Executive Summary

Cambodia's security landscape from October 27 to November 03, 2026, was characterized by persistent border tensions with Thailand, despite the one-year anniversary of a US-brokered peace accord that remains largely unimplemented. Concurrently, Cambodia continued to balance its strategic partnerships, with plans solidifying for the resumption of joint military exercises with the United States in 2027, while also deepening military-technological cooperation with China. A significant focus was placed on combating transnational cybercrime and online scams, marked by a high-profile recovery of stolen funds and ongoing investigations into alleged complicity by security firms. Domestically, preparations for the upcoming Francophonie Summit in November 2026 led to a heightened security posture in Phnom Penh, underscoring the nation's commitment to internal stability amidst complex regional dynamics.

Key Security Developments

- Persistent Border Tensions with Thailand

October 27, 2026, marked the first anniversary of the Kuala Lumpur Peace Accords, a US-brokered agreement intended to resolve the long-standing border dispute between Cambodia and Thailand. However, the accord remains largely an "empty diplomatic framework," with parts of Cambodian territory still occupied by the Thai military and no substantive negotiations held for nearly a year. Military representatives from both countries met on October 28 to discuss the December 2025 ceasefire, but the situation remains shaky, with Bangkok dismissing Cambodian demands for the return of artifacts and Cambodia condemning Thai military operations near heritage sites. Approximately 20,000 displaced Cambodian civilians remain in temporary shelters due to the ongoing conflict.

- Resumption of US-Cambodia Military Exercises

Cambodia's army announced plans to resume joint military exercises with the United States, including "Exercise Angkor Sentinel 2027" in February and the "Cooperation Afloat Readiness and Training (CARAT)" naval exercise in 2027, after a nearly decade-long suspension. This development, following improved relations in 2025 and the lifting of a US arms embargo in November 2025, aims to strengthen interoperability and disaster-response capabilities, reflecting renewed momentum in bilateral military cooperation.

• Deepening China-Cambodia Military and Technological Cooperation

Cambodia and China are intensifying defense cooperation, with a particular focus on high-tech warfare, including artificial intelligence, unmanned systems, and digital technologies. This partnership was highlighted by the "Angkor–Great Wall Forum 2026" in August, aimed at promoting scientific research, strategic analysis, and knowledge exchange to modernize the Royal Cambodian Armed Forces. While the "Golden Dragon 2026" joint military exercise was reportedly paused or recalibrated, Cambodia continues to acquire advanced military hardware, such as Chinese-assisted Type 056-class corvettes for its navy, reinforcing its defensive capabilities.

• Significant Efforts Against Cybercrime and Online Scams

On November 2, 2026, Cambodia successfully recovered $12.8 million stolen in a business email scam targeting a Singapore-based petrochemical company, within 72 hours of receiving an alert. This swift action, involving ACLEDA Bank, the National Bank of Cambodia, and the Cambodian National Police, demonstrated the Kingdom's commitment to combating cross-border financial crimes. The recovery came days after an Amnesty International report, released around October 29, 2026, alleged that politically connected security companies and serving military officers were involved in large-scale scam operations, prompting Cambodian authorities to announce investigations.

• Heightened Security for Francophonie Summit

Preparations for the 20th Francophonie Summit, scheduled to be hosted by Cambodia in November 2026, necessitated a substantial security deployment in Phnom Penh. Nearly 20,000 personnel are expected to be deployed to ensure the safety of foreign leaders and delegations, indicating a significant focus on internal security and counter-terrorism measures for the high-profile international event.

• Defense Policy and Modernization

National Defence Minister General Tea Seiha reaffirmed Cambodia's commitment to modernizing its military to strengthen national defense and protect its sovereignty, emphasizing a defensive posture. The acquisition of Chinese-built Type 056-class corvettes, with the first arriving in April 2026 and a second expected next year, significantly enhances Cambodia's maritime defense capabilities.

• Diplomatic Engagements and Diversification of Partnerships

The United States has continued efforts to expand relations with Cambodia, lifting an arms embargo in November 2025 and omitting human rights conditions from fiscal 2026 appropriations, despite ongoing concerns over democratic governance and China's influence. Cambodia also engaged in political consultations with Nicaragua from October 18-19, 2026, pledging enhanced bilateral cooperation and reaffirming commitment to global peace. India, in October 2026, called for expanding security cooperation with ASEAN, including Cambodia, beyond weapons sales and training, focusing on maritime domain awareness and industrial partnerships.

- Ongoing Mine Clearance Efforts

Cambodia remains committed to clearing both longstanding and newly identified explosive hazards, despite the challenges posed by the ongoing border conflict with Thailand. Senior Minister Ly Thuch warned that clearing new contamination could take up to two decades, highlighting the long-term security implications of the border dispute.

- Drone Technology Exploration

Cambodia is exploring drone partnerships with Turkey and Ukraine, indicating an interest in advanced unmanned systems for defense. This comes amidst reports of Ukraine's military intelligence tracking Russian drone warfare experts in Phnom Penh, suggesting a complex interplay of international interests in drone technology within the region.

Geopolitical Impact and Regional Dynamics

Cambodia's security developments during this period underscore its delicate balancing act within a complex regional and international environment, particularly between the United States and China. The planned resumption of joint military exercises with the US, including "Angkor Sentinel" and "CARAT" in 2027, signals a strategic recalibration aimed at diversifying defense partnerships and enhancing interoperability with Western allies after a nearly decade-long hiatus. This move, coupled with the US lifting its arms embargo and easing aid conditions, reflects Washington's effort to counter China's growing influence in Southeast Asia and strengthen its engagement with Phnom Penh, despite persistent concerns over human rights and democratic governance.

Concurrently, Cambodia continues to deepen its "ironclad friendship" with China, particularly in military modernization and high-tech warfare. The focus on artificial intelligence, unmanned systems, and digital technologies, as discussed at the "Angkor–Great Wall Forum 2026," highlights China's role in enhancing the Royal Cambodian Armed Forces' capabilities. While the "Golden Dragon" exercises with China may have seen a pause or recalibration in 2026, the long-term trend indicates a robust strategic partnership, with Chinese assistance in naval acquisitions like the Type 056-class corvettes. This dual engagement allows Cambodia to maintain strategic flexibility but also places it at the intersection of major power competition, with potential implications for regional stability.

The persistent border dispute with Thailand, marked by the non-implementation of the Kuala Lumpur Peace Accords and ongoing military presence, remains a significant point of tension within ASEAN. Cambodia's diplomatic efforts to internationalize the issue, coupled with its initiation of compulsory conciliation proceedings under UNCLOS for maritime claims, demonstrate its assertive approach to resolving disputes. The involvement of ASEAN Observer Teams is crucial in maintaining a fragile ceasefire, but the lack of significant breakthroughs continues to affect regional stability and humanitarian concerns for displaced populations. The upcoming Francophonie Summit in Phnom Penh also places Cambodia in a prominent diplomatic role, requiring substantial security efforts to ensure the safety of international delegations.

Military and Defense Analysis

Cambodia's military and defense posture during this period reflects a strategic emphasis on modernization and defensive capabilities, primarily influenced by its complex geopolitical environment and ongoing border disputes. The Royal Cambodian Armed Forces (RCAF) are undergoing a modernization program, notably in its naval capabilities, with the acquisition of Chinese-assisted Type 056-class corvettes. The first of these 1,300-tonne vessels, equipped with advanced weaponry including anti-ship and air-defense missile systems, arrived in April 2026, significantly enhancing maritime defense in the Gulf of Thailand. This acquisition aligns with National Defence Minister General Tea Seiha's stated policy of focusing on effective defensive systems to protect territorial integrity rather than offensive capabilities.

The planned resumption of joint military exercises with the United States, including "Angkor Sentinel 2027" and the "CARAT" naval exercise, marks a significant shift in Cambodia's defense strategy. These exercises, suspended for nearly a decade, aim to strengthen interoperability, disaster-response capabilities, and foster closer ties with the US military. This re-engagement with the US, alongside continued deep cooperation with China, allows Cambodia to diversify its training and equipment sources, potentially enhancing its overall military professionalism and strategic options. However, the reported pause or recalibration of the "Golden Dragon 2026" exercises with China suggests a careful balancing act to avoid appearing overly aligned with any single major power.

Defense spending trends, while not explicitly detailed for this specific week, are implicitly geared towards these modernization efforts and maintaining a robust border presence, particularly along the contentious Thai border. The ongoing need for mine clearance, with new contamination identified, also represents a significant long-term investment in defense and security resources. The exploration of drone partnerships with Turkey and Ukraine further indicates a move towards integrating advanced, cost-effective technologies into its defense capabilities, reflecting a broader trend in modern warfare.

Outlook and Forecast

Short-term trends (1-3 months):

In the immediate future, Cambodia will maintain a heightened security posture, particularly in Phnom Penh, as it hosts the Francophonie Summit in November 2026. This event will likely see continued robust deployments of security personnel and increased vigilance against potential threats. Border tensions with Thailand are expected to persist, with military representatives continuing to engage in discussions regarding the December 2025 ceasefire, though significant breakthroughs in demarcation or maritime disputes are unlikely. Diplomatic efforts, including calls for the return of displaced persons and implementation of border agreements, will likely continue. The fight against cybercrime and online scams will remain a priority, with authorities continuing investigations into alleged complicity by security firms and focusing on international cooperation to dismantle scam operations.

Critical flashpoints and risk areas:

The primary flashpoint remains the Cambodia-Thailand border, particularly in areas like Preah Vihear and Oddar Meanchey provinces, where military presence and stalled negotiations could lead to renewed skirmishes. The unresolved maritime claims in the Gulf of Thailand also pose a risk, with Cambodia initiating compulsory conciliation proceedings under UNCLOS. Another critical risk area is the potential for cyberattacks and sophisticated online scams, which continue to evolve, requiring constant vigilance and international cooperation to protect Cambodia's financial sector and citizens. The upcoming Francophonie Summit, while a diplomatic opportunity, also presents a potential target for various threat actors, necessitating stringent counter-terrorism and security measures.

Indicators to monitor:

Key indicators to monitor include the progress of negotiations between Cambodia and Thailand on border demarcation and maritime claims, as any escalation or de-escalation will significantly impact regional stability. The implementation and scope of the planned "Angkor Sentinel 2027" and "CARAT" exercises with the US, as well as any future "Golden Dragon" exercises with China, will provide insights into Cambodia's evolving defense partnerships. Developments in the investigations into security firms and military personnel allegedly involved in scam operations will indicate the government's commitment to tackling corruption and transnational crime. Furthermore, the overall security situation during and immediately after the Francophonie Summit will be a crucial indicator of Cambodia's internal security capabilities.

Strategic recommendations:

Cambodia should continue to pursue diplomatic avenues for resolving border disputes with Thailand, leveraging ASEAN mechanisms and international legal frameworks to de-escalate tensions and ensure the safe return of displaced populations. Strengthening cybersecurity infrastructure and enhancing international cooperation against cybercrime, particularly with regional partners and organizations like ASEAN, is paramount to safeguard its digital economy and combat human trafficking associated with scam operations. While balancing relations with major powers, Cambodia should prioritize defense modernization programs that enhance its sovereign defensive capabilities and interoperability with a diverse range of partners, ensuring it is not overly reliant on any single external actor. Continued investment in mine clearance efforts is essential for long-term human security and economic development in affected border regions.
