100 small and micro-businesses to receive tailored packaging, regulatory consulting and up to 100 million won ($72,000) each in commercialization funding. The initiative, dubbed

Local to Global, reflects a strategic pivot by Seoul to transform specialized domestic merchants into international consumer brands, capturing growing global demand for Korean food, beauty, fashion and lifestyle products. The final cohort was narrowed down from 649 applicants through a highly competitive 6.5-to-1 audition process. To ensure transparency, the ministry broadcast the proceedings live on YouTube and introduced a public evaluation panel consisting of 15 domestic citizens and five foreign nationals, who vetted products firsthand at the Pangyo Creative Economy Valley startup hub. The selected enterprises relied heavily on dist

- University of Seoul to dispatch global volunteer team to Kyrgyzstan in July (2026-06-26 05:57)

The University of Seoul will dispatch a summer global volunteer team to Kyrgyzstan on July 4 to provide Korean language and cultural programs as well as sports activities in Bishkek, the university said Wednesday. The university held a ceremony to launch “2026 Summer University of Seoul Global Volunteers: Kyrgyzstan” at the Centennial Memorial Hall on its campus in Seoul, Tuesday. The team, consisting of 25 students and three faculty and staff members, marks the university’s 23rd overseas volunteer dispatch to the Central Asian country. During their 12-day stay in Kyrgyzstan, the volunteers will provide Korean language education for local students and ethnic Koreans in Bishkek as well as specialized programs based on their majors and expertise. They will also offer cultural and sports programs, including K-pop dance, cheerleading and taekwondo. In addition, they will provide education programs linked to the Sustainable Development Goals reflecting local conditions. Furthermore, the volunteers plan to engage with local students through cultural and sports activities, including a min

- Korea mobilizes young diaspora across 8 cities in global networking drive (2026-06-26 05:57)

Seeking to transform a historically scattered diaspora into a tightly woven global network, Korea’s Overseas Koreans Agency announced Friday a sweeping expansion of its initiative aimed at empowering the next generation of ethnic Korean leaders living abroad. The program, known as the Future Leader’s Conference (FLC) Reunion, will stage successive networking conventions across eight major global hubs this year. Designed for young professionals aged 25 to 45, the initiative marks a concerted effort by Seoul to deepen ethnic identity, amplify geopolitical influence and build robust networks among the millions of ethnic Koreans worldwide. The global tour kicked off in New York this March and will head to Osaka, Japan, this Saturday, before moving to Munich, Germany, on July 4. Subsequent forums are scheduled throughout autumn in Tashkent, Moscow, Atlanta, Pittsburgh and Paris. Unlike traditional top-down government programs, these reunions are conceived, structured and executed directly by local diaspora participants, allowing them to collaboratively tackle localized challenges. - How Korea's strict waste management confuse new foreign residents (2026-06-26 05:57)

“Are onion skins not food waste?” “Do I have to remove the cap from a glass bottle before throwing it out?” These questions came quickly during a waste sorting workshop for international students at Dongguk University’s Hyehwa Hall in central Seoul on June 17. About 20 participants followed the session in Korean and English, learning how to sort general waste, food waste and recyclables, as well as when to put trash out for collection. Many nodded as instructors explained rules that can feel routine to Koreans but confusing to newcomers. Cristina, 31, from Peru, said the system was difficult to understand when she first arrived because waste is not separated the same way in her home country. “In Peru, we don’t sort trash, so when I first came to Korea, I didn’t know what counted as general waste and what could be recycled,” she said. “I thought I had gotten used to waste sorting after living here for two years, but this was the first time I learned that chicken bones should go into general waste, not food waste.” Tan Yong Xin, 22, from Malaysia, who has been living

President Lee Jae Myung's approval rating dropped to 51 percent, marking its lowest level since he took office in June last year, a poll showed Friday. The survey, conducted by Gallup Korea from Tuesday through Thursday on 1,000 people aged 18 and older, showed that the positive assessment of Lee's performance fell 6 percentage points from the previous survey released two weeks earlier. His negative assessment rose 6 percentage points to 41 percent, marking the first time his disapproval rating exceeded 40 percent in Gallup polls. The economy, housing policies and alleged irregularities involving the National Election Commission, the country's election watchdog, were cited as the main reasons for the negative assessment. Support for the ruling Democratic Party remained the same at 41 percent from the previous survey, while that of the main opposition People Power Party fell 2 percentage points to 27 percent. The survey had a margin of error of plus or minus 3.1 percentage points at a 95 percent confidence level.

South Korea will lower the cap on fuel prices to reflect the recent decline in global crude oil prices, the finance minister said Friday, while freezing electricity and gas rates in the second half. Finance Minister Koo Yun-cheol made the remarks during a meeting with economy-related ministers, noting the cap system will remain in place until consumer prices are fully stabilized. In mid-March, the government introduced fuel price caps in a bid to stabilize domestic fuel prices amid supply chain disruptions caused by the conflict in the Middle East. "We will freeze prices of major utilities, such as electricity and gas," Koo said during the meeting. "The government is making proactive efforts to stabilize and improve people's livelihoods, while making full-fledged efforts to normalize and advance the economy following the war in the Middle East," Koo added. "The government will adjust the emergency measures currently in place in phases by closely monitoring developments in the Middle East and the South Korean economy." The finance minister added that the government will seek to keep inflati

(2026-06-25 23:57)

Every summer, thousands of international students across Korea step off the stage at graduation and into a high-stakes countdown. With student visas ticking toward expiration, they find themselves in the race to secure full-time employment in a competitive job market. For many foreign graduates, the transition from campus life to a long-term career in Korea is far more complicated than they expect. While some pursue traditional corporate jobs, others are searching for different ways to build a future here. “There are a lot of talented foreigners in Korea,” said Casimir Agossou, a startup founder originally from the West African nation of Benin. “The challenge is helping people understand where they fit best and how they can contribute.” Agossou is the founder of Acafo, an artificial intelligence (AI)-based platform designed to help international job seekers better understand and navigate Korea’s employment landscape. Drawing from his own experiences studying and working in Korea over the past decade, he hopes the platform can help make the process less overwhelming for other f

The founder of a U.S. tech company that has filed a defamation lawsuit against Korean Broadcasting System (KBS) and its U.S. affiliate, KBS America, says false reporting by the broadcaster cost him years of research and a major commercial opportunity and he is seeking up to $1.23 billion in damages. Kim Hoon, founder and CEO of SeeDevice, told The Korea Times in an interview that the KBS report caused substantial harm to both his reputation and that of his company. “In addition to recovering the economic losses caused by the false report, we are seeking compensation for the reputational harm suffered by me and the company,” Kim said. “We are also seeking punitive damages to the maximum extent permitted under U.S. law, as well as a retraction of the false report.” A damages expert retained by SeeDevice calculated the company’s economic losses at between $236.25 million and $1.23 billion, citing business opportunities that fell through following the KBS report. A trial has been set at the U.S. District Court for the Central District of California to begin in January 2027. The case

(2026-06-25 11:57)

Home is a complicated idea for those who grow up between cultures. For artist and songwriter Glumroll, who just dropped her debut EP "Pretty Nabi," it was never defined by a single country. Born in Korea but raised abroad from the age of 4, she spent much of her life moving from place to place before eventually graduating from Berklee College of Music in 2025. Like many third-culture kids, she learned to adapt quickly. Every move brought new communities, expectations and ways of seeing the world. The act of balancing cultures can shape everything from friendships and communication styles to ideas of success, independence and belonging. For years, Korea was not necessarily that place for Glumroll. Although her family had returned to Korea, she never imagined building a life there herself. "Until my last year of university, I never really considered going back," she said. "I didn't grow up there, and I never really saw myself there." Her experience reflects a reality shared by millions of members of the Koreandiaspora. While connected to Korea through heritage and family, many spend much of

A Seoul court on Thursday sentenced a Vietnamese woman to 10 years in prison on charges of killing her newborn baby by abandonment. The Seoul Central District Court handed down the sentence for the student in her 20s who had been indicted on charges of abandoning her baby outside a building near Dongguk University in central Seoul in December, resulting in the newborn's death. While the infant had been rushed to the hospital after police and rescue authorities responded to a report of an abandoned baby inside a paper bag, the newborn ultimately died. The court said the infant could have survived if the defendant had not abandoned the newborn out in the cold winter weather. "The healthy baby was denied the opportunity to live by the mother without ever receiving a blessing," the court said. "(The defendant) must bear strict responsibility commensurate with the act." It also convicted another Vietnamese national on charges of helping the mother, and handed down an eight-month prison term suspended for two years.

Korea plans to introduce a noncommissioned officer track focused on advanced military technology as part of its push to reform the conscription-based military service system by augmenting voluntary enlistment, the defense ministry said Thursday. The move comes as the Lee Jae Myung administration pushes for a "selective voluntary enlistment system" designed to attract more young people into military careers while maintaining mandatory military service for men. The "tech-intensive" noncommissioned officers would specialize in areas such as manned-unmanned systems, cyber operations and artificial intelligence, and serve for four to five years unless they choose to pursue a longer-term military career, ministry spokesperson Chung Binna said in a press briefing. "We plan to gradually expand the number of 'tech-intensive' noncommissioned officers in line with efforts to restructure the military with a focus on advanced science and technology," Chung said. "While maintaining the conscription system, we are considering ways to broaden service options, which is the basic concept behind the select

The race to lead the ruling Democratic Party of Korea (DPK) is taking shape as a three-way contest after party chair Jung Chung-rae stepped down Wednesday to seek another term, setting up an expected showdown with outgoing Prime Minister Kim Min-seok and veteran lawmaker Song Young-gil. All three have cast themselves as supporters of the Lee Jae Myung administration. Their political strengths, however, are markedly different. Each is appealing to different factions within the ruling party — Jung to its activist base, Kim to lawmakers seeking close coordination with Cheong Wa Dae and Song to those looking for an alternative should the race extend beyond the first round. Jung, the party man Jung enters the race with perhaps the strongest organizational backing. “No matter what anyone says, I will stand by President Lee Jae Myung until the very end,” Jung said as he announced his resignation as party chair. “Lee and I share a political community and a destiny.” His remarks followed weeks of speculation about tensions with the presidential office. When Ravi Pandit Shankar arrived in Korea, navigating the country's dense corporate laws and tax codes felt like an insurmountable hurdle. But after completing a specialized municipal program, his tech startup, Konnect — a "super-app" catering to expatriates — went on to win major domestic startup competitions and secure backing from the prestigious Asan Nanum Foundation. "Now I want to become a mentor for the aspiring foreign entrepreneurs following behind me," Shankar, an Indian national, said. Seeking to replicate such successes on a broader scale, the Seoul Metropolitan Government announced Thursday a major overhaul of its flagship immigrant entrepreneur initiative. Dubbed OASIS 2.0 (Overall Assistance for Startup Immigration System), the program is expanding its curriculum to provide a seamless, end-to-end pipeline from initial business conception to legal incorporation, alongside a newly established alumni mentoring network. The initiative comes as Seoul aggressively positions itself as a global tech incubator, looking to diversify its domestic economy by attracting experts fr

ULSAN — A fishing boat sank Thursday in waters off the southeastern city of Busan, leaving the boat's Korean captain dead and two Indonesian crew members missing, maritime authorities said. The 79-ton fishing boat sank after colliding with a 992-ton liquefied petroleum gas (LPG) carrier at 10:10 a.m., according to the Ulsan Coast Guard. The collision threw all eight crew members of the boat — two Koreans and six Indonesians — into the sea. The LPG carrier managed to rescue six of the crew members, but two Indonesian nationals, both in their 30s, remained missing hours after the sinking. The Coast Guard has deployed patrol vessels, helicopters and other pieces of equipment near the site of the accident to locate the two, according to officials. Among the six rescued was the 62-year-old skipper, who was immediately sent to a hospital as he was deemed in serious condition, but was pronounced dead at 1:30 p.m. The other five were also taken to hospitals after showing signs of hypothermia, the officials said. President Lee Jae Myung ordered the mobilization of all available resources to

For families seeking respite from the sweltering summer heat without leaving the capital, a network of free urban splash parks is opening across the historic heart of the city. Jongno District announced plans Thursday to operate four park-based water play areas throughout the summer season, pairing the refreshing splash zones with specialized educational programs for children. The district's flagship facility, the Yeonji Water Playground, opened its gates earlier this month and will operate through Aug. 30. It features an array of interactive installations, including two water slides, giant and miniature tipping buckets, a water tunnel and ground-level fountains. Three additional temporary splash pads — located at Sungin Park, Sanmaru Playground and Sangsang Guldduk Playground — will welcome visitors from July 11 through Aug. 16. The facilities are specifically tailored for elementary school students and younger children, with adult supervision strictly mandated for toddlers aged 7 and under. To ensure maximum accessibility, the parks will transition from weekend-only operations in

- Kookmin University unveils 2 Korean typefaces to mark 80th anniversary (2026-06-25 05:57)

Kookmin University has developed two Korean typefaces to embody its history and future vision in celebration of its 80th anniversary this year. The university said Wednesday that the development was carried out for nearly a year to establish a consistent design identity across various anniversary projects and to reflect its unique identity in both internal and external communications. It noted that the new typefaces, Sungkok Font and Haeong Font, focus on capturing the university's beginnings and its future vision. Sungkok Font symbolizes the university's founding spirit and the historical legacy of Sungkok Kim Sung-kon, who played a key role in the revival of Kookmin University. Haeong Font, meanwhile, embodies the spirit of challenge and innovation for the future represented by Haeong Kim Suk-won, the eldest son of Kim Sung-kon and former chairman of the SsangYong Group. A special counsel team on Thursday again sought the death penalty for former President Yoon Suk Yeol during his appellate trial on charges of leading an insurrection through his failed 2024 martial law bid. Special counsel Cho Eun-suk's team made the request at the Seoul High Court, matching its earlier sentencing recommendation in Yoon's first-instance trial. In February, a lower court sentenced the ousted former president to life imprisonment for the charges. Thursday's hearing marked the resumption of Yoon's appeals trial after a monthlong pause due to his request for a recusal of the appellate court bench. The Supreme Court rejected the request earlier this month. At the hearing, Cho's team called for the death penalty, arguing the lower court's punishment was too lenient. The team also disputed the lower court's ruling that did not recognize the notes of Noh Sang-won, a retired military commander, as evidence for preparations for martial law. Meanwhile, the team sought life imprisonment for former Defense

Minister Kim Yong-hyun on charges of playing a key role in the insurrection. Ki

The government has reached a final conclusion that the prosecution's investigative rights should be completely removed, Prime Minister Kim Min-seok said Thursday. Whether to allow the prosecution to conduct supplementary investigations or scrap all of its investigative power has been a hot issue, with the ruling Democratic Party of Korea calling for completely scrapping the rights and the opposition arguing that it could cause serious negative effects. "The basic principle of the Lee Jae Myung administration's prosecution reform push is the separation of investigation and indictment," Kim told reporters. "Scrapping the prosecution's supplementary investigative right has been finalized as the government's basic position." Kim said the government will deliver its position to the National Assembly without proposing a new bill. "Rather than proposing a separate legislative bill, the government will respect the National Assembly's discussions and decision," he said.

ULSAN — Two Indonesian crew members of a fishing boat went missing Thursday after the boat capsized in waters off the southeastern port city of Busan, maritime authorities said. The 79-ton fishing boat capsized after colliding with a 992-ton liquefied petroleum gas (LPG) carrier at 10:10 a.m., according to the Ulsan Coast Guard. The crash threw all eight crew members of the boat — two Koreans and six Indonesians — into the sea. The LPG carrier managed to rescue six of the crew members, but two Indonesian nationals, both in their 30s, remain unaccounted for. The Coast Guard deployed patrol vessels, helicopters and other pieces of equipment to locate the two, according to officials. One of those rescued was said to be in critical condition. President Lee Jae Myung immediately ordered the mobilization of all available resources to rescue those missing and address the aftermath of the accident, a presidential official said. Lee issued the order after receiving a briefing on the accident, presidential spokesperson Kang Yu-jung said.

Korea University is launching International Summer Campus (ISC) 2026, the nation's largest summer university program for international students, at its Seoul campus on Saturday. The university said Wednesday that more than 2,000 students from around 300 universities in some 50 countries will participate in the ISC, which consists of four-week and six-week programs. ISC 2026 offers over 90 courses taught by approximately 40 faculty members. The lineup includes five newly introduced courses delivered by distinguished scholars from around the world. The new courses will be taught by faculty members from leading global universities, including University College London, the University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign, KU Leuven and the University of Toronto. The courses cover a wide range of fields, including creative industries, lifesciences, entrepreneurship, Chinese characters and cultural psychology. Korea University said it has added three new cultural experience programs to the summer program lineup this year, reflecting international students' growing interest in Korean culture, inclu

Prime Minister nominee Han Seong-sook said Thursday that North Korea is both "a threat and a compatriot" when asked to define South Korea's main enemy, stressing that the key is how to manage relations with the North for peace on the Korean Peninsula. "All that threaten the Republic of Korea is our enemy," Han said during her parliamentary confirmation hearing in response to a question from opposition lawmakers about who South Korea's main enemy is. "It is a very dualistic situation where North Korea is both a threat and a compatriot." Peaceful coexistence on the Korean Peninsula is an objective that everyone can agree on, Han said. "How to forge and manage relations (with North Korea) is important," she said. Han also said there should never be war on the peninsula.

Prime Minister nominee Han Seong-sook began undergoing a two-day confirmation hearing at the National Assembly on Thursday as the main opposition party questioned her eligibility for the post. Han, who currently serves as minister for small and medium-sized enterprises and startups, has come under scrutiny over a series of controversies, including a personal information leak involving the government's audition-style startup incubation program. "I will become a prime minister who focuses solely on working for the happiness of the people and deliver tangible results," Han said at the hearing. The nominee described the next few years as a critical period that will determine Korea's competitiveness amid the rapid advancement of artificial intelligence (AI), saying she will draw on experiences that she gained over "three decades working on the frontline of technological innovation." "I will make all-out efforts to drive a bold AI transformation that reshapes the economic structure, help the future generations grow and create a warm safety net for the underprivileged," said the former CEO of o

- Seoul taps overseas students for grassroots global PR campaign (2026-06-25 05:57)

The Seoul Metropolitan Government is shifting its global public relations (PR) strategy away from expatriates and toward digital natives abroad, launching its inaugural Seoul Global Culture Crew initiative to turn overseas college students into cultural ambassadors. The city held an online kickoff ceremony Wednesday for 13 selected undergraduates from SOAS University of London and Hungary's Eötvös Loránd University, all of whom are majoring in Korean studies. Unlike traditional municipal supporter programs that recruit foreign residents living in Korea, this pilot project taps students to generate localized, peer-to-peer buzz in their home countries. The student correspondents will operate through October, producing monthly social media campaigns across Instagram, TikTok and YouTube. By leveraging local perspectives, the city aims to showcase Seoul's culture, tourism and daily lifestyle trends with authentic regional nuance. "The Seoul Global Culture Crew is a novel global PR program that introduces Seoul through the eyes of those living abroad," said Kim Tae-hee, director-general of President Lee Jae Myung pledged Thursday to establish a peaceful Korean Peninsula free from the fear of war as South Korea marks the anniversary of the outbreak of the 1950-53 Korean War. Lee made the pledge in his speech at a ceremony marking the 76th anniversary of the outbreak of the war, which was held in Gyeonggi Province and brought together hundreds of war veterans, and government and military officials. "(The government) will safeguard the people and the territory through strong defense capabilities and build a peaceful Korean Peninsula which has neither fear of war nor a need for conflict," Lee said. "I believe that doing so would be the surest reward we can give to the heroes who dedicated their lives and youth to defending this country," he said. The president recalled the sacrifices of those from home and around the world who fought for the country during the Korean War, saying the government "will unwaveringly safeguard this great Republic of Korea built by heroes." The Republic of Korea is the official name of South Korea. "Remembering and commemorating these heroes is the m

- Vice defense minister calls for US congressional support for nuclear-powered subs, OPCON transfer (2026-06-25 05:57)

Vice Defense Minister Lee Doo-hee has called for U.S. congressional support for Korea's nuclear-powered submarine program and efforts to retake wartime operational control (OPCON) from Washington during his meetings with U.S. lawmakers, the defense ministry said Thursday. Lee made the call when he separately met with Reps. Ryan Zinke (R-MT) and Pat Harrigan (R-NC) in Washington on Wednesday (local time), according to the ministry, as Seoul is pushing to acquire nuclear-propelled naval vessels and source low-enriched uranium for fuel under a summit agreement between the two countries' leaders. Korea is also working to reclaim wartime OPCON from the U.S. before the Lee Jae Myung government's five-year term ends in 2030. Lee "asked for continued attention to and support at the U.S. congressional level for Seoul's efforts to acquire low-enriched uranium for nuclear-powered submarines," the ministry said in a release. He briefed the lawmakers on the progress of the OPCON transition and its significance, asking them to support the efforts toward the OPCON transfer, the ministry said. Lee also c

Two election officials who oversaw polling stations hit by ballot shortages during the June 3 local elections appeared before investigators on Thursday to undergo questioning over the incident, legal sources said. A joint police and prosecution team called in the Songpa District Election Commission officials to question them about the election watchdog's internal instructions in response to the shortages, according to the sources. The team is probing allegations that the National Election Commission hastily decided to reduce the number of printed ballots and failed to respond effectively to ballot shortages on election day. The team was also set to question nine local government officials who distributed ballots at polling stations in Seoul that ran out of ballot papers. The team plans to question them about the election watchdog's response measures to the shortages. The questioning session comes a day after the joint investigation team raided the offices of 12 election commission officials who oversaw polling stations in Seoul that experienced ballot shortages. Seoul was already sweltering by midmorning on June 25, 2000. Heat rose in wavering sheets above the broad plaza outside the War Memorial of Korea as buses pulled up one after another, unloading elderly veterans of the Korean War (1950-53) alongside family members and foreign dignitaries arriving for the ceremony. Inside the memorial grounds, ushers guided guests toward rows of reserved seats while security personnel moved briskly through the growing crowd. Everywhere there were flags, cameras, police, military officers and the low murmur of Korean, English and a dozen other languages blending together in the heavy summer air. I was not supposed to be there. A month earlier, I had interviewed Gen. Paik Sun-yup for an article accompanying my review of his autobiography, "From Pusan to Panmunjom." After the interview, I met several members of the 50th anniversary committee organizing the Korean War commemorative ceremony at the War Memorial in Seoul. President Kim Dae-jung was scheduled to speak, along with military dignitaries, diplomats and veterans from around the world. And somehow, the

A popular Korean wildlife YouTuber has reignited a long-standing debate over stray cats after arguing that euthanasia is necessary to reduce their population and protect native wildlife. The controversy began after YouTuber Korean Birder, known for content about Korean wildlife and ecosystems and followed by roughly 500,000 subscribers, uploaded a video on Saturday titled "Cats, we have no choice but to kill them now." The video opens with footage of cats on Mara Island, a small island off Korea's southern coast, hunting a Crested Murrelet, a protected seabird designated as a Natural Monument and classified as an endangered species in Korea. The YouTuber argued that the problem extends far beyond Mara Island and has become a nationwide ecological issue, claiming that stray and feral cats are harming vulnerable wildlife across the country. He also criticized current cat management policies, including shelter placement, adoption programs and trap-neuter-return efforts, in which stray cats are captured, sterilized and released back into the wild. "Current policies being implemented in Korea

A collaborative project between Korea-based global photographers and musicians will be presented with a photo exhibition and live music performances celebrating Seoul's international creative scene on Saturday. The project, "Framed in Sound," paired photographers with independent musicians during a photo walk on May 2, giving the photographers a chance to develop their portrait photography skills while providing musicians with professional promotional images. For the exhibition, 10 photographers will share five photographs each of their musician partners, who will perform later in the evening. The initiative was co-created by Filipino musician Nicky Juanite and Indonesian photographer Dhira Noor, who both saw an opportunity to support emerging artists by combining their respective communities. "We invited photographers and musicians to spend a day together at Hangang Park, with the hopes of benefiting from each other's talents," Juanite told The Korea Times. "Musicians received professional photographs they could use for their portfolios, promotional materials and future opportunities.

President Lee Jae Myung visited a front-line Marine Corps unit near North Korea and stressed the importance of strong deterrence against the enemy to ensure peace on Wednesday, the eve of the 76th anniversary of the start of the Korean War. Lee traveled to the Marine Corps unit based on Yeonpyeong Island, just below the Northern Limit Line (NLL) in the Yellow Sea, the de facto inter-Korean maritime border, to mark the anniversary of the outbreak of the 1950-53 war. The war ended on July 27, 1953, with the signing of an armistice, leaving the Korean Peninsula divided into the capitalist South and the socialist North, with the two sides technically still at war. Sharing lunch with the unit's service members, Lee described three stages of ensuring national security: winning a fight, winning without a fight and making a fight unnecessary. The president named making a fight unnecessary as the most important part of all. "This exactly constitutes peace. Peace is the most solid foundation for security," he said. Lee said peace should be based on "strong deterrence to overpower the enemy," pledged

The South Korean government and the United Nations Command (UNC) are giving conflicting accounts of North Korea's recent move to intensify border fencing, with South Korea viewing the activity as a violation of the armistice agreement and the UNC disputing the framing. It is the second dispute in recent months between the two over border issues, with a previous disagreement taking place over authority to grant approval for nonmilitary access to the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ). The UNC on Wednesday publicly challenged South Korea's assessment in a fact sheet on its website. The fact sheet came after a report that North Korea installed barbed wire fences just 80 meters from the Military Demarcation Line (MDL). The South Korean defense ministry said Monday that the activity is “in clear violation of the armistice agreement,” which halted the 1950-53 Korean War. The MDL separates the two Koreas and the DMZ is a buffer zone extending 2 kilometers on either side of the MDL to restrict troops and heavy weapons. In its fact sheet, the UNC wrote, “Recent North Korean construction activities

- Police identify, summon woman over solo blockade of vote counting center (2026-06-24 12:02)

Police have identified a woman who staged a solo blockade of a vote counting center after the June 3 local elections and issued a summons for her to appear for questioning, sources said Wednesday. On June 16, the woman, said to be in her 30s, stood outside a door to the SK Olympic Handball Gymnasium in southern Seoul, which had been used as a ballot counting center, to prevent anyone from going inside amid an ongoing standoff between protesters demanding a rerun of the elections and sports organization officials trying to enter the gym to access their offices. The protests, which are now on their 20th consecutive day, began after shortages of ballot papers were reported at multiple polling stations on election day, causing some voters to turn back without casting their ballots. To end the standoff, lawmakers of the main opposition People Power Party had negotiated a deal with the protesters to let the sports officials inside, but the agreement fell through after the woman blocked the door and demanded the preservation of ballots and ballot boxes that remain in the gym. Police reportedly

- Election officials raided over ballot shortage in June 3 local elections (2026-06-24 12:02)

A joint police and prosecution team on Wednesday raided the offices of 12 election officials who oversaw polling stations in Seoul that experienced ballot shortages during the June 3 local elections, officials said. The raids targeted three officials from the Seoul Metropolitan Election Commission and nine from the Songpa District Election Commission, in an effort to reconstruct the events on election day, trace how they reported the ballot shortages up the chain of command and what specific directives they were given. Launched on June 9 under orders from President Lee Jae Myung, the joint investigation team is probing allegations that the National Election Commission (NEC) hastily decided to reduce the number of printed ballots and failed to respond effectively to ballot shortages on election day. On June 11, investigators raided the NEC and seized internal approval documents and voting logs. The team plans to question the 12 officials after analyzing their seized materials, and is expected to expand their probe to high-level officials of the election watchdog, including former Chairman

The Seoul Metropolitan Council passed an ordinance Wednesday calling for the introduction of free bus rides for citizens aged 70 and over. The proposal, which calls for subsidizing all or part of city and community bus fares for the senior citizens based on criteria set by the mayor, passed a plenary council session by a 69-1 vote, with five abstentions. Details, such as the extent of the subsidy and its implementation method, will be decided by the city government at a later date. The city government has also been looking to raise the eligible age for free subway rides from the current 65 to 70. The introduction of free bus rides for senior citizens was a campaign pledge of Seoul Mayor Oh Se-hoon during the June 3 local elections. It aims to expand public transport services for people living in areas without a subway station. The city government has said, however, that to minimize the financial burden the number of free rides could be capped at 14 per month. According to its estimate, providing that many free rides will cost approximately 52.5 billion won ($34 million) a year, but would be

The government and chip companies are planning to establish a massive semiconductor cluster in the Jeolla region, separate from the current one near the capital, the presidential policy chief said Wednesday, citing abundant electricity and water in the southwestern provinces. He also stressed the need to start public discussion on how to share the benefits of the artificial intelligence (AI) era, saying the issue comprises social networks, labor policy and excess tax revenue generated by the booming AI-related industries. Speaking at a forum hosted by Kwanhun Club, an association of senior journalists, presidential adviser for policy Kim Yong-beom said the AI boom presents an opportunity to redraw Korea's industrial geography, drawing a parallel with how a manufacturing cluster in the southeastern region transformed Korea into an industrial powerhouse decades ago. He said the demand for chips has skyrocketed and companies are being pressed to advance their plans to construct relevant plants and facilities. While Samsung Electronics and SK hynix are currently building massive semiconduct

Political fallout from the ballot shortage controversy during the June 3 local elections continues, with the main opposition People Power Party's (PPP) push to abolish early voting reviving debate over Korea's election system. The issue resurfaced after PPP lawmaker Park Dae-chul introduced a bill seeking to scrap early voting, extend election day voting to two days and revive the absentee voting system. The proposal was co-sponsored by 24 PPP lawmakers and independent lawmaker Han Dong-hoon, the party's former leader. Han described the proposal as a long-held position. "Replacing early voting with a longer election period has been my position for a long time," Han wrote on social media. He has repeatedly argued that election day voting should be extended instead of maintaining the current early voting system. The move came after the June 3 local elections were marred by ballot shortages at several polling stations, leading to long lines and complaints from voters. The National Assembly has since launched a parliamentary investigation into the incident. While the controversy stem

A practicing physician has spoken out about a controversial case in which a nursing hospital in Incheon amputated the leg of an elderly patient and later disposed of it improperly, saying the medical staff had tried to save a patient with nowhere else to turn, rather than providing negligent care. The case gained national attention after the severed leg, which had been mistakenly discarded as recyclable waste instead of medical waste by a volunteer worker, was discovered at a recycling facility. While the disposal error sparked outrage, the physician argued that the medical staff's efforts to treat the patient should also be taken into account. 'In a hospital room, with scissors instead of a scalpel?' Yang Sung-gwan, an author and family medicine specialist at Uijeongbu Paik Hospital, said in a Facebook post Monday that he initially found the reports difficult to believe. "When I first heard about the nursing hospital leg amputation case, I could hardly believe it myself," Yang said. The founder of the Shincheonji Church of Jesus, a nonmainstream religious sect, attended a court hearing Wednesday on his potential arrest over allegations he forced followers to join the main opposition People Power Party (PPP) ahead of elections in 2021 and 2024. Lee Man-hee, 95, arrived at the Seoul Central District Court, using a walking stick, after a prosecution-police task force requested a warrant to arrest him on charges of obstruction of business and violations of the Political Parties Act. Lee is suspected of forcing at least 56,472 church members to join the PPP between July 2021 and January 2024 with the intention of swaying the outcome of the party's presidential primary in 2021 and general election primaries in 2024. In return, he allegedly sought various favors for the church, including the repurposing of the church building. The period of the alleged forced memberships largely overlaps with when the PPP was the ruling party, with former President Yoon Suk Yeol in office. Lee has reportedly denied the allegations. The court will determine after the hearing whether to grant

She began life just three weeks ago as a hairless, pink scrap of a mammal, weighing a mere 171 grams. But on Wednesday, Korea's newest celebrity resident offered the world a glimpse of her rapidly changing form, debuting the bold, charcoal-colored patches that define her species. Everland, the sprawling resort and theme park south of Seoul, released the latest images of the 3-week-old giant panda cub. Captured during a routine health assessment the previous day, the photos reveal a noticeably plumper cub whose ears, eyes, shoulders and limbs have clearly darkened into the unmistakable silhouette of a giant panda. The female cub, who arrived on the morning of June 3 at 10:53 a.m., represents the fourth giant panda born naturally in Korea. Her lineage is local royalty: She is the offspring of Ai Bao and Le Bao, the beloved resident pair at Everland's Panda World, making her the younger sibling to the nation's darling Fu Bao, born in 2020, and the celebrated twins, Rui Bao and Hui Bao, born in 2023. Park veterinarians and keepers reported that during her 21-day health check, the cub we

Nearly all parents of school-aged children in Korea support restricting minors' smartphone use, with a large majority willing to switch to a dedicated device that blocks harmful features. According to a survey by Rep. Kim Young-ho of the Democratic Party of Korea, released Wednesday, 98.1 percent of approximately 52,000 parents of elementary, middle and high school students in Seoul, Incheon and South Gyeongsang Province said certain limits on minors' smartphone use were necessary. Respondents also cited a range of other concerns, with 97.5 percent saying smartphones could increase the risk of exposure to harmful or inappropriate content. The majority flagged interference with studying at 96 percent, difficulty controlling screen time at 93.9 percent and family conflict at 90.4 percent. Most parents said they would consider a safer alternative. When asked if they would prioritize a restricted device that still met their child's essential needs, 92.2 percent answered yes. The top reason was prevention of harmful content exposure at 78.6 percent, followed by communication and safety featur

For the thousands of delivery couriers, postal workers and gig laborers weaving through the dense, steep alleys of Seoul, the arrival of the summer season brings an increasingly perilous threat: severe heat exhaustion. With concrete heat islands accelerating urban temperatures, municipal authorities are transforming civic infrastructure into an active shield for the city's most vulnerable workers. The Yongsan District Office said Wednesday that it launched a coordinated extreme heat safety initiative centered at the Yongsan Workers Support Center. The defensive strategy combines immediate physical relief with an unprecedented expansion of operating hours for municipal cooling centers, specifically targeting "mobile workers" whose livelihoods depend on continuous outdoor exertion. The district has deployed cooling infrastructure stock-piled with 2,000 bottles of specialized spring water, subsidized through a joint campaign with the Ministry of Employment and Labor and the Korea Occupational Safety and Health Agency. Industrial ice chests have been positioned both inside and outside the

For the thousands of temporary industrial workers arriving in Korea, navigating the country's highly automated, dense highway networks can be as perilous as the heavy machinery they operate. Recognizing a growing blind spot in its rapid integration of foreign labor, municipal authorities are taking to the classroom to reinforce the rules of the road. The Incheon Metropolitan Government said Wednesday that it launched an immigrant-focused driver' s education program, designed to lower accident rates and help foreign laborers integrate into local society. Run through the Incheon Migrant Workers Support Center, in tandem with the local Nonhyeon Police Department, the initiative directly addresses a rising regional anxiety: the traffic vulnerabilities of a foreign workforce operating without a firm grasp of local transit regulations. The program splits its curriculum into targeted language cohorts. A primary session on June 14 saw 116 workers from Myanmar fill the center's auditorium. A man in his 30s who appeared in a viral video dubbed the "Suwon drug zombie" has been arrested by police on suspicion of drug use. The Suwon Seobu Police Station said Tuesday that it had urgently detained the man, identified only as A, on charges of violating the Narcotics Control Act. A is accused of being under the influence of methamphetamine while wandering around near a bus stop in an apartment complex in Suwon's Gwonseon District at around 12:30 p.m. on Sunday. A witness at the scene filmed A staggering with both arms hanging loosely at his sides and uploaded the footage to social media. In the post, the witness wrote, "This is a bus stop in an apartment complex near our local market," adding, "I never thought I would see something like this in person." The video quickly spread online, prompting reactions from internet users. Some said, "It looks exactly like scenes from American documentaries," while others wrote, "The same thing happened in Korea, right in front of an ordinary apartment complex," and "Isn't that the posture of someone addicted to fentanyl?" The number of Koreans relocating to new regions fell 1.5 percent in May from a year earlier to the lowest level in 52 years, data showed Wednesday, amid a recent decline in housing supply. Around 466,000 people changed residences in May, down 7,000 from a year earlier, according to data from the Ministry of Data and Statistics. It marked the lowest figure for any May month since 415,000 tallied in 1974. The population mobility rate — which refers to the number of people relocating per 100 residents — fell 0.2 percentage point from a year earlier to 10.8 percent. The ministry attributed the decline to a decrease in the number of new homes on the market. The number of completed housing units in March and April fell 41.5 percent from a year earlier, although the number of homes traded during the period rose 6.8 percent. By region, Seoul posted a net outflow of 4,221 residents, while Gyeonggi Province, which surrounds the capital, recorded a net inflow of 2,433 residents. South Chungcheong Province and Incheon, west of Seoul, added 1,284 and 1,237 residents, respectively.

The number of babies born in South Korea shot up 18 percent in April from a year earlier, reaching the highest level in seven years, government data showed Wednesday. A total of 24,521 babies were born in April, up from 20,787 a year earlier, according to data from the Ministry of Data and Statistics. It marked the highest figure for any April since 26,104 babies were recorded in 2019. Over the January-April period, the total number of births came to 99,534, also the highest in seven years, up a sharp 15.5 percent from a year earlier. The number of births grew at a record rate for both April and the January-April period. The country's total fertility rate, the average number of children a woman is expected to have in her lifetime, rose by 0.13 from a year earlier to 0.93 in April. The number of newborns has been on an upward trend since July 2024. Experts attribute the recent growth to an increase in the number of marriages, along with a more positive perception of childbirth. The rate still remains well below the 2.1 births per woman needed to maintain a stable population without immigration.

GWACHEON — A special counsel team said Wednesday they were questioning former Prosecutor General Shim Woo-jung over his alleged involvement in former President Yoon Suk Yeol's martial law bid in 2024. The team, led by special counsel Kwon Chang-young, suspects that Shim played a key role in an insurrection by reviewing the potential deployment of prosecutors to a joint martial law investigation headquarters on Dec. 3, 2024, the night Yoon declared martial law. Shim allegedly had three phone calls with then Justice Minister Park Sung-jae at the time, raising suspicions that Park may have instructed him to dispatch prosecutors to the martial law body. On Monday, the Seoul Central District Court sentenced Park to 25 years in prison for his role in the martial law bid, including his instruction to Shim to send prosecutors to the martial law body. Shim is also suspected of abusing his power by ordering his subordinates to not indict Yoon's wife, Kim Keon Hee, over various corruption allegations she faced when her husband was in office.

- State auditor gathering data to conduct financial audit of NEC over ballot shortage (2026-06-24 05:57)

The Board of Audit and Inspection (BAI) has begun collecting data in preparation for a financial audit next month of the National Election Commission (NEC) in the wake of ballot shortages in the recent local elections, the chief auditor said Wednesday. BAI Chair Kim Ho-cheol made the remark during a meeting with reporters as criticism of the election watchdog has been mounting over the unprecedented shortage of ballot papers during the June 3 elections that led to the temporary suspension of voting at 26 polling stations. "People are greatly interested and concerned over the unacceptable violation of voting rights. After a decision by the Council of Commissioners yesterday, we started gathering data today," Kim said. "I anticipate we can conduct an actual audit around July after determining the scope and period of the audit." The election watchdog is an independent constitutional organization that is not subject to a full-fledged performance audit, a measure aimed at shielding the agency from political influence. But an accounting audit is deemed permissible because it carries no political implications.

- Sejong University ranks 6th in Korea, 306th worldwide in Best Global Universities Rankings (2026-06-24 05:57)

Sejong University ranked sixth in South Korea and 306th worldwide in the 2026-2027 Best Global Universities Rankings released by U.S. News & World Report, reflecting the university's strong performance in research and internationalization.

strong performance in international research collaboration and research impact, the university said Tuesday. The rankings evaluated more than 2,250 universities around the world based on comprehensive indicators including research performance and academic reputation. Sejong University achieved particularly strong results in international collaborative research and highly cited publications. The university ranked 19th worldwide in the “International Collaboration – Relative to the Country” category. This indicator measures the extent of international research collaboration while accounting for differences in national research output, highlighting Sejong’s active research partnerships with leading institutions around the world. The university also saw strong results in the “Citation Impact” category, a key measure of research quality. The university ranked 47th worldwide in “Publications among

- Morning World Cup matches spark row over teacher authority in schools (2026-06-24 05:57)

Korean educators are caught between World Cup fever and academic pressures. On June 12, the day of Korea's 2026 FIFA World Cup group-stage match against the Czech Republic, Choi, a 40-year-old high school teacher in Siheung, Gyeonggi Province, condensed his lessons to show the game to his students. "Since the kids were happy, I felt like it was a good idea to show it, but I was nervous because the vice principal was patrolling the hallways during that period," he said. Schools are facing a dilemma as all three of Korea's group-stage matches are scheduled during weekday morning school hours. Since the time of matches overlaps with second to fourth period classes, teachers must choose between hosting watch parties and holding regular classes. The upcoming match against South Africa, scheduled for 10 a.m. on Thursday, is a critical game determining whether Korea will advance to the Round of 32, deepening teachers' concerns. Lee, a 42-year-old elementary school teacher in Cheonan, South Chungcheong Province, showed the recent match during lunch and recess after hearing loud cheering from th

- US professor accused of defaming Korean president fails to appear for police questioning (2026-06-24 05:57)

A Korean American professor accused of defaming President Lee Jae Myung did not appear for a scheduled police questioning session Wednesday, citing his wish to be protected from media exposure. Morse Tan, a professor at U.S.-based Liberty University, was due to undergo questioning over defamation allegations at the Seoul Metropolitan Police Agency at 10 a.m. His lawyers released a notice to the press at 10:20 a.m., however, saying they are asking for the session to be rescheduled due to the police agency's own "violation" of its promise to take "personal information protection measures." Tan had reportedly asked to appear without media exposure, but the exterior of the police agency was already crowded with journalists, supporters and civic groups calling for his arrest, before his scheduled attendance. "The responsibility for the nonexecution of the personal information protection measures lies with the agency," the lawyers said. Tan made claims at a press conference in the United States last year that Lee was involved in murder as a teenager and had been sent to a juvenile detention cen

- Fine dust is damaging our skin, new study finds (2026-06-24 05:57)

While the hazardous effects of air pollution on the human respiratory and cardiovascular systems have long been documented, groundbreaking new research indicates that the threat extends far beyond the lungs, penetrating the body's largest organ: the skin. In the largest Asia-based population study of its kind, researchers at the Korea Disease Control and Prevention Agency (KDCA) and the National Institute of Health discovered a powerful link between ambient particulate matter and psoriasis, a debilitating chronic inflammatory skin condition. Analyzing a massive national health database of approximately 8.4 million adults over an average of 13.6 years, the study underscores how deeply environmental degradation is rewriting human pathology. The numbers paint a troubling portrait of urban exposure. According to the findings published in The Journal of Dermatology, long-term exposure to fine particulate matter, known as PM2.5, increases the risk of developing psoriasis by 19 percent for every incremental rise of 10 micrograms per cubic meter in annual concentration. For coarser particles,

- Culture ministry reports 15 to police over scalping of K-pop, sports tickets (2026-06-24 05:57)

The culture ministry has referred 15 people to police for allegedly reselling large quantities of sports and K-pop concert tickets at inflated prices, including some marked up to eight times their original value, officials said Wednesday. The Ministry of Culture, Sports and Tourism said the cases were identified through an analysis of online reports and monitoring data on illegal ticket resales between Jan. 5 and June 16. The investigation focused on activity on major secondhand trading platforms, where certain accounts repeatedly sold multiple tickets or listed dozens of seats for specific events. One seller allegedly resold 110 professional baseball tickets during the period, while another sold 54 tickets for a single game in April. Among 11 individuals involved in sports ticket resales, total estimated sales reached 36.84 million won ($23,970). In one case, a ticket with a face value of 150,000 won was resold for 350,000 won. Authorities also found suspected violations involving high-demand concerts with strict purchase limits, including BTS' "ARIRANG" world tour shows in Busan and S

- Gov't to strengthen oversight of meal cards for children in need (2026-06-24 05:57)

The government will strengthen oversight of meal cards issued for children in need, officials said Wednesday, as a series of misuse cases were found, including using the cards to buy cigarettes and alcohol. Meal cards are issued to children of low-income or single-parent families and other needy kids younger than 18 to make sure that they are fed without skipping meals. The cards can be used just like debit cards to pay for food at restaurants, bakeries and convenience stores. The office for government policy coordination and the welfare ministry conducted a joint inspection between November and April to see whether the cards are used as intended, and found a series of problems, such as parents using the cards to buy non-food items like detergent and tissues. In some cases, parents used the cards to buy cigarettes and alcohol, as unlike convenience stores, some small independent grocery stores still do not have a system denying payment with meal cards for such restricted items, officials said. Dozens of parents were also found to have made false payments totaling 170 million won ($110,800).

- Ruling party chief resigns, expected to seek reelection for another term (2026-06-24 05:57)

Rep. Jung Chung-rae of the ruling Democratic Party of Korea (DPK) resigned as chairman of the party Wednesday in a move widely seen as a step toward seeking reelection at the party's upcoming national convention. "I spent many sleepless nights looking back on myself and my political life for the past few days," Jung said during a meeting of the party's supreme council at the National Assembly. "I am stepping down as party leader today." Jung stressed that he devoted himself to supporting President Lee Jae Myung's administration throughout his term and to ensuring that the ruling party, the government and the presidential office worked as a united team. "Although I never had a single day of peace due to resistance from within and outside the party, I carried out my duties without complaining," he said. Jung's remarks came amid criticism from some pro-Lee party members who argue that he is leading the party in a way that suits his own hard-line supporters, rather than working in tandem with Lee on key issues. The convention is expected to shape up as a three-way race between Jung and two other candidates.

- Korea hosts conference in Washington on expanding defense cooperation with US (2026-06-24 05:57)

Korea's defense ministry held a conference in Washington this week to discuss ways to expand cooperation with the United States in the defense and arms industries, ministry officials said Wednesday. The conference, hosted by Vice Defense Minister Lee Doo-hee on Tuesday (local time), brought together some 120 people, including Michael Vaccaro, the acting principal deputy assistant secretary of state, according to the officials. During the event, the participants discussed ways to materialize bilateral defense cooperation, including on shipbuilding and maintenance, repair and operations, as an axis of the South Korea-U.S. alliance. The conference also covered deepening cooperation on advanced weapons systems and technologies, such as artificial intelligence and manned-unmanned teaming systems, to address future warfare. The defense ministry said it plans to develop the conference into a platform to support the entry of domestic companies into overseas markets in coordination with the Korea Trade-Investment Promotion Agency starting this year.

- Korea lags in AI workforce readiness despite quality STEM education (2026-06-23 23:57)

LONDON — Korea has high quality education in science, technology, engineering and mathematics (STEM) and corporate research and development capabilities, but the higher education system is less aligned with workforce needs in the age of artificial intelligence (AI) than many of its global competitors, a new index by QS showed Wednesday. The report underscored a growing mismatch between the country's educational strengths and future labor market needs. In the inaugural QS World Future Skills Index 2027, Korea recorded an overall score of 93.4, ranking sixth globally behind the U.S., Australia, the U.K., Germany and Canada. The new index evaluates how well 89 economies are positioned to develop and deploy talent in the future.

the era of AI, digital transformation and the green transition, measuring performance across four areas: skills alignment, academic readiness, future of work and economic transformation. Korea showed competitiveness in skills alignment and economic transformation, placing fifth and fourth, respectively. Speaking to The Korea Times, Matteo Quacquarelli, QS vice president for str

- 4 Korean universities break into global top 20 in THE sustainability rankings (2026-06-23 23:57)

LONDON — Four Korean universities made it to the Times Higher Education (THE) Sustainability Impact Ratings 2026's top 20, with Hanyang University ranking sixth globally in results that underscore the rising international standing of Korean higher education. According to the rankings released Wednesday, Hanyang University was the highest-ranked Korean institution, followed by Korea University at joint 12th, Pusan National University in Busan at joint 16th and Kyungpook National University in Daegu at joint 20th. Hanyang's rise was particularly notable, as it climbed from joint 44th last year to the global top 10. The results were announced as part of THE's newly rebranded Sustainability Impact Ratings, formerly known as the Impact Rankings. The framework evaluates universities' contributions to all 17 of the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), assessing areas such as poverty reduction, health, education, gender equality, climate action, innovation and partnerships. Unlike traditional university rankings that focus heavily on research output, citations and instit

- [\[RESTAURANT OF THE WEEK\] Good night, Sweet Oak](#) (2026-06-23 23:57)

WONJU, Gangwon Province — I drove out to the city of Wonju, in Gangwon Province, after I received some distressing news. The famed barbecue restaurant Sweet Oak will be going on an indefinite hiatus, starting from June 28. My wife and I have been coming here on an annual pilgrimage for the last five years, and we knew we had to come out to send it off before it closed. Gus Flores and Euna Kim opened the restaurant in 2015, and this isn't the first time it's shut down for a while. The married couple ended up in Korea in part because of Flores' Korean heritage. He previously visited in 2008 and enrolled in a language course in Seoul, before returning to the U.S. in 2013 to learn how to barbecue. He then went to culinary school in London, where he met Kim. Eventually they returned to Korea together, ending up in Wonju due to family connections on his mother's side and the desire for something “less cramped than Seoul.” Less cramped might not fully apply to their restaurant, though, because just a short time after we were seated, Sweet Oak was 90 percent full — a good sign for an

- S. Korea defends extended deterrence cooperation with US, urges China's constructive role (2026-06-23 11:57)

The foreign ministry on Tuesday countered criticism from China over South Korea's extended deterrence cooperation with the United States and expressed hope that Beijing would play a constructive role in advancing the denuclearization of the Korean Peninsula and regional peace. The response came after China's foreign ministry recently voiced concerns over extended deterrence cooperation between Seoul and Washington, as well as between the U.S. and Japan, and called on Seoul to act prudently. "At a time when North Korea's illegal nuclear and missile programs continue to advance, maintaining a robust deterrence posture through extended deterrence cooperation between South Korea and the U.S. is a legitimate response aimed at protecting the lives and safety of our people, as well as a fundamental responsibility of any responsible government," foreign ministry spokesperson Park Il said at a press briefing. Park stressed that such cooperation is fully consistent with the objectives and obligations of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, adding that South Korea continues to r

- Prime minister visits alma mater in Beijing (2026-06-23 11:57)

BEIJING/SEOUL — Korean Prime Minister Kim Min-seok paid a visit to his alma mater, Tsinghua University, in Beijing on the second day of his trip to China on Tuesday and discussed relations between the two countries with University President Qiu Yong. Kim, who earned a Master of Law degree from the prestigious school in 2010, said during the closed-door meeting with Qiu, also a secretary of the Communist Party of China, that studying at the university remains one of his most beautiful memories, according to his office. The university is also an important producer of talent that lead China's present and future, Kim was quoted as saying, adding that he visited the university to encourage Korean students studying there and to think about how to move relations between the two countries forward. Kim said the relations between Korea and China have steadily moved forward, despite various ups and downs, and he hopes the trend will continue in the future, and that exchanges between youths of the two countries are important in further developing the ties. Qiu welcomed Kim, calling him a family me

- Parliamentary committee questions election watchdog officials over ballot shortages (2026-06-23 11:57)

A parliamentary special committee on Tuesday conducted its first inquiry into the National Election Commission (NEC) over an unprecedented shortage of ballots during the recent local elections. Last week, the National Assembly launched a special 18-member committee to investigate the cause of the shortage of ballots at more than a dozen polling stations in Seoul during the June 3 local elections. "As the chairperson, I feel a deep sense of responsibility for the shortcomings found in the NEC's oversight," former NEC Chairman Roh Tae-ak said at the session. The special committee is scheduled to receive a second round of reporting from the NEC and its regional offices, as well as the interior ministry and the National Police Agency on July 1. The committee also approved plans to conduct an on-site probe on July 8, followed by two days of hearings on July 14 and July 22. "I offer my sincere apologies to the voters who experienced significant confusion and inconvenience while exercising their precious right to vote, which should have been guaranteed," Wi Chul-hwan, acting chairman of the NEC,

- S. Korea, Philippines hold joint committee on logistics, defense cooperation (2026-06-23 11:57)

South Korea's state arms procurement agency on Tuesday held a joint committee meeting with the Philippine defense ministry to discuss ways to expand bilateral cooperation in the defense and logistics sectors, according to officials. The meeting took place in Manila, attended by officials from the Naval Ship Program Department at the Defense Acquisition Program Administration (DAPA) and logistics chiefs of the Philippine armed forces, according to DAPA. The two sides discussed exchanges between agencies responsible for naval ship programs and procurement, as well as cooperation on the maintenance, repair and operation of South Korean weapons systems exported to the Philippines. Officials from nine South Korean defense companies, including Korea Aerospace Industries, Hanwha Aerospace and LIG Defense & Aerospace (D&A), also met with a Philippine defense ministry delegation to discuss ongoing defense export projects. The Philippines is one of South Korea's key defense cooperation partners and operates a range of Korean-made weapons systems, including FA-50 fighter jets, four frigates, two co

- Acquittals of former officials confirmed in NK border murder cover-up case (2026-06-23 11:57)

The prosecution said Tuesday it will not appeal the acquittals of two former government officials accused of covering up North Korea's murder of a South Korean fisheries official in 2020, finalizing the rulings. Former National Security Adviser Suh Hoon and former Coast Guard Commissioner General Kim Hong-hee were acquitted by an appellate court last week of distributing false press releases to make it appear the fisheries official, Lee Dae-jun, was shot and killed while trying to defect to the North. The Seoul High Prosecutors Office said that following a close review and consultations with the Supreme Prosecutors Office, it decided not to appeal the case further. Lee was fatally shot by North Korean troops near the de facto maritime border in the Yellow Sea in September 2020, after going missing while on board a fishery inspection ship. His body was later burned by North Korean soldiers. The then administration of President Moon Jae-in said Lee had sought to defect to the North, but prosecutors and critics accused the government of fabricating a lie to prevent the incident from hurting

- Police to question US professor this week over alleged defamation of Korean president (2026-06-23 11:57)

Police plan to question Korean American professor Morse Tan this week over his alleged defamation of President Lee Jae Myung, sources said Tuesday. The questioning will take place at the Seoul Metropolitan Police Agency at 10 a.m. Wednesday over allegations that the professor at U.S.-based Liberty University falsely accused Lee of involvement in murder as a teenager. Tan allegedly made the claim at a press conference in the United States last year. He also claimed Lee had been sent to a juvenile detention center for the crime. It will be the first time he will appear for questioning by the police. Last month, police applied for a travel ban on the professor after he failed to comply with their summonses. The justice ministry accepted the request and have banned him from leaving the country until next Tuesday. A request by Tan to suspend the exit ban was rejected by a court, and an appeal is currently under way. Tan's associates said they will hold a press conference outside the SK Olympic Handball Gymnasium in southern Seoul around 8 p.m. Wednesday to state their position on the investigation.

- New gender-neutral police hiring policy drives surge in female recruits (2026-06-23 11:57)

Korea's first unified, gender-neutral hiring process for entry-level police officers resulted in women comprising a record 37.8 percent of the selected candidates. The National Police Agency (NPA) announced Monday that women accounted for 1,112 of the 2,941 applicants selected in the final round for the first half of 2026. This marks the first time women exceeded 30 percent of new hires, aligning with their 37.1 percent share of all applicants. Men accounted for 62.9 percent of the applicant pool and 1,829 of the final selections, or 62.2 percent. Under the previous system, the agency enforced strict gender quotas that generally capped female recruits near 20 percent. Under the new process, candidates faced identical written exams, interviews and physical fitness tests. The agency also shifted the physical evaluation from graded metrics to a pass-fail standard. The agency fully implemented the unified process following a recommendation from the Police Reform Committee in 2017, a directive from the NPA Gender Equality Committee in 2020 and a formal resolution by the National Police Commission.

- Digital sex crimes by intimate partners increase, report finds (2026-06-23 11:57)

Offenses involving digital sex crimes by current or former partners are making up a growing portion of sexual violence in Korea, a new government report showed Tuesday, although the country is experiencing an overall decline in several forms of sexual violence. It also said victim-blaming and secondary victimization remain high. The Ministry of Gender Equality and Family released the results of its comprehensive 2025 survey on sexual violence based on a nationwide study conducted every three years under the Sexual Violence Prevention and Victims Protection Act. The 2025 survey was conducted with 10,151 men and women aged 19 to 64. Findings showed that lifetime victimization rates for several major offenses have fallen compared to the results of the 2022 survey. The lifetime prevalence of sexual violence involving means of communication — such as phones and online platforms — decreased from 9.8 percent to 7.6 percent, while sexual harassment fell from 3.9 percent to 2.4 percent and rape, including attempted rape, from 0.2 percent to 0.1 percent. Behind the overall decline, however, the

- PM nominee sells three homes, leaving only one amid criticism (2026-06-23 11:57)

Prime Minister nominee Han Seong-sook has sold off three homes, leaving her with only one house, her office said Tuesday, as she prepares for a parliamentary confirmation hearing where her ownership of multiple homes was expected to be the main target of criticism. Han, a former CEO of online portal giant Naver before joining the government as minister for small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs) and startups last year, had owned three homes in Seoul and another in Gyeonggi Province, a point that the opposition denounces as running counter to President Lee Jae Myung's criticism of owners of multiple homes and real estate speculation.

The remaining home is a house in Seoul's central district of Samcheong-dong, the office said. " Prime Minister nominee Han Seong-sook said she feels a heavy responsibility as a high-level civil servant and will take the lead in carrying out the government's real estate policy stance," the office said. Han's parliamentary confirmation hearing is set for Thursday and Friday. Her nomination is expected to be approved as the ruling Democratic Party of Korea holds

- Industry ministry launches new committee to review US investment projects (2026-06-23 11:57)

Korea launched a project management committee led by the industry minister Tuesday to review the viability of potential projects in the United States under Seoul's $350 billion investment pledge. The Ministry of Trade, Industry and Resources held the inaugural meeting of the project management committee for potential U.S. investment projects, where participants vowed to conduct a comprehensive review of both commercial viability and strategic interests. " The committee will serve as the first gateway in the domestic approval process for investments in the U.S.," the industry ministry said, noting it will review the commercial viability of projects, as well as their strategic and legal aspects and detailed terms. The steering committee under the Korea-U.S. Strategic Investment Corp. (KUIC), which was launched last week, on the other hand, will be responsible for decision-making and fund management. Projects reviewed by both committees will require additional approval from the National Assembly before consultations with Washington. The National Assembly passed the Special Act on Korea-U.S. S

- President ramps up regional growth blueprint, putting AI, chips at center (2026-06-23 06:07)

President Lee Jae Myung will introduce a sweeping growth strategy next week to spur balanced regional development in collaboration with the private sector, according to multiple officials from Cheong Wa Dae and business circles, Tuesday. The strategy will be presented at a public briefing on Monday set to be attended by business leaders from Samsung, SK, Hyundai Motor, LG and other major conglomerates. The plan is expected to serve as the Lee administration's first concrete blueprint for fostering artificial intelligence (AI), semiconductor and other cutting-edge industries beyond the Seoul metropolitan area, under a broader national transformation agenda for Lee's second year in office. The conglomerates are likely to outline domestically focused investment plans tied to their core businesses, including AI, semiconductors, data centers, future mobility, batteries and advanced materials. The government is expected to announce a package of support measures, including tax incentives, regulatory easing and assistance in securing electricity, water supplies and skilled workers for regional

- Gov't eases tax fears for returning diaspora via anonymous counseling (2026-06-23 05:57)

For many older adults who are members of the global Korean diaspora, the desire to spend their retirement years in their ancestral homeland is often complicated by a daunting, opaque obstacle: the local tax code. Fearing that the wealth they have accumulated overseas will be heavily penalized upon entry, many foreign citizens of Korean descent hesitate to pull the trigger on relocation. To eliminate that anxiety, the National Tax Service (NTS) said Tuesday that it will launch a dedicated, one-on-one online tax counseling service starting in July. The initiative aims to dispel pervasive tax myths and ease the transition for the country's 7 million global diaspora members looking to return to Korea. "Many overseas Koreans hesitate to return due to vague tax anxieties or outright misinformation," a spokesperson for the agency said. Common misconceptions include the belief that the Korean government automatically taxes all historic global income once a person registers as a resident, or confusion over how capital gain taxes apply to foreign real estate. The new program, managed by a special

- Busan opens 8 km of pet-friendly trails across 5 scenic routes (2026-06-23 05:57)

Korea's second-largest city is putting its best paw forward in an effort to smooth over growing tensions between dog lovers and the rest of the public. The Busan Metropolitan Government announced on Tuesday the completion of five dedicated pet-friendly trails stretching a combined eight kilometers across the coastal metropolis. The project is the latest step in Mayor Park Heong-joon's initiative to transform Busan into a pet-friendly city. As the number of domestic pet owners continues to skyrocket nationwide, municipalities are searching for creative urban planning solutions to minimize friction in shared public spaces. Busan's solution targets five of its most popular scenic spots, retrofitting existing pathways to better accommodate four-legged pedestrians without inconveniencing two-legged ones. The newly minted trails feature clever puns incorporating the word "daengdaengi," from the internet slang for dogs. They include "Haeundaeng-gil," a 1.4-kilometer stretch near the city's famed beach, and "Geumgangdaeng-gil," which winds through the forested slopes of Geumgang Park. The c

- Seoul forges arts pacts across Europe to boost global soft power (2026-06-23 05:57)

Seeking to transform Korea's capital into a global hub, the Seoul Foundation for Arts and Culture announced Tuesday a sweeping diplomatic push across Europe designed to project the city's "soft power" through major festival partnerships and artistic exchanges. The initiative, led by the foundation's president Song Hyeong-jong, marks a strategic effort by metropolitan officials to elevate Seoul into the ranks of the world's top cultural cities. Following a diplomatic tour through Singapore earlier this year, Seoul arts officials secured long-term partnerships with civic leaders and cultural institutions in Spain, Romania and the Netherlands. The centerpiece of the European tour came on June 9 in Barcelona, where Song signed a strategic memorandum of understanding with Xavier Marcé, the Spanish city's councillor for culture and creative industries. During the summit, Barcelona officials formally invited Seoul to be the guest of honor at La Mercè in 2028, Spain's largest street arts festival. The agreement establishes a permanent pipeline for performing and visual arts exchanges. Beginn

- Lee calls for policies supporting young people left out of tech, stock boom (2026-06-23 05:57)

President Lee Jae Myung on Tuesday called for state policies supporting young people, pointing out that recent booms in the semiconductor and stock markets have widened asset disparities, leaving many young people behind. The president made the remarks while presiding over a Cabinet meeting amid concerns that the record high stock market boom has widened asset disparities between stock investors and non-investors. The benchmark Korea Composite Stock Price Index (KOSPI) was trading above 9,100 points Tuesday, a sharp rise from a year ago, when the index was in the mid- to high-2,000 range. Semiconductor shares have driven the upsurge amid increased demand for artificial intelligence-related chips. "The semiconductor boom resulted in a stellar surge in the stock market, but it has also cast a shadow of asset polarization as its flip side," Lee said. The president described younger generations as the largest group left behind by the boom, with fewer opportunities to accumulate assets through stable jobs or income. "The government should painfully acknowledge the sense of isolation voiced by

- No more baggage claim: Korea, US expand 'luggage-free' transfers to LA, Seattle (2026-06-23 05:57)

People flying from Korea to the United States will soon experience a vastly simplified layover. Starting Tuesday, transit passengers flying from Incheon International Airport to Los Angeles and Seattle will no longer have to collect and recheck their bags during transfers, slicing at least 20 minutes off connection times. The Ministry of Land, Infrastructure and Transport said Monday it is expanding its International Remote Baggage Screening (IRBS) program to Los Angeles International Airport and Seattle-Tacoma International Airport. The initiative, built on an aviation security partnership with the U.S. Department of Homeland Security, allows for a seamless, "luggage-free" transfer to connecting domestic flights. Under the current system, travelers transferring through Los Angeles or Seattle face a logistical hurdle: They must clear immigration, go to the baggage carousel to claim their checked bags, pass through customs, and then drag their luggage to another check-in counter to re-verify it for their next flight — a process that typically takes 90 minutes. The remote screening progr

- North Korean UNESCO official to skip Jeju Forum (2026-06-23 05:57)

A North Korean UNESCO official who had been expected to join this year's Jeju Forum remotely will not take part in the event after all, organizers said Tuesday. Chang Gwang-chol, chief of the Education Policy Section at UNESCO, had been scheduled to participate via video in a Friday session titled "UNESCO and the Future of Education: Challenges and Prospects." Had he joined, he would likely have become the first North Korean figure to take part in the annual international forum. According to the Jeju Peace Institute, which organizes the event, UNESCO recently informed the forum that Chang would no longer participate. A Vietnamese education expert is expected to replace him on the panel. Interest in Chang's participation had grown in recent weeks because the event is being jointly hosted by the Foreign Ministry and Jeju Province at a time when inter-Korean relations remain largely frozen. Earlier this month, the Unification Ministry said it had accepted a contact report — required under South Korean law before nationals may contact North Korean citizens — submitted by the organi

- Mexico fast-tracks Korean drug approvals (2026-06-23 05:57)

In a significant breakthrough for transpacific pharmaceutical trade, Mexico has officially designated Korea's Ministry of Food and Drug Safety as a Reference Regulatory Authority for medicines. The landmark decision is poised to dramatically streamline the entry of Korean pharmaceutical products into Latin America's second-largest market. Under the newly established framework, Korean medical products can now bypass exhaustive local evaluations in Mexico by leveraging an Abbreviated Regulatory Pathway. The Federal Commission for the Protection against Sanitary Risks (COFEPRIS), Mexico's health regulatory body, will significantly simplify technical reviews of the quality, safety and efficacy of these drugs. This fast-track mechanism will slash standard bureaucratic timelines, guaranteeing that final approval decisions are rendered within a maximum of 45 business days. The policy stems from regulatory revisions enacted by COFEPRIS, which grant expedited processing to nations holding elite international standing — specifically, standing members of the International Council for Harmoni

An American man in his 30s has been booked for allegedly assaulting two U.S. soldiers while intoxicated, police said Tuesday. The man is suspected of punching two U.S. Forces Korea service members in their 20s on a street in Pyeongtaek, some 60 kilometers south of Seoul, on Sunday, local police said. The assailant reportedly told investigators he did not know the victims but was angered when they ignored him and used profanity against him. Police said they are investigating the details of the incident.

- Police open preliminary probe into data leak from gov't website for startup program (2026-06-23 05:57)

Police said Tuesday they have launched a preliminary investigation into a recent information leak from a government website for an audition-style startup incubation program. The National Office of Investigation said the Daejeon Metropolitan Police Agency has opened a case into the leak from the "Startup for All" project website, which affected 5,000 people who passed the first round of the program. The office made instructions to open an investigation Thursday when the Korea Institute of Startup and Entrepreneurship Development (KISED) under the startups ministry announced the data leak on the website. The police also received a formal investigation request from KISED into the data leak Monday. The breach came to light after an artificial intelligence solutions company in support of the program was found to have exploited a security vulnerability on the project's website, gaining access to applicants' email addresses, summaries of startup ideas and judges' evaluation comments. On Monday, Prime Minister nominee Han Seong-sook, the incumbent minister of small and medium-sized enterprises an Industry Minister Kim Jung-kwan signaled confidence in the competitiveness of Korea's submarine proposal for Canada's multibillion-dollar fleet renewal project. However, he cautioned that rising geopolitical pressures and Ottawa's emphasis on NATO interoperability could cloud the final decision, with Germany as the other contender. Hanwha Ocean is competing with Germany's TKMS for the $39 billion project to replace the Royal Canadian Navy's aging fleet of four Victoria-class submarines with 12 new 3,000-ton diesel-electric vessels, with the contract also covering long-term maintenance, repair and overhaul (MRO) services. The project is seen as a pivotal opportunity for Korea's shipbuilding sector and a gateway to expanding its defense footprint in North America. The Canadian government is expected to select a preferred bidder by the end of this month. "If (Korea) wins, it would suggest that Canada placed greater weight on the industrial cooperation package than on NATO considerations," the minister said during a press briefing at Government Complex Sejong, Monday. "Given th

- Jeonbuk National University positions physical AI at core of global leadership bid (2026-06-22 23:57)

JEONJU, North Jeolla Province — Inside a manufacturing test lab at Jeonbuk National University, robots move with synchronized precision across a factory floor designed to mimic a real industrial site. Autonomous mobile robots (AMRs) shuttle components between workstations, weaving through production lines without human guidance. Nearby, robotic arms pick up, assemble and inspect parts in a continuous sequence, while cameras and sensors track every movement in real time. The machines communicate with one another, make decisions based on real-time data and adjust on the fly. It is not a commercial factory — not yet. It is an 846-square-meter manufacturing technology test lab designed to replicate real industrial conditions and determine whether physical artificial intelligence (AI) technologies are ready for deployment on actual production floors. The facility sits at the center of Jeonbuk National University's push into physical AI, a field gaining momentum nationally as President Lee Jae Myung works to position Korea as a global leader in the field. Through its test lab and industry-

- Kookmin University students win Red Dot Design Award (2026-06-22 18:02)

Two design students from Kookmin University have won the prestigious Red Dot Award: Design Concept 2026 for their innovative insulin pen design, the university said Monday. The winners are Kang Ha-neul and Lee Min-seo, both students in the Department of Industrial Design. They were recognized for their project called "INSPO." INSPO was first presented at an exhibition co-organized by the product design clubs of Kookmin University and Konkuk University in spring 2025. Kookmin University said the award is meaningful as it demonstrates international recognition of design ideas developed by students through club activities and exhibitions. The Red Dot Design Award, based in Germany, is regarded as one of the world's top three design awards, along with the IDEA awards in the United States and the iF Design Award in Germany. Among its categories, the Design Concept category focuses on discovering innovative ideas and future-oriented design concepts that have not yet been commercialized. INSPO is a smart

- Searching for K-Sappho: LGBTQ+ people in Korean history (2026-06-22 12:02)

“I tell you / Someone will remember us / even in another time.” This three-line fragment of a poem is attributed to Sappho of Lesbos, a poet well-known for her wistful yet romantic musings on love. She is also the etymological origin of the term “sapphic,” and the more widely known “lesbian.” Sappho is a rare case of a historical figure that is widely agreed to have been part of the LGBTQ+ community. Historical figures, unless their sexualities are explicitly voiced, are often viewed through a lens of heteronormativity. Even considering shifting societal attitudes toward sexual orientation and gender expression, history yields proof that people have always been more complex than the comfortable binaries many believe in. Though not widely known or referenced, Korean history too features its own half-forgotten Sapphos, often mentioned only in passing but with enough consistent presence that they cannot be entirely overwritten — and when better than now to remember them? - Seoul moves to raise subway free-ride age to 70, include bus access (2026-06-22 12:02)

Public transportation passengers aged 65 and older can ride the subway for free, but that age may soon be raised to 70. The Seoul Metropolitan Government said Monday it will move forward with a public hearing on a proposed plan to raise the age threshold, while expanding transportation support for older residents. City officials said they received an official request from the Korean Seoul Senior Citizens Association earlier in the day to jointly host a public forum on senior transportation welfare policies. The city plans to accept the proposal and organize a hearing that allows broader citizen participation. Details on the schedule and venue will be announced on the city’s website. The plan comes as the city pushes to adjust the current free ride system, which grants unlimited free access to all residents aged 65 and older under the Welfare of Older Persons Act. Making the change was a key pledge by Seoul Mayor Oh Se-hoon in his recent reelection campaign earlier this month. The move follows a June 19 meeting between Oh and the association’s leadership, where both sides discussed ad

- Activist calls for school police as alternative to ‘Teach You a Lesson’ agents (2026-06-22 11:57)

An education activist is calling for the introduction of a U.S.-style school police system in Korea, arguing that a recent proposal to create a real-life version of a fictional teacher protection squad from the Netflix series "Teach You a Lesson" is legally infeasible and that only police officers with investigative powers can realistically safeguard teachers and students. Lee Keon-joo, representative of the Citizens' Coalition for the Future of School Education, a Seoul-based nongovernmental organization, said the proposal by Gyeonggi education superintendent-elect Ahn Min-seok — inspired by the Korean Educational Rights Protection Bureau, a fictional squad in the drama that deploys discipline agents, sometimes through vigilante violence, to rescue classrooms from unruly students and difficult parents — fails to address the legal realities teachers face daily. “What’ s depicted in the drama is a kind offantasy, because in reality teachers would face serious legal consequences for human rightsviolations or child abuse if they did the same,” Lee said during a recent interview

- Outgoing PM pledges to revive party ratings, prepares for party leadership race (2026-06-22 11:57)

Outgoing Prime Minister Kim Min-seok pledged efforts to lift public support for the Democratic Party of Korea (DPK) as he prepares to leave his post and focus on party affairs, signaling his intention to run for the party leadership. He implied that current DPK leaders, including Chairman Jung Chung-rae, were responsible for the disappointing results in the June 3 local elections and the downward trend in approval ratings for both the party and President Lee Jae Myung. Kim offered his evaluation of the party’ s situation on Monday at a press conference, during which he also reviewed his experience as prime minister over the past year, which he is set to leave as soon as his successor is appointed. He is widely believed to be preparing to run in the party’ s leadership race, in a national convention set for August. “Now is the time for the party and the administration to show perfect alignment and cooperation, and for the party to do more than it did before the elections to support the president's governance and work to raise overall support for both the party and the administration,

A life sentence has been finalized for a 42-year-old man over fatal stabbings at a Seoul pizza store last year, legal sources said Monday. The Seoul High Court handed down the ruling on Kim Dong-won on June 11. Kim's sentence was finalized Friday after he gave up his final appeal against the appellate court ruling, according to the sources. Kim, who operated a franchise pizza store in southern Seoul, killed an employee of the franchiser, an interior contractor and the contractor's daughter in September following a dispute over repair costs. During the sentencing on June 11, the court rejected his defense, saying, "While he (Kim) appears to have been stressed by interior defects, his response led to murder, which is unacceptable by societal standards." The prosecution had previously demanded the death penalty.

- Lee’ s disapproval rating tops approval for first time amid ruling party tensions (2026-06-22 11:57)

President Lee Jae Myung’ s disapproval rating has surpassed his approval rating for the first time since he took office, according to a Realmeter survey released Monday, with analysts pointing to growing tensions within the ruling camp as a key factor behind the decline. Lee’ s approval rating fell 4.8 percentage points from the previous week to 46.7 percent, while his disapproval rose 5.5 points to 49.7 percent, marking the first time negative assessments have exceeded positive ones since his inauguration in June 2025. It was also the first time his approval rating fell below 50 percent in a Realmeter survey. Realmeter attributed the decline to public backlash over election management failures and intensified infighting within the ruling Democratic Party of Korea (DPK). The pollster also said concerns over widening wealth disparities contributed to declining support among moderate voters and those living in the Seoul metropolitan area. Kim Sang-il, a political commentator, said the drop reflected broader concerns about how the governing camp has conducted itself since the June 3 local

- University of Seoul-supported startup to develop AI-based road safety management model (2026-06-22 11:57)

Mobilintec, a mobility and transportation data startup, plans to develop and demonstrate an agentic artificial intelligence (AI)-based traffic collision prediction and response system for local roads as part of a government-led project to develop innovative AI city technologies. The company said Friday that it will participate as a joint research institution in the “2026 AI City Innovative Technology Discovery Project” organized by the Ministry of Land, Infrastructure and Transport. Mobilintec, based in the campus town program of the University of Seoul, noted that its role is to address traffic safety issues on local roads closely connected to citizens’ daily lives by leveraging AI technologies. The university-supported startup seeks to accelerate the commercialization of agentic AI-based risk situation recognition and prediction technologies and expand urban safety services. According to the firm, the project will enable agentic AI to analyze risk situations in real time and predict traffic collisions on local roads shared by diverse road users, including pedestrians, vehicles, p

- Ex-justice minister given 25-year prison sentence for martial law role (2026-06-22 11:57)

Former Justice Minister Park Sung-jae was sentenced to 25 years in prison Monday after a district court found him guilty of playing a key role in an insurrection through his involvement in former President Yoon Suk Yeol's martial law bid. The Seoul Central District Court handed down the heavy punishment for Park, which surpassed the 20-year prison term sought by special counsel Cho Eun-suk's team. The court immediately placed Park under custody, citing concerns that he may destroy evidence. Cho's team earlier indicted Park on charges of playing a key role in an insurrection and abusing his power by calling a meeting of senior ministry officials following Yoon's declaration of martial law on Dec. 3, 2024. The court convicted Park on both charges, recognizing the special counsel team's argument that Park had called the meeting to review dispatching prosecutors to a martial law-supporting body, check the capacity of correctional facilities, allegedly to hold politicians and key figures expected to be arrested under the martial law, and order ministry officials in charge of imposing travel

As the number of students from migrant backgrounds continues to grow in Korea’ s classrooms, Seoul education officials are expanding efforts to help them navigate a college admissions system that can be difficult even for native-born students to understand. The Seoul Metropolitan Office of Education said Monday that it will broaden customized career and college admissions support for students with migrant backgrounds through a series of information sessions, consulting programs and career fair services. The initiative is designed to provide practical admissions information while strengthening the college and career planning capabilities of students, parents and teachers. A major admissions briefing will be held Tuesday at the education office's main auditorium. The session will introduce special admissions pathways, including social integration admissions, opportunities for students from multicultural families and admissions programs for foreign nationals. Officials will also present successful admission cases tailored to different student groups, including late-arrival immigrant students.

- AI-fabricated witch hunt against Kim Soo-hyun may be 1st of many (2026-06-22 05:57)

Of the several false allegations made against actor Kim Soo-hyun, the most damaging came with the release of an audio recording purportedly featuring the voice of the late actor Kim Sae-ron, whose relationship with Kim Soo-hyun had become the focus of the controversy. “We began dating when I was in middle school and broke up after I entered college. The first time we had sex was during winter break in my second year of middle school. Looking back now, I realize I was taken advantage of.” The recording later turned out to have been generated using artificial intelligence (AI). It was among the false materials cited in the case against YouTuber Kim Se-eui, who was taken into custody on charges of spreading false information about Kim Soo-hyun. In retrospect, things might have unfolded differently had the accusation been presented in another form. Had it been made in a written statement or delivered in person by Kim Se-eui, himself already a controversial figure, the public would likely have reacted with caution and demanded verification. But it came in the form of an audio recording pu

- Seoul's Jung District launches AI platform for Dongdaemun fashion merchants (2026-06-22 05:57)

Jung District in central Seoul said Monday it has launched PROMAX, a free artificial intelligence (AI) image generation prompt platform developed specifically for merchants in the Dongdaemun fashion market, in what officials say is the first initiative of its kind by a local government in Korea. The platform, developed by the district's Dongdaemun Buyer Lounge, provides ready-made text prompts that merchants can copy and feed into generative AI tools with photos of their clothing to produce professional-quality virtual model images. Prompt writing, the process of composing detailed text instructions to guide AI image generators, had been a significant barrier for the merchants, who found trial and error too time-consuming. The Dongdaemun Buyer Lounge, a multi-purpose fashion community space on the fourth floor of Dongdaemun Design Plaza Fashion Mall, began offering one-on-one AI training to merchants in September last year. After seeing that merchants were interested in AI but struggled with actually using it, the district began platform development in May and ran a pilot before the offi

- 2 Korean-operated vessels exit Strait of Hormuz following US-Iran deal (2026-06-22 05:57)

Two Korean-operated vessels have exited the Strait of Hormuz following last week's ceasefire agreement between the United States and Iran that reopened the strategic waterway, the maritime ministry said Monday. The Ministry of Oceans and Fisheries said the vessels are sailing normally after passing through the strait, but they have yet to completely leave the high-risk part of the passage. No Korean crew members are on board the vessels, and they are not bound for South, the ministry said, declining to disclose further details due to safety concerns. Under the ceasefire agreement reached with Washington, Tehran has agreed to allow vessels to transit the Strait of Hormuz without any fees for 60 days following the signing of the deal. With the departure of the two vessels, the number of Korean-linked ships remaining in the strait has fallen to 22. The ministry said 135 Korean sailors remain in the Persian Gulf, including 102 aboard Korean-operated vessels and 33 serving on foreign-flagged ships.

- Kookmin University research team's paper accepted for presentation at international robotics conference (2026-06-22 05:57)

A Kookmin University research team has developed a new technology that helps artificial intelligence (AI) better understand 3D environments when objects are hidden from view or visual information is limited. The university said Friday that a paper detailing the technology has been accepted for presentation at the 2026 IEEE/RSJ International Conference on Intelligent Robots and Systems (IROS) set for Sept. 27 to Oct. 1 in Pittsburgh. The team was led by Lee Seong-won, professor at the university's School of Electrical Engineering. The team included Kim Jun-ho, a senior majoring in electrical engineering. Kim is the first author of the paper titled "RayOcc: Occlusion-Agnostic Ray Occupancy Estimation via Gaussian Mixture Intensity," which proposes a robust AI-based method for estimating the occupancy of 3D spaces, helping overcome visibility limitations in complex environments. The university noted that the technology addresses challenges in 3D spatial understanding — essential for autonomous driving and robotics systems — and demonstrates the potential to overcome uncertainties

- S. Korea slams N. Korea's expanded border fencing as armistice agreement violation (2026-06-22 05:57)

The South Korean military on Monday denounced North Korea's intensified border fencing as a violation of the armistice agreement that halted the 1950-53 Korean War, following a report that the fences have been built very close to the inter-Korean border. The JoongAng Ilbo reported that the North has installed barbed wire fences just 80-90 meters from the Military Demarcation Line (MDL) separating the two Koreas, clearing land to plant mines as close as 5-10 meters to the MDL, citing military sources and a lawmaker. After the North's leader Kim Jong-un declared inter-Korean ties as those between "two states hostile to each other" in late 2023, the North has been fortifying the border since April 2024 by reinforcing barbed wire fences, planting mines and erecting anti-tank barriers along the MDL. "The North Korean military's installation of barriers along the MDL is a clear violation of the Armistice Agreement and our military will continue to respond in close cooperation with the United Nations Command (UNC)," the Joint Chiefs of Staff (JCS) said in a statement. The JCS said the military Sungkyunkwan University ranked 108th in the QS World University Rankings 2027, rising 18 places from 126th last year and reaffirming its global competitiveness as a leading institution. The university said Friday that the rise was driven mainly by enhanced research performance. Research-related indicators, including citations per faculty and research impact, showed significant gains, reflecting the university's sustained research achievements accumulated over many years. The institution regards the accomplishment as one of the key outcomes of its Vision 2030 initiative. In September 2021, it announced the initiative with the goal of becoming a global leader in creating value for future society through creative challenges and innovation. At the time, the university set four strategic goals: innovating university education, becoming a leading research-centered university, building mutually beneficial partnerships and enhancing the university brand. The university said the rise in the global rankings represents a tangible result of its continued efforts to achieve the goal of becoming a l

- Investigators seek arrest warrant for Shincheonji sect leader Lee Man-hee (2026-06-22 05:57)

Investigators said Monday they have filed for an arrest warrant for the founder of the Shincheonji Church of Jesus, a nonmainstream religious sect, over suspicions he forced church members to join the main opposition People Power Party (PPP) ahead of elections between 2021 and 2024. Lee Man-hee is accused of violating the Political Parties Act, which bans forcing people to join or quit political parties. He is suspected of forcing church followers to join the PPP with the intention of swaying the outcome of the party's presidential primary in 2021 and the general election primaries in 2024. A joint investigative team between the police and prosecution, charged with investigating allegedly corrupt ties between political and religious groups, has been investigating the allegations surrounding Shincheonji.

- Korea to sharpen tobacco warnings with blunter labels (2026-06-22 05:57)

Korea is doubling down on its efforts to curb smoking, announcing Monday a sweeping redesign of the graphic warnings plastered across tobacco products. Starting Dec. 23, cigarette packs will feature more visceral imagery and blunter language, a shift intended to shock consumers out of complacency after a six-month grace period for manufacturers. The overhaul marks the sixth iteration of the nation's warning system since its inception in 2016. Under Korean law, these public health alerts must be refreshed every 24 months to combat "warning fatigue" — a phenomenon where smokers become desensitized to the graphic images. This year's update, however, is less of a routine rotation and more of a strategic escalation. For traditional cigarettes, the Ministry of Health and Welfare is pivoting toward harsher realities. Out is the warning for erectile dysfunction. In is a new, stark depiction of kidney cancer. Five existing graphics have also been redesigned for maximum psychological impact. More notable than the imagery is the linguistic shift. The ministry is abandoning polite, conditional

- Ex-defense minister booked over alleged attempt to provoke N. Korea for martial law bid (2026-06-22 05:57)

A special counsel team has booked former Defense Minister Kim Yong-hyun on suspicion of attempting to use a military intelligence unit to create a pretext for former President Yoon Suk Yeol's martial law bid, legal sources said Monday. Special counsel Kwon Chang-young has been investigating allegations that the Defense Intelligence Command (DIC) attempted to push for operations against North Korea to foment inter-Korean tensions and establish a justification for Yoon to declare martial law in December 2024. It has been looking into whether anti-North Korea drills conducted by the DIC's covert agents were prepared to provoke Pyongyang for the martial law declaration. Kwon's team believes the exercise cannot be seen as regular training. The team has booked Kim and two former DIC commanders — Noh Sang-won and Moon Sang-ho — as suspects on charges of benefiting the enemy, according to the sources. It questioned former President Yoon over the allegations on June 13. Earlier this month, Kim received a 30-year prison sentence for involvement in orchestrating drone infiltrations into North Ko

- Lee's disapproval rating exceeds approval rating for 1st time since inauguration (2026-06-22 05:57)

President Lee Jae Myung's disapproval rating has surpassed his approval rating for the first time since he took office in June last year, a survey showed Monday, amid the fallout of ballot shortages reported during the recent local elections. In the poll commissioned by the EKN newspaper and conducted by Realmeter, Lee's approval rating dropped 4.8 percentage points from a week earlier to 46.7 percent, marking the first time his approval rating fell below 50 percent in a Realmeter poll since his inauguration. The negative assessment climbed 5.5 percentage points to 49.7 percent. Realmeter attributed the decline to the recent controversy surrounding poor management of ballot shortages in the June 3 local elections and a deepening internal strife in the ruling Democratic Party of Korea (DPK). "Despite positive factors, including the outcome of the president's trip to Europe and the benchmark Korea Composite Stock Price Index topping the historic 9,000-point level, concerns over widening inequality in the asset market intensified, leading to the decline in support among moderates and those

- PM nominee apologizes for information leak from 'Startup for All' website (2026-06-22 05:57)

Prime Minister nominee Han Seong-sook apologized Monday over a recent information leak from the government's website for an audition-style startup incubation program. An artificial intelligence solution firm serving as a project partner was found to have exploited a security loophole in the website for the "Startup for All" project and collected the emails, summarized startup ideas and judge reviews of 5,000 people that passed the first round of the audition. The leak came to light after the company sent promotional emails to the successful candidates. "I earnestly apologize for the concerns and inconvenience caused by the personal information leak from the Startup for All platform," Han said in her capacity as minister for medium-sized enterprises (SMEs) and startups. "I feel heavy responsibility for failing to protect the trust of startup applicants ... and offer words of deep apology." The startup ministry also came under fire for reporting the leak to the Korea Internet and Security Agency (KISA) some 70 hours after learning of the incident. The ministry said it took emergency security

- Investigators to question election workers over ballot shortage (2026-06-22 05:57)

Investigators on Monday were set to question a group of civil servants who worked at polling stations that experienced ballot shortages during the June 3 local elections, legal sources said. Eight individuals have been asked to appear before a joint police and prosecution team investigating the ballot shortages that temporarily suspended voting at 26 polling stations across the nation. The civil servants in question are said to have been mobilized to manage two polling stations in Seoul that experienced ballot paper shortages. Investigators plan to question them about the election watchdog's response measures to the shortages at the time, according to the informed sources. The move comes after the joint investigation team raided the National Election Commission (NEC) on June 11 as part of its investigation into the shortages. The shortages have sparked public backlash, leading to continued protests outside a gymnasium in southern Seoul that served as a ballot counting center, with some protesters demanding a rerun of the elections. The protests at the SK Olympic Handball Gymnasium have con

- Impeachment petition against defense minister tops 75,000 as reform backlash mounts (2026-06-22 00:02)

Defense Minister Ahn Gyu-back is facing growing opposition to his military reform agenda, with a parliamentary petition calling for his impeachment surpassing 75,000 signatures just four days after it was launched. The petition, which has already cleared the 50,000-signature threshold required for referral to a National Assembly committee, cites concerns over the dismantling of the Defense Counterintelligence Command (DCC), the government's handling of a recent reservist death during training and other defense policies pursued under Ahn. At the same time, a separate petition opposing the proposed consolidation and relocation of Korea's service academies is also approaching the threshold for parliamentary review, highlighting broader resistance to Ahn's reform agenda. According to the National Assembly's petition website, the impeachment petition was opened on Thursday and exceeded 75,000 signatures as of Sunday. It crossed the 50,000-signature mark on Saturday, making it eligible for review by the Assembly's National Defense Committee. Petitioners argued that the defense ministry

- All 6 THAAD launchers return to Seongju from Osan (2026-06-21 11:57)

All six launchers of the Terminal High Altitude Area Defense (THAAD) missile system deployed in the southeastern county of Seongju have returned to base following their relocation in the wake of the U.S.-Israeli war against Iran, sources said Sunday. The truck-mounted launchers were reported to have moved from Seongju to Osan Air Base in Pyeongtaek, about 60 kilometers south of Seoul, in March, fueling speculation the U.S. military was planning to transfer THAAD missile interceptors to the Middle East to support the war. The launchers and other parts of the THAAD battery, however, were believed to have remained in South Korea, as some of the trucks were later seen returning to Seongju. U.S. Forces Korea Commander Gen. Xavier Brunson told a Senate hearing in April that THAAD remained in South Korea. "Currently, we are sending munitions forward, and those are sitting right now waiting to move," he said at the time, without elaborating.

- Protests over ballot shortage continue for 17th day (2026-06-21 11:57)

Protests demanding a rerun of the June 3 local elections marred by ballot paper shortages entered the 17th day Sunday at a ballot counting site in southern Seoul. Protesters continued to chant slogans and hold pickets claiming election fraud outside SK Olympic Handball Gymnasium in Seoul's southern district of Songpa, which was used as a ballot counting site for the elections. As many as 34,000 people were gathered at the venue as of 3:30 p.m., with those in their 20s and 30s accounting for more than half of the total, according to an estimate by the Seoul city government. The protests began June 5, two days after ballot shortages temporarily suspended voting at 26 polling stations. While the National Election Commission (NEC) has apologized for the ballot shortages, it says they do not warrant a rerun under the election law. A joint team of police investigators and prosecutors has been investigating the NEC over the shortages. The government has urged people taking part in the protests to refrain from illegal acts, saying that while peaceful rallies should be protected, illegal acts of v

President Lee Jae Myung appointed five new senior aides, Sunday, in a move aimed at accelerating the implementation of his administration's policy agenda as it enters its second year, with appointments spanning communications, civil affairs, social policy and national security. Presidential chief of staff Kang Hoon-sik announced the appointments during a briefing at Cheong Wa Dae in Seoul, emphasizing that the selections were designed to help realize Lee's vision for the second year of his administration. Seong Ghi-hong, former president and CEO of Yonhap News Agency, was named senior presidential secretary for public relations and communications. Han Chan-sik, a former senior prosecutor, was appointed senior presidential secretary for civil affairs, and is expected to play a key role in advancing the administration's prosecutorial reform agenda. Kim Kyoung-ja, former vice chairperson of the Korean Confederation of Trade Unions and a pharmacist by training, was named senior presidential secretary for social affairs. Former Army commander Kang Gun-jark was appointed first deputy national s

- Samsung, SK hynix-linked semiconductor majors more competitive than SNU admissions (2026-06-21 11:57)

University departments guaranteeing jobs at Samsung Electronics and SK hynix required more competitive admissions scores than Seoul National University's (SNU) natural sciences track this year — a notable milestone given that SNU, widely regarded as Korea's most prestigious university, has long set the benchmark for top admissions scores — reflecting surging student demand for chipmaker careers amid record bonus packages at the two companies. According to an analysis released Sunday by Jongno Academy, a private university admissions prep institution, five semiconductor departments partnered with the two semiconductor giants averaged 96.2 in admission scores based on Korea's College Scholastic Ability Test, also known as Suneung, outpacing SNU's natural science track by 0.4 points. The university-corporate partnership model, introduced in 2003, pairs companies with universities to shape curricula around industry needs. Companies support tuition costs, and most students are guaranteed jobs upon completing their degrees. SK hynix has contracts with Hanyang University, Korea University

- Fraud against foreigners quadruples over 2 years, with K-pop scams rising (2026-06-21 11:57)

As a record number of international visitors flock to Korea on the back of the popularity of Korean culture, crimes targeting foreigners have surged sharply, with K-pop merchandise scams emerging as a growing threat among a broader wave of fraud. According to latest data submitted by the National Police Agency to Rep. Kim Joon-hwan of the ruling Democratic Party of Korea, the number of foreign nationals — whether visitors or residents — who fell victim to fraud in Korea nearly quadrupled over the past two years. The number of foreign fraud victims rose from 5,307 in 2023 to 8,671 in 2024, before skyrocketing to 19,907 last year. One of the notable fraud schemes targeting foreigners are scams related to hallyu, or the Korean wave, in which fraudsters approach overseas fans claiming they can purchase and ship merchandise related to K-pop stars or other Korean celebrities. Victims are asked to send money upfront, after which the scammers disappear without delivering the goods. Such complaints have become increasingly common on social media platforms, particularly X, formerly Twitter, wh

Marking the 60th anniversary of Korea's accession to the Geneva Conventions, the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) opened a special exhibition, "Wars Have Limits," in the lobby of the Seoul Museum of History, on May 15. Displaying the history of the Geneva Conventions and the humanitarian efforts of the Red Cross during the 1950-53 Korean War, the exhibition highlights the grave dangers posed by modern warfare technologies and examines the challenges they present to international humanitarian law, particularly with the emergence of drones, artificial intelligence (AI) and autonomous weapons. While humanitarian needs are growing as wars continue to devastate lives around the world, the resources that can help affected populations are shrinking fast. As the world grapples with rising conflicts, the exhibition invites visitors to reflect on a principle the entire world has agreed on — that even in war, there are limits. At a reception event on June 4, David Quesne, head of the ICRC mission in Seoul, said that there are currently over 130 conflicts worldwide, more than dou

The Ministry of Gender Equality and Family said Sunday it has approved 184 sanctions against 166 people who failed to meet their child support obligations, including travel bans and driver's license suspensions. The sanctions, approved by the 51st child support enforcement review committee earlier this month, included 120 travel bans, 41 driver's license suspensions and 23 cases of public disclosure of personal information, according to the ministry. The average amount of unpaid child support stood at about 45 million won ($29,354), while the largest outstanding amount totaled approximately 192 million won. Under the Child Support Act, sanctions may be imposed on individuals who fail to comply with a court order requiring a lump-sum child support payment for more than 30 days, those who miss child support payments at least three times despite a court enforcement order, or those whose unpaid child support exceeds 30 million won. The number of sanctions has risen steadily, from 639 cases in 2023 to 947 in 2024 and 1,389 last year. In the first half of this year alone, 720 sanctions were ap

Seong Ghi-hong, the new presidential secretary for public relations and communication, is a veteran newswire journalist with 30 years of experience covering politics, the economy and national news. Seong, 58, is the former CEO and president of Yonhap News Agency, who covered an array of areas after joining the company in 1992. In 2007, he visited North Korea with other reporters covering Cheong Wa Dae to report on inter-Korean talks between late former President Roh Moo-hyun and late North Korean leader Kim Jong-il, the father of incumbent North Korean leader Kim Jong-un. Following his three-day trip to Pyongyang, he co-authored a book on the historic event with other reporters and Cheong Wa Dae officials. In 2016 and 2017, he led political news coverage of allegations surrounding former President Park Geun-hye and her impeachment that eventually resulted in an early presidential election. Prior to his appointment as Yonhap News Agency CEO in 2021, he also worked as the news director of Yonhap News Television from 2019. Seong is described as being trusted from both inside and outside the o

New presidential secretary for social affairs Kim Kyoung-ja is a pharmacist-turned labor activist who previously served as a senior leader of Korea's largest umbrella labor federation. Kim, 59, began her career as a labor activist in the healthcare sector in 1995, serving as head of the Inha University Hospital's labor union under the Korean Federation of Hospital Workers' Union (KHMU). She later led the KHMU's Gyeonggi regional chapter from 1998 to 2005 and served as the union's vice president from 2006 to 2008. Kim went on to serve as a vice president of the Korean Confederation of Trade Unions (KCTU), one of Korea's largest labor federations, in 2009, 2013, and from 2015 to 2017. She was also the federation's senior vice president from 2017 to 2020. Kim has also served as a member of the National Pension Fund Management Committee under the Ministry of Health and Welfare, and worked as a visiting professor at Woosuk University in the southwestern city of Jeonju.

- World Refugee Day festival brings communities together in Seoul (2026-06-21 05:57)

To mark World Refugee Day, people from different walks of life gathered on Saturday for the fifth "Shall We Walk?" Refugee Festival at Ttukseom Hangang Park beneath Cheongdam Bridge near Jayang Station on Seoul Metro Line 7. Despite the rainy weather, the festival featured refugee performances representing cultures from around the world, where refugees took center stage to share their lives, stories and unique talents. Attendees enjoyed traditional Burundian drumming, Ethiopian and Jumma cultural dance performances, Sudanese, Pakistani and Afghan music, Korean songs, African traditional singing and K-pop, highlighting the cultural diversity that refugees offer to Korean society and showcasing refugee communities living in Korea. Organized by Refugee pNan, a local nongovernmental organization, the festival was designed to foster natural encounters that overcome prejudice. Rather than relying on lectures or formal discussions, the open-space event encourages understanding through shared experiences, aiming to reduce the distance and misconceptions often associated with the term “refugee

- Fraud against foreigners quadruples in 2 years, with K-pop scams rising (2026-06-21 05:57)

As a record number of international visitors flock to Korea on the back of the popularity of Korean culture, crimes targeting foreigners have surged sharply, with K-pop merchandise scams emerging as a growing threat among a broader wave of fraud. According to latest data submitted by the National Police Agency to Rep. Kim Joon-hwan of the ruling Democratic Party of Korea, the number of foreign nationals — whether visitors or residents — who fell victim to fraud in Korea nearly quadrupled over the past two years. The number of foreign fraud victims rose from 5,307 in 2023 to 8,671 in 2024, before skyrocketing to 19,907 last year. One of the notable fraud schemes targeting foreigners are scams related to hallyu, or the Korean wave, in which fraudsters approach overseas fans claiming they can purchase and ship merchandise related to K-pop stars or other Korean celebrities. Victims are asked to send money upfront, after which the scammers disappear without delivering the goods. Such complaints have become increasingly common on social media platforms, particularly X, formerly Twitter, wh

- Ex-veteran prosecutor appointed presidential secretary for civil affairs (2026-06-21 05:57)

New presidential secretary for civil affairs Han Chan-sik, a former senior prosecutor and attorney, is expected to help steer the Lee Jae Myung administration's prosecutorial reform agenda, leveraging his deep knowledge of the prosecution service and legal affairs. Han, 59, previously served as director-general of the Justice Ministry's Human Rights Bureau and chief prosecutor of the Seoul Eastern District Prosecutors Office. While serving as chief prosecutor, he led the investigation into allegations of a blacklist involving senior officials under the former liberal Moon Jae-in administration. He resigned in 2019 ahead of the inauguration of Yoon Suk Yeol as prosecutor general, who later became president, and joined Kim & Chang, South Korea's largest law firm, as an attorney in August 2022. Han is expected to focus on completing the administration's prosecutorial reform agenda ahead of the planned overhaul of the prosecution system in October, including the creation of separate agencies responsible for public prosecutions and criminal investigations. Attention is also focused on whether

A Seoul court is set to deliver its verdict this week on former first lady Kim Keon Hee, who has been indicted over receiving luxury gifts in exchange for job appointments and business favors. The Seoul Central District Court will hold the sentencing hearing for Kim, the wife of ousted former President Yoon Suk Yeol, on charges of violating a law on the acceptance of bribes for mediation, at 2 p.m. Friday, according to judicial sources Sunday. Kim was indicted in December on charges of receiving over 100 million won ($65,231) worth of jewelry, including a Van Cleef & Arpels necklace, from the chairman of a construction company between March and May 2022, along with a request for a government position for the businessman's son-in-law. She also allegedly received a golden turtle ornament from Lee Bae-yong, former head of the National Education Commission, in April that year in exchange for her appointment to the position. In addition, Kim is suspected of receiving a Dior bag worth 5.4 million won from a pastor in 2022, as well as a Vacheron Constantin watch from an entrepreneur that year.

President Lee Jae Myung has appointed new senior presidential secretaries for communications and civil affairs, along with three other aides, the presidential chief of staff said Sunday. Seong Ghi-hong, former CEO and president of Yonhap News Agency, was appointed presidential secretary for public relations and communication, while Han Chan-sik, a former senior prosecutor, was named presidential secretary for civil affairs, the official said. Kim Kyoung-ja, former vice chairperson of the country's biggest umbrella union, the Korean Confederation of Trade Unions, was appointed presidential secretary for social affairs. Former Army commander Kang Gun-jark and Song Ki-ho, a senior official at the National Security Office, were named the first and third deputy national security advisers, respectively. Presidential chief of staff Kang Hoon-sik described the new presidential secretary for communication, the second person to hold the post under the Lee administration, as a veteran journalist with 30 years of experience who is equipped with a sense of balance and sound judgment. "He will closely

- Gyeonggi Province launches 1st survey of its 18,000 refugees (2026-06-20 23:57)

Gyeonggi Province, the populous economic engine surrounding Seoul, has launched the first comprehensive provincial investigation into the living conditions of its refugee population. The initiative marks a significant shift in how Korean local governments manage forced migration, moving beyond generalized immigrant support systems to address the distinct legal and socioeconomic vulnerabilities of displaced people. At an inaugural briefing held Thursday at the Gyeonggi Migration and Integration Support Center in Uijeongbu, officials outlined an ambitious monitoring framework designed to map the structural gaps plaguing the state's refugee safety nets. The investigation comes on the heels of the province's pioneering Ordinance on the Protection of Human Rights and Guarantee of Basic Living for Refugees, enacted last year. As of late March, Gyeonggi Province was home to 18,169 refugees, representing roughly 2.5 percent of the region's long-term foreign residents. While Korea became the first East Asian country to pass a standalone refugee law in 2012, humanitarian groups have long criticized

“578 Ganeung 3-dong, Uijeongbu, Gyeonggi Province. 3-tong, 2-ban,” she said in Korean. Meeky Woo Flippen, now 60, still has that address etched into her memory after more than 50 years. “My mother taught me the address when I was 5. ‘I’m not going anywhere,’ she told me. ‘So if someone kidnaps you, make sure you come back here.’” As she recalled, there had indeed been attempts to take her away. Whenever she returned home from school, a “lady” from Holt International waited for her around the corner. “You can’t live here,” the woman told her. “In America, you can eat all the chocolate you want.” She then seized Meeky by the hand and tried to drag her away. Meeky wrenched herself free and ran as fast as her legs could carry her. When she reached her doorstep, her mother rushed outside and roared. “I told you I’m not sending my children away. Get lost!” Meeky smiled as she recalled those memories of her childhood and her mother. She said the hurt of being jeered at as a “dirty Yankee girl” at school would fade whenever she took shelter behind her mother

SUWON — A regional court on Saturday found a former vice governor of Gyeonggi Province guilty of perjury for falsely testifying to parliament that he was provided with alcohol and food during a prosecution interrogation. The Suwon District Court sentenced Lee Hwa-young to four months in prison, convicting him of violating the law on testimony before the National Assembly, according to the court document. The case was tried before a seven-panel citizen jury. Lee was indicted on perjury charges after he testified during a parliamentary hearing in 2024 that he and Kim Seong-tae, former chairman of underwear maker Ssangbongwool, were treated to alcohol and raw salmon during questioning by prosecutors over their involvement in an illegal remittance to North Korea in 2019. Lee claimed that they had talked about getting their stories straight to incriminate President Lee Jae Myung, then the main opposition party leader who had served as Gyeonggi governor when the unauthorized money transfer allegedly took place. The latest court ruling extends the jail term for the former vice governor as he

- Rain to continue nationwide through evening after heavy downpours (2026-06-20 05:57)

Rain is expected to continue across South Korea through Saturday evening after heavy downpours drenched much of the country overnight, weather officials said. Between 6 p.m. Friday and 6 a.m. Saturday, accumulated precipitation reached 137.5 millimeters on Halla Mountain on Jeju Island, 94 mm in Sangju, 88 mm in Gongju and 60.6 mm in Seoul, according to the Korea Meteorological Administration (KMA). Rain is expected to continue until Sunday morning in mountainous and coastal areas of Gangwon Province. Additional rainfall of 50-120 mm is forecast for the province's mountainous and coastal areas. The Seoul metropolitan area, Gangwon's inland region, Daegu, North Gyeongsang Province and Ulleung Island are also expected to receive 30-80 mm more rain. The KMA warned of rough seas along southern and eastern waters, with waves expected to reach up to 5 meters in the East Sea through Sunday.

- [\[Robert J. Fouser,\] Is Seoul turning conservative?](#) (2026-06-25 20:30)

Mayor Oh Se-hoon's surprising election victory on June 3 stirred a wave of commentary on the rise of conservatism in Seoul. Most pundits agreed that interest in real estate redevelopment, particularly in the upscale Gangnam area, was the primary factor behind Oh's victory. The Democratic Party of Korea improved its performance over 2022 in elections for the city council, district mayors and district councils. This contradictory trend leaves the question of where Seoul is headed unanswered. A wal

Scholars from around the world will gather in South Korea in early July for an international academic conference exploring BTS' cultural influence and the group' s post-military service era. The International Society for BTS Studies announced Thursday that the event, "BTS: A Global Interdisciplinary Conference," will be held July 2-3 at Jeonbuk National University International Convention Center in Jeonju, North Jeolla Province, under the theme "The Next-Generation Hallyu and BTS." The annual con

- Why are more young Koreans walking away from elite careers? (2026-06-25 06:24)

For generations, South Korea offered young people a clear bargain: study hard, enter a prestigious university, land a secure job at a major conglomerate and climb the corporate ladder. More young Koreans are now questioning whether that bargain still pays off — in money, autonomy, mental well-being and the ability to build a life that feels livable. When Lee Seung-jun graduated from one of South Korea' s top engineering schools and landed a job at Samsung Electronics, he appeared to have achieved

South Korean companies and financial institutions need to prepare for an AI era in which software does not just answer questions but performs tasks and makes payments on its own, speakers said Wednesday at the Global Business Forum in Seoul. At the 11th session of the forum, hosted by The Korea Herald and Herald Business, Park Min-jun of Wrtn Technologies and Korea Insurance Institute President Ha Tae-kyung argued that AI adoption will hinge less on the technology itself than on the systems built

- Why Seoul, UNC see North Korea's DMZ activities differently (2026-06-25 06:02)

South Korea and the United Nations Command's interpretations of North Korea's recent activities inside the Demilitarized Zone reflect contrasting views of what constitutes a violation of the 1953 Armistice Agreement. The disagreement centers on North Korea's construction of fences, road repairs, land clearing and suspected mine-laying inside the 4-kilometer-wide buffer zone surrounding the Military Demarcation Line, the de facto border between the two Koreas. Seoul says the work, particularly wh

Legendary singer-songwriter Kim Gun-mo will release a new digital single, "How Far Are You?," on July 1, his first new song in a decade, his agency Guneum Company announced Thursday. The release is Kim's first since his 2016 EP "50," which commemorated the 25th anniversary of his debut. "How Far Are You?" is a remake of the title track from Korean folk singer Jeon Young's 1977 debut album. For the first time in his career, Kim performs while playing the guitar himself, setting aside the piano pe

- Korea gets its first bisexual dating show. Will queer dating TV survive here? (2026-06-25 04:56)

Though South Korea has aired its first bisexual dating reality show, queer dating programs remain a niche segment in the country. Still, experts say the continued rollout of such shows reflects growing confidence in LGBTQ+ content, fueled in part by the demand for screen adaptations of boys' love (BL) web novels and webtoons. Korean streaming platform Wavve on June 19 launched "Stand Bi Me," the country's first dating reality series centered on bisexual singles. The show's participants move into

For many students at Ilsung Women's Middle and High School, going to school is a dream they had to postpone for decades. The Seoul school, which offers middle and high school-level education to women who missed out on formal schooling, is now facing possible closure after the death of its founder, Lee Seon-jae, in May exposed a legal gap threatening its future. "We hope the government will pay closer attention to the reality faced by people like us, who fall through the cracks," Ko Yeon-hee, a 6

- Why Samsung may welcome Apple's most expensive iPhone yet (2026-06-25 03:48)

Samsung Electronics may have an unlikely reason to welcome Apple's first foldable iPhone: The more Apple charges for it, the less shocking Samsung's own prices will look. Ahead of Samsung's expected unveiling of its Galaxy Z Fold 8 series in London in late July, its mobile business is walking into a hard launch. Memory and processor costs are climbing, leaks point to higher Galaxy prices, and Apple, absent from the category for years, is expected to enter in September with what could be the most

US Secretary of State Marco Rubio met the leaders of the United Arab Emirates and Kuwait on Wednesday, vowing not to undermine their security as he sought to reassure Gulf allies sceptical of a proposed deal to end the US-Israeli war with Iran. The US-Iran accord reached last week — the first signed by American and Iranian presidents since Iran's 1979 Islamic Revolution — includes a proposed $300 billion fund and the waiver of some sanctions for Tehran. Arriving in the UAE capital Abu Dhabi la

- US-Iran deal may leave Netanyahu as biggest casualty (2026-06-25 03:36)

BEIRUT (Reuters) -- The biggest casualty of the US-Iran deal may not be Israel's Iran strategy, but the political brand Benjamin Netanyahu spent decades constructing as the Israeli leader who could uniquely bend Washington to his will on Iran, analysts, former US officials and diplomats say. Netanyahu built his political identity on an audacious assertion: that he alone could keep the US and Israel in strategic lockstep on Iran. Cultivating Republican support, he cast himself as the only Israel

- First global rules adopted for self-driving cars: UN (2026-06-25 03:34)

GENEVA (AFP) -- The first global regulations for fully autonomous vehicles were adopted Wednesday, a UN agency said, establishing uniform international safety requirements that could pave the way for larger-scale rollouts of self-driving cars. Safety concerns and the cost of developing next-level systems have long slowed progress on autonomous vehicles. As self-driving cars have begun to hit the road in a growing number of cities, the fragmented national approaches to regulation have spurred man

- Trump seeks \$88b in extra funding, mostly for Iran war (2026-06-25 03:33)

US President Donald Trump asked Congress Wednesday for nearly $88 billion in extra spending, most of it to cover the cost of the Iran war, at a moment of growing unease in both parties over the conflict and its political price. The White House request for $87.6 billion in supplemental funding includes tens of billions of dollars for the Pentagon, as well as money for US farmers, Ebola response efforts in central Africa and domestic infrastructure projects. The proposal landed a day after Congress

- [\[Wang Son-taek\] Suez moment vs. Hormuz moment](#) (2026-06-24 20:30)

The agreement to end the Iran war has triggered intense debate over its lessons. Among the many interpretations, one of the interesting approaches is a comparison with the Suez Crisis. According to this view, just as Britain was forced by American pressure to withdraw from Suez in 1956, the United States may now be entering a period of decline in which it loses its position as the hegemonic power. But does the analogy really offer the most useful insight into the Iran crisis? Probably not. The t

A North Korean soldier is under investigation after crossing the Military Demarcation Line into South Korea on Tuesday night, Seoul's military said Wednesday. The Joint Chiefs of Staff said it secured custody of the North Korean soldier along the central section of the inter-Korean border on Tuesday night. "Relevant details are under investigation by related authorities," the JCS said in a statement. The soldier is believed to have expressed a wish to defect to South Korea, according to military

- Oil extends slide on expectations of smoother crude flows via Hormuz (2026-06-24 04:29)

Oil prices fell more than 1 percent on Wednesday, extending this week's losses and trading near four-month lows, on signs that more oil tankers stranded in the Gulf are set to move out of the Strait of Hormuz. Brent crude futures fell 78 cents, or 1.0 percent, at $76.30 a barrel as of 0350 GMT. US West Texas Intermediate slipped 78 cents, or 1.1 percent, to $72.43 a barrel. Both benchmarks settled down around 1 percent on Tuesday, touching their lowest levels since early March. "Positive signa

- How did conceptual art take shape in Korea? (2026-06-24 04:26)

Conceptual art emerged in the West in the 1960s, emphasizing artist ideas or concepts over the appearance or form of an artwork. It shifted attention from the visual to the realms of language and ideas. "Language-based conceptual art began in New York, but when it arrived in different countries, it became connected to each country's political and social situation and was understood in different ways," curator Bae Myung-ji said on June 18 at the National Museum of Taeyeon is offering fans a remake of Japanese musician Tuki's mega hit "Bansanka" on June 29, her label SM Entertainment announced Wednesday. It is the first release of the "J-Pop Remake" project, which invites major Korean vocalists to reinterpret well-known Japanese songs. "Bansanka" fronted the debut studio set from singer-songwriter Tuki., which came out last year. The single was unveiled in advance, in 2024, and topped Billboard Japan's Hot 100 and Oricon's Combined Singles Ranking. It also

- US Senate joins House to halt war (2026-06-24 02:40)

The US Senate backed legislation on Tuesday directing US President Donald Trump to halt US military action against Iran, the latest rebuke of the Republican president from an increasingly restive Congress. The Senate voted 50-48 in favor of the war powers resolution, which passed the House of Representatives early this month, reflecting growing concern even among some of Trump's Republicans about the unpopular conflict that began on Feb. 28. It was the first time both chambers of Congress had

- Europe wilts under record heat, AC sales soar (2026-06-24 02:40)

Europe braced Wednesday for another day of an unprecedented heat wave that has smashed records in many countries and sent air conditioner sales zooming in a continent unused and ill-equipped to handle searing heat. The extreme weather is being driven by atmospheric and circulation patterns that keep hot air trapped in place for days, causing the mercury to slowly rise, with these factors exacerbated by global warming, experts say. My favorite tech trend so far this year has nothing to do with artificial intelligence. It's the cool girls making their own "cyberdecks," — strange, DIY and highly customizable personal computers that explicitly reject AI. They look like props from a cyberpunk movie, usually built on a Raspberry Pi base and spare parts. As one tinkerer, whose "mermaid cyberdeck" videos have drawn tens of millions of views, puts it, "What we should do with cyberdecks is gatekeep them from AI and megacorp." The c

This week, we commemorate the 76th anniversary of the Korean War, which lasted three years from 1950 to 1953 until the truce. Technically speaking, therefore, the Korean War has not ended yet. In fact, it is still ongoing invisibly, not only between the North and the South but also between the left and the right in South Korea. Perhaps the Korean War stemmed from the incompetence of the late Joseon era, which was ignorant of the radical changes sweeping across the world at that time. Not knowing

When Rose and Bruno Mars' "Apt." became a global hit last year, millions of listeners around the world found themselves singing along to a phrase they did not fully understand. To many Koreans, however, the song's central hook required no explanation. It was a chant used in a popular Korean drinking game played at university orientations, company dinners and late-night gatherings with friends. The song's success sparked an unexpected question in Sweden. If a Korean drinking-game chant could beco

A growing number of K-pop acts from the past are reuniting years after their disbandment, as an expanding market of older fans creates new demand for nostalgia-driven projects. Groups including I.O.I, Secret and SeeYa have recently returned with reunion activities, joining a trend that industry officials say is being fueled by fans who had followed the artists as teenagers and now have greater purchasing power as adults. Among the latest examples is Secret, which released the special EP “Secret

- Masked Tongyeong murder suspect still at large after 2 weeks (2026-06-23 06:42)

A masked assailant suspected of killing a woman in Tongyeong, South Gyeongsang Province, two weeks ago remains at large. South Korean police as of Tuesday had yet to identify the man who stabbed a woman in her 60s at her home in the city, some 370 kilometers south of Seoul, on the morning of June 10. Surveillance footage from the building showed the suspect entering the premises at around 2 a.m. The victim’s body was found by her husband at 6:24 a.m. Police believe the suspect broke into the hom

- Hearts2Hearts returns with summer-themed 'Lemon Tang' (2026-06-23 06:36)

Hearts2Hearts returned Monday with its second EP "Lemon Tang," marking the group's first album in eight months and its first-ever summer-themed release. The six-track EP includes the title track and "Rude!," released in February. "Lemon Tang" is a dance-pop song built around bright summer energy and lively sounds. Its title combines "lemon" with "tang," referring to a sharp, fizzy flavor. The song compares the members' chemistry to lemons, conveying the message that they shine even brighter when President Lee Jae Myung is set to host foreign ambassadors and representatives of international organizations at Cheong Wa Dae on Tuesday, serving Korean-style barbecue and chimaek, the popular pairing of fried chicken and beer. According to the presidential office in Seoul, the guest list for the dinner reception includes ambassadors from 118 resident diplomatic missions, led by Dean of the Diplomatic Corps Shafik Rachadi, Morocco's ambassador to South Korea, as well as representatives from 30

- Assembly meeting highlights lack of NEC oversight (2026-06-23 06:33)

Lack of oversight of the National Election Commission came into the spotlight Tuesday in the meeting of a special parliamentary committee looking into nationwide ballot shortages and delays for voters on Election Day early this month. The meeting centered around why the NEC decided to reduce ballot paper printing, whether its former chair's overseas trips that cost tens of millions of won each were justifiable and whether NEC contracts sealed without public procurement were questionable. Rho Tae

- Divorced men fear asset split, women fear losing freedom: survey (2026-06-23 06:29)

Divorced men considering remarriage tend to worry most about the division of assets if they divorce again, while divorced women are more concerned about losing their newfound freedom, a survey by matchmaking agencies showed Tuesday. The two agencies, Only You and Bien Aller, conducted a joint survey of 648 divorced men and women, asking them what they saw as the biggest obstacle to remarriage. Men tended to be more concerned about the potential failure of a new marriage, particularly financial i

The rift in People Power Party leadership appears to be widening, with two top officials repeatedly clashing over postelection strategy and how to assess the conservative party' s performance in the June 3 local elections. The tension between party Chief Jang Dong-hyeok and Floor Leader Jeong Jeom-sig has surfaced three times over the past week, even as Jang remains hospitalized due to exhaustion. The latest dispute was triggered by a party report released Sunday under the official name of the Pe

- Kospi suffers biggest selloff since March (2026-06-23 06:22)

The South Korean benchmark Kospi dived nearly 10 percent on Tuesday, marking the second-largest daily decline of the year. The Kospi fell 9.99 percent to close at 8,203.84. After opening at 9,083.54, down 0.34 percent from the previous session, it traded flat in early dealings before turning sharply lower around noon, eventually closing at its intraday low as losses deepened. The nearly 10 percent decline was the second-largest daily fall on the Kospi this year, after a 12.06 percent drop on Mar

- Korea's bid to bring ETF money home falls short (2026-06-23 06:21)

South Korea's attempt to lure money back home by approving domestic single-stock leveraged exchange-traded funds has shown little impact: Korean investors continue to hold large positions in competing Hong Kong-listed products. According to data released Tuesday by the Korea Securities Depository, Korean investors' holdings of Hong Kong-listed single-stock leveraged ETFs surged in May and remained elevated through June 21, even after Korea introduced competing products on May 27. At the end of A

- What Mirae Asset's SpaceX miss really says about Korea (2026-06-23 06:13)

Mirae Asset Securities, the South Korea-based brokerage that has long sought to expand its global footprint, hit a setback in its ambitions when it failed to secure SpaceX shares for local investors earlier this month for its initial public offering. The miss came as a surprise to the Korean market, given Mirae Asset's close ties with SpaceX. The market deemed Mirae Asset Securities had an upper hand in the IPO allocation, as Mirae Asset Financial Group was an early investor in the rocket compan

- List of top 5 foods that make us 'unattractive' goes viral (2026-06-23 06:05)

A Korean plastic surgeon's social media post has gone viral for ranking everyday foods that he says can make the face look "uglier," not by changing facial structure, but by contributing to puffiness, breakouts and faster skin aging. Ramyeon and salty snacks made the list. But what took the No. 1 spot? According to Dr. Choi Hyun-nam, salty foods such as instant noodles, potato chips and seasoned crackers ranked fifth, with excess sodium linked to water retention that can leave the face looking s

- LS Electric chief highlights Utah-Korea bond (2026-06-23 05:58)

LS Electric Chairman Koo Ja-kyun on Tuesday underscored the historical bond between Utah — the company's strategic base for expanding its North American power business — and Korea, calling for deeper engagement with the local community as the company accelerates its US market push. Since acquiring LS Electric Utah in Cedar City in 2022, Koo has personally overseen a major capacity expansion while strengthening the company's ties with the local community through shared history. - Korea secures softer EU steel quota cut, minister says (2026-06-23 05:51)

South Korea has made progress in talks with the European Union over steel tariff-rate quotas, Industry Minister Kim Jung-kwan said, raising hopes that Korean exporters may face a smaller cut than the bloc's planned overall reduction. In a wide-ranging briefing in Sejong on Monday, Kim also discussed corporate bonus dispute, chip-related tax revenue, Canada's submarine tender and possible new semiconductor production sites. Kim said the biggest outcome of his recent trip to Kazakhstan, Europe and

- AI breaks Korea memory's boom-bust cycle: CLSA (2026-06-23 05:50)

South Korea's memory chip industry is moving beyond its traditional boom-and-bust cycle as artificial intelligence demand pushes major customers to lock in long-term supply at high prices, according to CLSA. Memory has long been highly cyclical: profits rise when supply is tight and fall when capacity catches up. But the rapid growth of high-bandwidth memory, or HBM, and AI servers is changing that pattern, said Sanjeev Rana, head of Korea research at CLSA. "The fact that major memory customers

- North Korea's Kim doubles down on nuclear buildup (2026-06-23 05:47)

North Korean leader Kim Jong-un on Tuesday doubled down on Pyongyang's nuclear weapons buildup and confrontational stance toward Seoul. Experts believe the move is aimed at foreclosing future denuclearization talks and reframing any potential negotiations with Washington around arms control rather than disarmament. According to the Korean Central News Agency on Tuesday, the ruling Workers' Party of Korea convened the second plenary meeting of its ninth Central Committee for three days beginning

In an emergency, police can reach an apartment complex within minutes — only to lose crucial time at its locked entrance. That delay is what the National Police Agency hopes to reduce with a new digital access system for apartment buildings. The agency is developing a feature for the police 112 mobile application that uses Bluetooth technology to unlock communal apartment entrances, granting access to officers responding to emergency calls. The plan, aimed at shortening response times in violent

GUADALAJARA, Mexico (AP) -- It's been goals galore so far at the World Cup. The tournament has been one of the highest-scoring in history so far and produced nearly 25 percent more scoring than the same span of games in the previous World Cup. One reason for the increase in scoring might be the ball that FIFA is using for this tournament. FIFA says the ball has been designed with deep seams to produce "optimal in-flight stability," and players and coaches say it has been rocketing toward goalkee

Consumer sentiment rose for the second consecutive month in June on strong exports and the stock market rally, the central bank said Tuesday. The composite consumer sentiment index stood at 106.6 this month, up 0.5 points from May, according to a survey by the Bank of Korea. It followed a 6.9-point gain in May, the sharpest on-month rise in a year, rebounding from a two-month losing streak in March and April. The index also stayed over the 100-point mark for the second straight month. A reading

Three students at Seoul Science High School have published a paper on black hole thermodynamics in an international science journal, a rare achievement for high school researchers working without university or outside institutional support. The paper, titled "A Constraint-Free Formulation of Black Hole Thermodynamics from the Field Equations," was published in the International Journal of Modern Physics D. It examines the relationship between black hole thermodynamics and gravitational field equ

- [\[Vitit Muntarbhorn\] New cogs in international law](#) (2026-06-22 20:30)

Recently, a conference on international law was held by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs in Bangkok to provide space to a young generation of lawyers. It was a timely reminder that even though the international system is fragile, Thailand should engage actively with what remains of that system. There are also new cogs in the wheel of that spectrum. International law is basically the set of rules to guide the conduct between states and between states and other international actors. Traditionally,

- [\[Lim Woong\] What Korea's school crisis is really about](#) (2026-06-22 20:30)

When Netflix's new K-drama "Teach You a Lesson" started climbing global ratings charts this month, it did what good television is supposed to do: It made a country argue with itself. The show follows a fictional government unit called the Teachers' Rights Protection Bureau as it descends on bullies and corrupt adults to rescue schools from violence. Forbes hailed it as "one of the smartest, best-written and most addictive" dramas of the year. While critics have praised its emotional acting and m

- Stocks Drift Despite Drop in Oil on US-Iran Talks: Markets Wrap (2026-06-22 12:17)

US stocks are heading for a quiet open after the long weekend, with equities finding little support from lower oil prices amid signs of diplomatic headway between the US and Iran. S&P 500 futures fell 0.1%. Brent crude dropped 1.9% toward $79 a barrel as Vice President JD Vance said US negotiators made a lot of progress in their talks with Iran. Treasuries fell across the curve after Friday's cash-market holiday. The dollar edged 0.1% higher. Traders also followed the latest developments in UK p

Zambia's state-owned power utility ZESCO and South Korea's KS Eco Solutions Holdings have signed a purchase agreement for a 500-megawatt solar plant and battery storage project, as Zambia seeks to diversify its energy mix after recent electricity shortages. Zambia plans to expand its power generation capacity to about 10,000 MW by 2030, up from the current 3,500-3,900 MW, to address a power deficit of more than 1,600 MW and support economic growth. Solar energy is viewed as a key renewable energ

- EU reaffirms opposition to death penalty (2026-06-22 10:59)

The European Union on Monday urged renewed global efforts to abolish the death penalty at a conference in Seoul, as South Korea continues to maintain a decadeslong moratorium on executions. South Korea has not carried out an execution since 1997 and is considered an "abolitionist in practice" by international human rights groups, although capital punishment remains legal. The Seoul conference was held ahead of the 9th World Congress Against the Death Penalty, one of the largest international gat

- Ex-justice minister given 25-yr prison sentence for martial law role (2026-06-22 10:57)

Former Justice Minister Park Sung-jae was sentenced to 25 years in prison Monday after a district court found him guilty of playing a key role in an insurrection through his involvement in former President Yoon Suk Yeol's martial law bid. The Seoul Central District Court handed down the heavy punishment for Park, which surpassed the 20-year prison term sought by special counsel Cho Eun-suk's team. The court immediately placed Park under custody, citing concerns that he may destroy evidence. Cho'

- Why more South Koreans are becoming 'full-time children' (2026-06-22 06:43)

Job scarcity and climbing housing costs have fueled the emergence of a new family role: young adults who stay home, help run the household and, in some cases, care for aging parents. For years, achieving success in South Korea has been associated with a familiar life trajectory: graduate, find a stable job, move out, marry, start a family. For a growing number of young adults, however, that sequence is breaking down. Instead, some are embracing a new identity that has recently gained traction on

- Can South Korea move from G7 guest to member? (2026-06-21 06:14)

President Lee Jae Myung's appearance at this year's Group of Seven summit has revived a longstanding question in South Korean diplomacy: Can the country move beyond being a guest and become part of an expanded G7 framework? Lee returned from Europe on Thursday after attending the summit in Evian-les-Bains, France, as an invited leader, holding talks with major counterparts and meeting US President Donald Trump. The trip showed how far South Korea's diplomatic profile has risen, but also made cle

- 'Toy Story 5' leads Korean box office for fourth day (2026-06-21 06:08)

Disney and Pixar's "Toy Story 5" held the No. 1 spot at the Korean box office for four straight days. The animated sequel sold 335,740 tickets on Saturday, according to the box-office tally compiled by the state-run Korean Film Council. That brought its cumulative total to 585,524 since it opened Wednesday, two days ahead of its North American release. Directed by Andrew Stanton, "Toy Story 5" finds Woody, Buzz, Jessie and the rest of Bonnie's toys facing a new kind of rival in Lilypad, a smart

As more fans from overseas travel to South Korea for concerts, merchandise and other cultural experiences, police data has shown a sharp rise in fraud reports filed by foreign nationals. According to data from the National Police Agency released Sunday, the number of foreign nationals who reported fraud in Korea nearly quadrupled in a year, rising from 5,307 cases in 2023 to 19,907 last year. Some cases have involved Korean cultural content, including K-pop merchandise and concert ticket purchases

- Why Korea keeps returning to soccer every four years (2026-06-21 04:45)

Every four years, something shifts — almost overnight. People who rarely follow soccer start checking kickoff times. Office chatter turns from deadlines to defensive lines. Group chats fill with lineup predictions, referee complaints and late-night watch plans. This is the pull of the FIFA World Cup. Arguably the world's biggest single-sport spectacle, it has a way of transforming South Korea every four years. Streets grow louder, emotions run higher and a shared sense of national pride takes over

A Seoul court is set to deliver its verdict this week on former first lady Kim Keon Hee, who has been indicted over receiving luxury gifts in exchange for job appointments and business favors. The Seoul Central District Court will hold the sentencing hearing for Kim, the wife of ousted former President Yoon Suk Yeol, on charges of violating a law on the acceptance of bribes for mediation, at 2 p.m. Friday, according to judicial sources Sunday. Kim was indicted in December on charges of receiving

- Can Seoul afford free bus rides for seniors? (2026-06-21 02:27)

Seoul is considering free or subsidized bus rides for senior citizens aged 70 and older, expanding the decades-old system of free subway use for those aged 65 and above. The proposal cleared a Seoul Metropolitan Council committee on June 15 and is scheduled for a vote at the council's plenary session on Wednesday. The subsidy would cover city and neighborhood buses, but exclude express and intercity buses. But the plan has drawn opposition from those concerned about the financial burden on a cit

- South Korea claims two bronze medals in Guiyang (2026-06-21 02:26)

The South Korean national boxing team won two bronze medals at the semifinals of the Boxing World Cup, held in Guiyang, China, Saturday. Shin Jae-yong and Kim Min-seong were both defeated in their semifinal matches, finishing the tournament with bronze medals in their respective weight classes. Competing in the men's 55kg division, Shin defeated Japan's Yamaguchi Rui by a 5-0 unanimous decision in the quarterfinals, controlling the bout throughout to advance to the semifinals. The result drew at

(2026-06-21 01:42)

SOUTHAMPTON, New York (AP) -- When Rory McIlroy knocked in a 66-footer during a run of three straight birdies Saturday, he looked set for a big move at the US Open. The magic was quickly gone. And once his miserable back nine was over, McIlroy was, too. The Masters champion made five bogeys and shot 40 on the back, finishing with a 3-over 73 that severely damaged, if not entirely ended, his chances of winning. It was a stunning collapse after his birdies on Nos. 5-7 -- the first time he made thr

The line outside a toy wholesaler in Seoul's Dongdaemun Stationery and Toy Street on a recent weekend looked more like one outside a trendy cafe than a decades-old market. Shoppers crowded around bins of squishies, comparing textures and squeezing them before making their choice. Nearby, others tested clicking keycap toys and cracked the wax shells of stress balls, delighting in the crisp popping sound. Most of the customers were not children.

They were adults in their 20s and 30s. Just a few su
