Executive Summary

Indonesia experienced a dynamic security landscape from June 24 to July 01, 2026, marked by a significant cyberattack on its National Data Center (PDN) that disrupted critical government services, including immigration, for several days. Concurrently, Indonesia actively participated in multilateral military exercises, with 35 Marine Corps personnel joining RIMPAC 2026 in Hawaii to strengthen international military ties. Domestically, the government faced scrutiny and scaled back a military-style training program for civilian cooperative managers after five participant deaths, prompting calls for review from human rights bodies. Diplomatically, Indonesia continued its "free and active" foreign policy, engaging with Russia on legal cooperation while navigating questions about its strategic priorities amidst a highly active diplomatic agenda. These developments highlight Indonesia's ongoing efforts to modernize its defense capabilities, enhance cybersecurity, and assert its regional and international standing, albeit with internal challenges.

Key Security Developments

- Military Activities and Exercises

Indonesia deployed 35 personnel from its Marine Corps to Hawaii, United States, to participate in the 30th Rim of the Pacific (RIMPAC) multilateral exercise, with their arrival on June 24 to attend the opening ceremony. This biennial drill, led by the US, aims to strengthen Indonesia's military ties with partner countries and enhance personnel capacity and professional knowledge, demonstrating Indonesia's commitment to regional security cooperation.

- Defense Policy and Strategic Shifts

The Indonesian Defence Ministry scaled back the military component of a training program for prospective managers of President Prabowo Subianto's village cooperative initiative following the deaths of five participants between June 17 and June 26. The 45-day program, which began on June 14, will now focus on character building, discipline, leadership, and partnerships, removing technical military material and tactics, in response to an internal review and calls from Indonesia's National Human Rights Commission.

- Diplomatic Relations

On June 24, Indonesia and Russia signed a new agreement in Saint Petersburg on the exchange of legal information, extending a Mutual Legal Assistance (MLA) treaty formalized six years prior. This cooperation covers information sharing, data access, joint research, and expert exchanges in the legal field, underscoring Indonesia's commitment to international judicial collaboration. Separately, an analysis on June 26 highlighted that Indonesia's diplomacy under President Prabowo Subianto is increasingly active but lacks a clear strategic direction, with the President's absence from the Russia-ASEAN Summit raising questions about the hierarchy of foreign policy priorities.

- Security Incidents and Threats

Indonesia's Temporary National Data Center (PDN) was hit by a ransomware cyberattack, identified as Brain Cipher, a variant of LockBit 3.0, which began on June 20 and crippled numerous critical government services. Services affected included immigration inspection at five checkpoints, including Soekarno Hatta International Airport, licensing services at the Coordinating Ministry for Maritime Affairs and Investment, and digital services at the National Public Procurement Agency. By June 25, the government regained access to its databases and slowly resumed services, refusing to pay the USD 8 million ransom demanded by the attackers.

- Defense Acquisitions and Arms Deals

A contract is anticipated to be signed in early July between Leonardo and PT E-Systems Solutions, on behalf of the Indonesian Ministry of Defence, for the supply of 12 M-346F light fighter jets. These aircraft are slated for delivery by early 2028 and will replace the surviving BAE Systems Hawk Mk 109/209s, marking a significant step in Indonesia's air force modernization program.

- Cybersecurity

The ransomware attack on the National Data Center exposed significant vulnerabilities in Indonesia's critical digital infrastructure, disrupting at least 210 central and local government services. Communications and Information Minister Budi Arie Setiadi stated that public data remains safe, and the government is taking steps to fix impacted services, but the incident has prompted calls for a stronger national cybersecurity strategy. On July 1, President Prabowo Subianto urged the Indonesian National Police (Polri) to master artificial intelligence (AI) technology to address modern crime challenges, emphasizing continuous knowledge development and superior capabilities for officers.

- Maritime and Border Security

Indonesia and Malaysia are prioritizing real-time intelligence sharing and coordinated regulation to secure the Malacca Strait, one of the world's most vital maritime choke points. This evolving framework aims for a more integrated model of control to address increasingly complex challenges, including shadow fleets engaged in illicit trade and underwater surveillance, especially after a 19-year peak in maritime security incidents in 2025.

- Intelligence Activities

On July 1, Finnish authorities ordered the detention in absentia of an Indonesian man suspected of leaking classified security information connected to Finland's nuclear infrastructure. The case reportedly stems from events in August 2021 and highlights potential international intelligence concerns involving Indonesian citizens.

- Defense Industry Developments

Indonesia continues to advance the development of domestically produced defense technologies, with the Ministry of Defence having introduced Coastal Surveillance Radar systems designed to improve monitoring and surveillance of Indonesia's maritime areas. This initiative supports the operational needs of the Indonesian Navy (TNI AL) and highlights growing domestic innovation and collaboration between defense research institutions and industry.

Geopolitical Impact and Regional Dynamics

Indonesia's security developments during this period underscore its complex and increasingly active role in regional and global geopolitics. The participation in RIMPAC 2026 alongside the United States and other partners demonstrates Indonesia's commitment to multilateral security cooperation and its strategy of strengthening military ties beyond bilateral engagements. This aligns with the broader Major Defense Cooperation Partnership (MDCP) established with the US in April 2026, which aims to co-develop advanced defense technologies and improve operational readiness, thereby deepening Indonesia's integration into the Indo-Pacific security architecture. While this partnership enhances regional deterrence, Indonesia's Defense Minister clarified that no commitment was made regarding blanket US military aircraft access to Indonesian airspace, upholding Indonesia's "free and active" foreign policy and national interests.

Simultaneously, Indonesia's diplomatic engagement with Russia, exemplified by the legal information exchange agreement on June 24, reflects its strategy of maintaining diverse international relationships and avoiding alignment with any single bloc. However, this active diplomacy, as noted by analysts, sometimes lacks a clear strategic narrative or hierarchy of priorities, as highlighted by President Prabowo's absence from the Russia-ASEAN Summit. This balancing act is crucial as Indonesia navigates competition between major powers like the US and China, particularly in sensitive areas such as the South China Sea.

In the South China Sea, Indonesia continues to advocate for the completion of a Code of Conduct (CoC) this year to manage maritime disputes and promote peace and cooperation. Despite a past joint statement with China that appeared to acknowledge overlapping claims, Indonesia's foreign ministry has consistently reaffirmed its position that it is not a party to the dispute and does not recognize China's nine-dash line. This firm stance, coupled with enhanced maritime security cooperation with neighbors like Malaysia in the Malacca Strait, demonstrates Indonesia's efforts to safeguard its sovereign rights and contribute to regional stability amidst persistent maritime challenges. The ongoing cyberattack on the National Data Center, while an internal security incident, also has geopolitical implications, potentially raising concerns among international partners about the resilience of Indonesia's digital infrastructure and its ability to protect shared data or facilitate secure communications.

Military and Defense Analysis

Indonesia's military and defense posture during this period reflects a clear trajectory towards modernization and enhanced capabilities, underpinned by increased defense spending. The government has earmarked Rp 337 trillion (approximately $19 billion) for defense purposes in 2026, with a significant portion, Rp 83 trillion (almost $4.7 billion), allocated specifically for military upgrades. This substantial investment aims to replace the country's aging fleet and bolster its defense capabilities across air, land, and sea.

Key modernization programs are actively underway. The anticipated signing of a contract in early July for 12 Leonardo M-346F light fighter jets will enhance the Indonesian Air Force's advanced jet training and light combat capabilities. This builds on earlier acquisitions, such as the 42 Dassault Rafale fighter jets from France, with the first six units already delivered by May 2026. Furthermore, Indonesia is progressing with plans to acquire 48 Turkish KAAAN fifth-generation fighter jets, with commercial contracts expected to be signed in late July 2026, which also includes the establishment of local aerospace infrastructure. These acquisitions signify a strategic diversification of defense suppliers and a commitment to acquiring advanced platforms.

The emphasis on maritime defense remains a critical component of Indonesia's strategy, given its status as the world's largest archipelagic nation. The 2026 defense budget includes increased allocations for the maintenance of warships, naval vessels, and combat vehicles, reflecting a commitment to strengthening maritime security and operational readiness in its vast waters. Domestically, the development of Coastal Surveillance Radar systems by the Ministry of Defence underscores efforts to enhance maritime domain awareness through local innovation. While these modernization efforts are ambitious, challenges persist, including budget limitations relative to Indonesia's vast territory, the growing threat of hybrid and cyber warfare, suboptimal coordination between various agencies, and a continued dependence on imported defense equipment.

Outlook and Forecast

Short-term trends (1-3 months): In the immediate future, Indonesia will likely intensify its efforts to bolster cybersecurity defenses following the significant ransomware attack on its National Data Center. This will involve urgent reviews of existing protocols, investment in new technologies, and potentially increased collaboration with international partners on cyber threat intelligence. The contract signing for the M-346F light fighter jets in early July will mark a concrete step in military modernization, with further details on delivery schedules and potential follow-on orders expected. Diplomatic activity will continue to be high, with Indonesia maintaining its "free and active" foreign policy, engaging with various global powers, and likely seeking to clarify its strategic priorities to present a more coherent international stance. The ongoing RIMPAC 2026 participation will conclude, providing valuable experience and strengthening interoperability with allied navies.

Critical flashpoints and risk areas: The South China Sea remains a persistent flashpoint, with Indonesia's continued push for a Code of Conduct (CoC) potentially facing diplomatic hurdles and ongoing challenges from China's assertive maritime claims. The recent cyberattack underscores the vulnerability of critical national infrastructure to sophisticated ransomware, posing a significant risk to public services and national data integrity. Internal security concerns, particularly regarding the appropriate role of the military in civilian programs, as highlighted by the scaled-back training initiative, will require careful management to prevent further incidents and maintain public trust. The potential for intelligence leaks, as seen with the Finnish case involving an Indonesian national, indicates a need for enhanced counter-intelligence measures.

Indicators to monitor: Key indicators to monitor include the progress and effectiveness of cybersecurity reforms implemented post-ransomware attack, including any new legislation or agency mandates. The pace and scope of defense acquisitions and domestic defense industry development will reveal the success of Indonesia's military modernization drive. Developments in the South China Sea CoC negotiations and Indonesia's responses to any maritime incursions will be crucial for regional stability. Furthermore, the evolution of Indonesia's diplomatic narrative under President Prabowo, particularly regarding its engagement with major powers, will indicate its long-term strategic direction.

Strategic recommendations: Indonesia should prioritize a comprehensive overhaul of its national cybersecurity architecture, including mandatory data backup protocols, robust incident response plans, and increased investment in human capital and advanced threat detection systems. Diplomatically, Jakarta should articulate a clearer hierarchy of foreign policy priorities to ensure its active engagement translates into tangible strategic gains and avoids perceptions of ambiguity. Strengthening regional maritime security cooperation in critical waterways like the Malacca Strait and the South China Sea, through intelligence sharing and coordinated patrols, is essential to counter illicit activities and assert sovereign rights. Internally, the government must ensure that any military involvement in civilian programs adheres strictly to human rights principles and civilian oversight, preventing mission creep and safeguarding democratic norms.
